OUR "American Duchesses" In Dismay

How an American Woman of No Title or Lineage Has Conceived a Brilliant Scheme to Jump Over Their Heads and Outrank Them All in Intimate Relations With British Royalty!

Prince Francis of Teck

Madame Von Andre

London, Jan. 30.

MRS. VON ANDRE has played a trump! It has remained for an American woman to figure out a brilliant scheme which at one bound will jump her over the heads of not only our American duchesses but even the titled women of England of the very oldest lineage.

Mrs. Von Andre is an American, the sister of Senator Depew's wife. She was Miss Palmer of New York, a wealthy heiress, until she met Von Andre, who is a German of large wealth but of neither title nor family. The Von Andres have lived in London and Paris for many years with eager yearnings "to be somebody."

Mrs. Von Andre has watched with much interest the social success of the Duchess of Marlborough and the Duchess of Roxburghe, and even the triumphs of little Miss Zimmermann, who married the Duke of Manchester. And trailing along behind these young American girls who married titles were their sisters and mothers and aunts, basking more or less in the coveted sunshine of royal favor.

But Mrs. Von Andre was making no social progress. She had money and did her best to make an entrance into the charmed circle of royalty. She had not, like Consuelo Vanderbilt and May Goelet, married into the world of titles—Mr. Von Andre has nothing but money. And, alas, they had no daughter to marry off to a Duke and thus creep close to the royal presence behind the skirts of a Duchess relation.

And so it was that the more Mrs. Von Andre thought it over the more hopelessly impossible it seemed to ever succeed in the great dream of her life. No title of her own, no children to marry a title, no relatives within the precious social circle—how, indeed, was she to get it?

But suddenly a brilliant and ingenious plan dawned on Mrs. Von Andre. It cost a heap of money, but Mr. Von Andre was very indulgent. Mr. Von Andre listened and approved.

Now, the King of England is, of course, Edward VII. He is an old man of not very robust health. When King Edward dies his son, the present Prince of Wales, will be King. The Prince of Wales married the Princess of Teck, and she has a brother, Prince Francis of Teck.

Mrs. Von Andre began looking into the future. Of course King Edward can't live forever—may die any moment. Maybe the Prince of Wales will be King before the year is out. Then the Queen of England will be Prince Francis's own sister. What tremendous influence, intimacy and prestige this brother of the new Queen will have! If Mrs. Von Andre only had a daughter to marry off to him! But no! Better yet, why not adopt Prince Francis; make him heir to the Van Andre millions?—for Prince Francis, though brother to the next Queen of England, is pitifully poor.

The more the idea was considered the more tremendous the possibilities of the thing began to appear. Just think of it—your adopted son a brother of the Queen! Think of having a son a member of the royal family; always able to drop in and ask favors at the palace, always a welcome guest at the royal table! What limit could there be to the social triumphs and successes for the adopted mother!

While the technical form of adoption has not been completed, yet Prince Francis is already under Mrs. Von Andre's wing as her son. The latest news received from Paris, where Mr. and Mrs. Von Andre and the Prince are now wintering, said:

"The generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Von Andre to their adopted son, Prince Francis of Teck, knows no bounds. For the first time in his life the Prince has everything he wants—except a racing stable. He has solemnly promised Madam Von Andre he will gamble no more on the turf. He got into serious financial trouble a few years ago. The Von Andres have given the Prince a handsome bachelor home in the Etoile quarter of Paris. He will remain with them until it is ready. He has bought some handsome Christmas presents for his nephew, England's future King."

Now, as to his Serene Highness, Prince Francis is thirty-six years old. He is bald and has a face that indicates generous indulgence in rich food and potent liquors. He is about six feet high, broad shouldered, and has a fine figure but or a tendency to develop a corporation, which probably worries his adopted mother.

His Serene Highness belongs to a family that has long suffered severely for want of money, but in spite of that has managed to worry along at the top of society. His grandfather was Prince Alexander of Wurtemberg, son of the King of Wurtemberg. This prince married a famous beauty who was not of royal birth, and he gave up his royal rank and privileges in order to become a first class husband. In exchange he was made Duke of Teck and received a very small estate. At the same time he became only a "Serene Highness" instead of a "Royal Highness." His oldest son, who became Duke of Teck in his turn, came to England and married the Princess Mary of Cambridge. They managed to live on the modest allowance given her as an English princess, but they were so hard up that a few months after her death the Duke had to sell their furniture and other personal belongings to pay his debts.

When the Duke died he left a buxom daughter and three strapping sons, with practically nohint to live on. The daughter, Princess May, did superlatively well, for she married the Prince of Wales, heir to the throne of England, as already stated. The Princess is not exactly a beauty, but she is a woman of splendid physique, and she has eight fine children, which secures her a high place in the public esteem. Her oldest brother, the Duke of Teck, also did well, for he married the daughter of the late Duke of Westminster, the richest nobleman in England. The youngest brother, Prince Alexander of Teck, married the Princess Alice of Albany, a niece of King Edward.

This left poor Prince Francis alone unprovided for. He has served in the army in the First Dragoons, and was in the Boer war, but he did not care to struggle through life on the pay of an officer, and he gave up the service after the war. It has been several times reported that he was paying attentions to an American heiress, and he has denied the fact. This is a subject of which you shall probably hear more, for the Prince is going to America, and one of your heiresses may be unable to resist him.

Quite recently he was planning to join a London Stock Exchange firm, but when the King heard of it he put his foot down severely on the project. He did not wish to have he Prince use his royal connections as a means for getting business or for rigging the market.

This left the Prince in a predicament, and then just in the nick of time the Von Andres came to his assistance. Mr. Von Andre is a financier of German extraction, who was associated with the group of millionaires who made their fortunes out of gold and diamond mines in

The Diverting Comedy of the "Hotel Petticoat"

Showing How Four Years of Petticoat Rule in a Hotel for Petticoats Only Inspired Even Its Petticoat Stockholders to Grant a Long Lease to a Male Person of Much Experience Regarding Petticoats in Ordinary Hotels.

BY CURTIS DUNHAM.

SCENE—An ante-room in the Hotel Martha Washington, New York, otherwise known as the "Hotel Petticoat." Beyond, behind closed doors, the Directors and Stockholders of this Adamless Eden are holding their annual meeting. It is evidently a lively session, for when the door opens now and then to admit a belated stockholder, or to give exit to a flushed and perturbed employe, fragments of the discussion, in high-pitched voices, are wafted into the ante-room, such as:

"Five years and no dividends!"—

"Unaccountable impression that this is a charitable institution"—

"No reflection on the management!"—

"Practice of inmates to go outside for their meals"—

"Find fault with the menu!"—

"More than half the supplies consumed by the servants—well fed!"—

All of which falls on eager ears in the ante-room, particularly those of a Suspicious Visitor, who sits unobtrusively in a corner of the room, a target for doubtful glances of a score of fair "inmates" who are buzzing about, evidently consumed with anxious curiosity about what is going on in the Directors' room.

Prim Inmate (in a group composed of a Pretty Inmate, an Intellectual Inmate, a Sad Inmate and a Cheerful Inmate)—Whatever they do, there must be no relaxation of the rules—

Pretty Inmate—That's the trouble; there are too many rules. Why, when my cousin Dick called I had to see him in the parlor. He wasn't allowed to go above the second floor. My own cousin, too. The idea!

(Enter a Belated Stockholder pursued by an Agitated Inmate, who plucks at her sleeve and talks earnestly.)

Agitated Inmate—The half of it has never been told!

Belated Stockholder (glancing at Suspicious Visitor)—Sa-h! Sa-h! Too much has been told—that's the trouble.

(Exit Belated Stockholder to Directors' room.)

Agitated Inmate (rushing up to Suspicious Visitor)—The half of it has never been told!

Prim Inmate (dragging Agitated Inmate away and in the door of the antechamber)—There, there! Don't worry. It will all come out right. I shall see to that!

(Exit Agitated Inmate.)

Intellectual Inmate—Unless they change the Library Committee I shall leave. Fancy their throwing out "The House of Mirth"—

Prim Inmate—That's not a decorous book; I stand with the Library Committee.

Intellectual Inmate (blandly)—Did they overlook the poems of Robert Burns?

Sad Inmate—There shouldn't be any trouble about finances. I had to pay ten cents for one piece of toast this morning.

Cheerful Inmate—Nobody can blame Manager Caldwell. So many of the inmates were making their meals on bread and butter and a glass of water. Goodness me! Poor Mr. Caldwell had to do something.

Pretty Inmate—Why doesn't he make the dining-room more attractive? The head waitress is so fat she can hardly move.

Prim Inmate—She's improving. She told me yesterday that she'd lost fifty pounds—

Intellectual Inmate—That's two hundred and fifty dollars in our money. How did it happen?

(Door of the Directors' Room opens. A flustered bookkeeper emerges and takes to his heels, while scraps of lively debate seem to follow him, like these:)

"No longer an experiment"—

"Demand for rooms most of the year far exceeds the supply"—

"Long needed refuge for women starving in the city unprovided"—

"Management must not be transacted by demands of stockholders who do not understand the business"—

"Mr. Edgar offer of $51,000 a year on a ten years' lease assures us $10,000 income"—

"Splendid example—foresee chain of Martha Washington hotels in every large city of the country"—

"Retain Mr. Caldwell as manager—magnificent results, considering inmates are all women and difficult to please"—

(Door closes amid a storm of protests provoked by the last remark.)

Agitated Inmate (who has entered unobserved, to the Suspicious Visitor)—The half of it has never been told!

Suspicious Visitor (eagerly)—What's the other half?

Prim Inmate (taking Agitated Inmate firmly by the hand and leading her to a seat at the farther side of the room)—Sit here, dear; there's a draught over there.

Cheerful Inmate—Well, things will be different hereafter. The hotel will be leased to a man who knows the business, and we'll be treated just as well as though we were men"—

Prim Inmate—No bar! If they put in a bar or sell cigarettes I shall leave and take all my friends with me!

Pretty Inmate—Thank heaven! With expert management on a lease we can at least have wine jelly on holidays—

Sad Inmate—And a more diversified menu. More than once I've been made ill because I saw nothing really appetizing except lobster salad and ice cream.

Cheerful Inmate—At last there's a chance that we'll have a good, old-fashioned colored cook. If the new lessee hires a colored cook who understands bacon and corn bread I'll agree to stay.

Pretty Inmate—With an expert hotel man in absolute charge there'll be no more bosoms about having to see one's own frat comb in the parlor. The idea!

I shall write cousin Dick at once.

Intellectual Inmate—And that foolish rule about everybody being in at 10 o'clock certainly will be abolished—

Prim Inmate—Without some restraint—

Pretty Inmate—Oh, rubbish!

Sad Inmate—At any rate, an experienced lessee would never think of letting the servants eat $50,000 worth while all of us inmates put together get only $52,000 worth in a year.

Prim Inmate—Under the new arrangement one will certainly expect the discharge of servants who refuse to clean the windows except on washday days.

Pretty Inmate—No real hotel man would declare that wine jellies are intoxicating.

Sad Inmate (gloomily)—It may be well enough in some respects to have a real hotel man in charge, but you just remember that I said, you'll have to tip the waitresses!

(General and loud cries of "No, no! Never!" during which the Agitated Inmate slips across the room and whispers in the ear of the suspicious Visitor.)

Agitated Inmate—The half of it has never been told!

(Suspicious Visitor tries to smuggle Agitated Inmate out into the hall for a private interview, but is headed off by Prim Inmate. A bell boy emerges from the Directors' Room; the Suspicious Visitor detains him just outside the ante-room.)

Suspicious Visitor—How do you like your job?

Bell Boy—It's a regular jogger.

Suspicious Visitor—Did you ever have a better one?

Bell Boy (proudly)—Cheese it! Wasn't I at the Waldorf-Astoria for six months?

Suspicious Visitor—What's the difference?

Bell Boy (with sarcasm)—Not much difference. Only empty pockets and nervous prostration.

Suspicious Visitor—Aren't these ladies liberal with you?

Bell Boy—They're liberal with calls. They're liberal with advice, and complaints to the manager.

Suspicious Visitor—What are the directors doing in there? What is going to be the future of the Hotel Martha Washington?

Bell Boy—You take my tip, mister; the Hotel Martha Washington is full of curl papers and hot air; it's going to swell up and bust.

(Exit Bell Boy; Suspicious Visitor reenters, to be met at the door of the ante-room by Agitated Inmate, who puts her hand anxiously on his arm.)

Agitated Inmate—Oh, sir, the half of it has never been told!

(Unfortunately the Agitated Inmate is again suppressed by the Prim Inmate, just as the door of the Directors' Room opens to let out Manager Caldwell, and snatches of an oration that sound like this:)

"Proved its value in a civilized country. Look at the safety and emasculation the Martha Washington Hotel idea offers to all sorts of unprotected females—spinsters from the country whose relatives have failed to meet them at the station—young ladies from other cities arriving alone to get their voices cultivated—our female medical, legal, art, literary students—all modern improvements with the protection and refining influences of home. Look—"

(As the door closes the ante-room inmates crowd around Manager Caldwell with effusive assurances of their distinguished consideration—and want to know just what is going on. Manager Caldwell refers them to the Directors and exit, hastily.)

Pretty Inmate—I should have liked to ask him if that rule about Cousin Dick—"

Sad Inmate—I've written him a note asking him if I can have my breakfast served in my room without extra charge, but he seems to avoid me.

Intellectual Inmate—All in vain. I've told him just how I wanted my pictures hung differently—"

Cheerful Inmate—Twice I've told him none of the bellboys was strong enough to move my trunk from the alcove into the closet, but he doesn't seem to take the hint—"

Prim Inmate—I shall object to the proposed new rule that inmates who have alcove bedrooms may receive gentlemen callers. While I remain here no gentleman shall be admitted above the second floor.

Cheerful Inmate—Why, there was a man on the roof the other day, looking through a hole he had chopped with an axe!

Prim Inmate—If that is true I shall leave! Did they catch the beast?

Cheerful Inmate—He came down when the fire was out.

(Fifteen seconds of thoughtful silence.)

Pretty Inmate—And I shall demand my own latch-key.

(The door suddenly opens and Directors and Stockholders stream into the ante-room, most of them with a satisfied look on their faces. They are met by the Agitated Inmate, whose anxiety is painful to behold.)

Agitated Inmate—Oh, you have not finished? You haven't decided anything? Remember, the half of it has never been told!

Important Director—Too much has been told already! Yes, we have finished. Are there any reporters present?

(Suspicious Visitor meekly presents himself.)

A Corner of the Tea Room at the Martha Washington.

Chorus of Inmates—Just as I thought!

(When Suspicious Visitor has given his pedigree, his age, the place of his birth, his domestic situation—married or single, and the number and ages of his children, if any—the name of his employer and the amount of his salary, with a brief account of his personal habits, on his honor as a gentleman, he is permitted to make careful note of the fact that the Directors and Stockholders of the Hotel Martha Washington have decided to lease their property for a period of ten years to Mr. Arthur W. Edgar, proprietor of the Westminster Hotel, New York, at an annual rental of $51,000, which will leave the proprietors of the Martha Washington a surplus of $10,000 a year—which they contemplate investing in other hotels for women only.)

Chorus of Inmates—And see that you get it down right, Mr. Reporter!

(Exeunt Omnes.)

CURTAIN.

Our American Duchesses in Dismay.

South Africa, and who were sometimes known in England as "the Park Lane gang," because so many of them had houses in the most delightful street in London.

The Von Andres have been very conspicuous at all sorts of fashionable gatherings and resorts, and they have done their utmost to fight their way to the front rank, but they have not hitherto enjoyed the sort of position that belongs to the members of the ancient aristocracy. Nobody seems to be quite sure where Mr. Von Andre comes from.

In the course of their social adventures they met Prince Francis and found him fascinating. He enjoyed their society and their good cheer, and in response to their hearty invitations he visited them so frequently that he became quite a member of the household. Then it was that Mrs. von Andre decided that she would like to have him with her altogether as her little boy, with an eye to his future usefulness. The comforting fact about the arrangement to the Prince was that he was made heir to the Von Andres' fortune.

Consider, again, how ingenious is this decree of Mrs. von Andre from the social point of view. It makes her the mother of the future Queen of England's brother, and doubtless she will feel generously disposed to extend the relationship to the Queen also. King Edward is now sixty-five years old, and it is practically, of course, inevitable that before many years his son will occupy the throne. Then Mrs. von Andre will be a power behind the throne. The King will surely allow his wife's brother to run in and out of the palace whenever he pleases, and it would be unkind not to allow him to bring his mother with him. We can imagine Mrs. von Andre saying:

"I feel just like a mother to the dear Queen."

In this way Mrs. von Andre will get right into the sacred royal circle. Other American women have expended untold money and labor to become duchesses or to marry their daughters to dukes. In spite of her disadvantages, Mrs. von Andre has done much better socially than any of those who have captured dukes.

When King George V. holds his courts and British lords and ladies and American peeresses come to kiss the hand Mrs. von Andre will stand in the royal circle just beside the throne and look down with kindly superiority upon those who do not move in the same world she does. When the King dines en famille, without state officers or distinguished guests, the Court Circular will mention that he dined with the Queen, one or two of the Princes and Princesses and Mrs. von Andre. In fact, one who is familiar with the circumstances can look forward to a vast number of interesting episodes of this character.

That lucky young man, Prince Francis of Teck, is now the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Von Andre, at the Villa Isola Bella, in Cannes. The Von Andres have come to be called "the Prince' god-parents."

Their patronage of the English Prince appears to be a sort of mania with them. Besides the large income they provide him, they are constantly heaping gifts on him. Many of these the Prince refuses with equal courtesy and gratitude.

It is likely, however, that his generous patrons will set up the Prince in London in one of the luxurious flats now being finished on the site of the house of his dead grand-uncle, the Duke of Cambridge, at the corner of Park lane and Piccadilly.

More entertainments for royalty are given at the Villa Isola Bella than at any other residence in Cannes. During the week the Von Andres gave an elaborate dinner in honor of the hereditary Prince and Princess of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, who motored over from here. Among the guests was Cornelia (the Dowager), Duchess of Manchester, who is visiting the Von Andres; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and her daughter, and Princess Gabia.

Too Much Even for Gay Paris.

At Least the Theatregoers Revolt at a Disgraceful Play, Driving the Actors Off the Stage---And a Wave of Moral Reform and Decency Sweeps Over the Wicked French Capital.

WOULD you believe it? Paris has a conscience! "Gay Paris," that beautiful, wicked capital of the world where "everything goes," has been shocked.

What could have been the terrible, the unspeakable spectacle which Paris gagged at, could not swallow, ejected with execrations and rotten eggs—Paris, where there is no Anthony Comstock to act as a moral thermometer?

The answer is a challenge to incredulity. Paris has been shocked at a play—one of its own plays, acted by its own actors at one of its own theatres!

But wait. Your incredulity is to be still further taxed. You have heard that if a cocoanut were gay and wicked, Paris would be like a cocoanut. It is gay and wicked on its surface—its wrinkled and shabby exterior. Get down to the white meat of it and it is still gayer and more wicked. Penetrate to its heart—to the milk of the cocoanut—and you find it most gay and most wicked.

Well, as you may have heard, the superlatively gay and wicked heart of Paris is the "Moulin Rouge"—the "Red Mill," the theatre where travellers will tell you everything "goes the limit."

Yet it was at the "Moulin Rouge" where Paris discovered its conscience. Whoever latest spectacle on the stage of the "Moulin Rouge" you are supposed to have left your conscience—if you have one—at home. This is so well understood by visitors from the outside world that they have seldom called down the wrath of heaven upon what they saw there.

So it was not strangers, but the Parisians themselves, who rose against the latest spectacle on the stage of the "Moulin Rouge," obliterating it and its actors with hisses and a deluge of cigar butts, umbrellas, walking sticks, bad eggs and decayed vegetables.

Gayety and Wickedness Unashamed.

What a shock to the prurient-minded who had planned a visit to the gay and wicked capital in the long-cherished hope of at last seeing gayety and wickedness unashamed!

This moral convulsion in Paris is all the more interesting to us just now, when New York has witnessed Oscar Wilde's "Salome" with half-averted eyes and hastened to wash the unpleasant taste out of its mouth.

The incident recalls Sadie Martinot in the unspeakable "Turtle"; also "Orange Blossoms," which was so offensive to New Yorkers that the manager of the show was arrested.

The conscience of Paris was proof against the vulgar indecencies of the Barrisons, those six "sisters" of notorious American memory. It had slumbered all through the acts of "Streets of Cairo" and "Little Egypt" importations. It gave evidence of no qualms over the half-clad contortions of La Fornarina, the Spanish nude ball singer and dancer who recently, in her own country, brought upon herself such a protest from the Government that she was excommunicated by the religious authorities.

If, as they probably would have done in the Fourteenth Century, the Church in Murcia, Spain, had banned La Fornarina as a succubus directly employed by the devil, the populace could hardly have been wrought up to greater frenzy. At last accounts the police were having to guard her house against mob violence. Evidently La Fornarina's mistake was in not remaining in Paris, where a long career of respectability might have been assured her.

Under ordinary conditions at the "Moulin Rouge," the peeling off from the body of a succession of love-making Egyptian princess of successive Parisian conscience is safe in the keeping of an beautiful Egyptian princess of successive would have awakened under court guardianship. A notary paid official censor, could not keep down some qualms recently when that beautiful incognita calling herself "Miss Milo" challenged their admiration in living representations of classical statuary.

By the use of some plastic composition with which she smeared her hair, face, bust and limbs, "Miss Milo" made an astonishingly realistic marble statue. As Venus the artists declared her the next thing to perfection. But the British public knowing that this apparent marble was a real, live woman in scandalously scant attire, could not be cordial to "Miss Milo" who, by the way, would not have given Paris a single thrill.

What has served to scandalize Paris is altogether a different matter—something that will not bear describing here in too opulent detail.

It was not so much the play as the actors who played it, and the way they played it, that made Paris shudder. The three thousand-year-old mummy of an Egyptian princess unwrapped on the stage, to come to life and make violent love to the necromancer who has brought this miracle about, is all there is to the play.

"IT WAS NOT STRANGERS, BUT THE PARISIANS THEMSELVES, WHO ROSE AGAINST THE LATEST SPECTACLE ON THE STAGE OF THE MOULIN ROUGE, OBLITERATING IT AND ITS ACTORS WITH HISSES AND A DELUGE OF CIGAR BUTTS, UMBRELLAS, WALKING STICKS, BAD EGGS AND DECAYED VEGETABLES."

The first she drives, and wearing a velvet jacket act of the pantomime—rather innocuous—and trousers not less tight than those of was received in ominous silence. At the an Italian infantry soldier."

So much for the principal lady involved. Now as to Mme. Colette Willy.

This lady—a piquant and impudent charmer of great beauty, had found the society of Mme. de Morny so engaging that her husband's objections to the intimacy could not move her. An estrangement, but no open scandal resulted.

But when the pantomime was announced, and fashionable Parisians were paying all sorts of prices for seats on the opening night, and when Mme. Colette Willy suddenly announced in the newspapers that she was joining her friend the Marquise in the enterprise, to play the part of the beginning of the second act, when the Marquise de Morny was revealed in men's clothes and recognized, trouble began brewing. It was apparent that Paris was finding this combination of necromancy, a disrobing mummy princess act and the spirit of the light show of the Second Empire hard to swallow.

When the mummy princess had been finally unwrapped, and had begun her passionate love-making à la Egypt of three thousand years ago, the Paris public sat bolt upright, its conscience fully awake. Then the tumult of vegetables, eggs, umbrellas, walking sticks, cigar stubs and hisses.

In the midst of it the audiences recognized in a stage box, sneering at the wife-actress whom he was divorcing, M. Willy.

It was really "all Paris" that gathered science. The offense lay deeper than all that.

The whole piece was a pantomime devised by the Marquise de Morny, and the part of the heroine-manager was acted by her, for which she dressed in modern men's clothes. The mummy princess was Mme. Colette Willy, the mutinous wife of a pet Paris wit and boulevardier—and right here you must know more than probably you do about these two ladies, for it was circumstances in their private lives which, considered in connection with their appearance in "A Dream of Egypt," set the "Moulin Rouge" audience on edge.

The Marquise de Morny, daughter of the prime mover in the coup d'etat which placed Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte on the throne of the second Empire, and a relative of that monarch, is a descendant through ancestresses from Louis XV., and shows in her face traces of Bourbon blood.

The Marquise de Morny was born in 1863. The whole course of her adult life has kept her before the Paris public as the quintessence of the Second Empire gay and unconventional spirit. Emily Crawford, the celebrated Paris correspondent, has this to say of her in London Truth:

"The coccodettes of the Second Empire were formed of the same clay and animated with exactly the same spirit as the Marquise de Morny. They had a foreign ambassadress in her genre—and stage impudence.

"Mme. de Morny is one of those ladies who value the liberty of the ground floor. One can leave and re-enter one's ground floor abode without troubling the nocturnal slumbers of the concierge simply by using a window as a street door. She was divorced young, got entangled in many scrapes, and was placed by her family the rent of her apartment in a handsome house close to the Musee des Religieux, where I dare say she picked up the idea of her pantomime.

"Last year she was allowed to have the full enjoyment of her fortune, and was thus enabled to make good to some extent losses members of her family had sustained through the disturbed state of Venezuela. She still keeps up and passes her Summers at Les Bergeronettes, so called from the quantities of song birds in the grounds and the forest beyond the Nogatte.

"It is an Eden into which spirits masculine are rarely admitted. The architect, the gardeners, the man who bedded down the horses, and a costumer had glimpses of this paradise of theatrical friends of the Marquise, divettes of opera comique, bouffe operetta and actresses, some initiated and others only remarkable for their plastic points.

"The Marquise drove them about the country when they were with her on holmummy princess, then M. Willy took issue in the divorce court. All this boomed quarters there were discontent murmurs. The prices at the box office, though, in certain

It was really "all Paris" that gathered at the "Moulin Rouge" on the opening night of "A Dream of Egypt." The first act of the pantomime—rather innocuous—was received in ominous silence. At the beginning of the second act, when the Marquise de Morny was revealed in men's clothes and recognized, trouble began brewing. It was apparent that Paris was finding this combination of necromancy, a disrobing mummy princess act and the spirit of the light show of the Second Empire hard to swallow.

When the mummy princess had been finally unwrapped, and had begun her passionate love-making à la Egypt of three thousand years ago, the Paris public sat bolt upright, its conscience fully awake. Then the tumult of vegetables, eggs, umbrellas, walking sticks, cigar stubs and hisses.

In the midst of it the audiences recognized in a stage box, sneering at the wife-actress whom he was divorcing, M. Willy.

Promptly—though inconsistently—he was included in the moral crime of the show, and was forced to leave the theatre to avoid danger to his person.

The tumult grew till the curtain had to be dropped, and the police put a permanent end to "A Dream of Egypt."

It is said that now M. Willy will have no trouble in obtaining his divorce, and that probably Mme. de Morny will be restored to her former scant judicial regimen.

Yes, strange as it may appear, the conscience of Paris has been awakened. How long it will stay awake remains to be seen.

LOOK OUT FOR THE NEW HEAVEN AND THE NEW EARTH.

Two Great Prophecies by Famous Prophets—Lee Spangler and Madame de Thebes Forecast Fearful Disasters This Year and Next for America and the Whole World, and That New York, Boston and Chicago Are to Be Destroyed.

TWO astonishing prophecies have just been made by the two most noted prophets in the world, Lee J. Spangler, of York, Pa.; and Mme. De Thebes, of Paris.

Lee Spangler predicted the eruption of Mont Pelee, the election of President Roosevelt, the death of Mark Hanna, the Baltimore fire, Russia's defeat by Japan, the recent eruption of Mount Vesuvius and the California earthquake, the sinking of an island in the Pacific and the Kingston disaster, a year or more before any of these events occurred.

He is a plain, unpretentious business man, a grocery store keeper who apparently has a natural gift of prophecy.

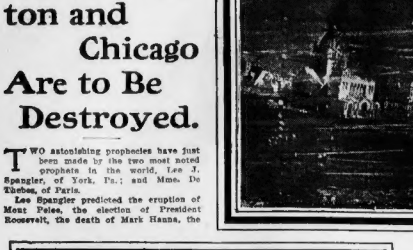
Within the past month, he has had a vision of the destruction of the world, the disappearance of the seas and the "making of a new heaven and a new earth," as he expresses it.

This prediction differs from the old-fashioned, end-of-the-world prophecies, which usually represented the world as being burned up in a mighty flame.

Lee Spangler predicts that the "new earth" will be made by natural geological processes, earthquakes, the rising of new mountain range and the drying up of oceans.

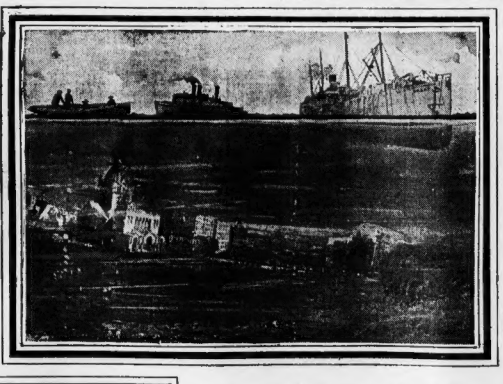
In these cataclysms he foresees the destruction of New York, Boston and Chicago—all of these cities meeting their fate in different ways.

Madame De Thebes's prophecy is more of a political nature. She has long been regarded as the Sibyl of Europe. The first of every year she issues a prediction, utterance coincides in many ways with and many of her forecasts in the past have been strikingly fulfilled. Her latest in the near future.



How the Pacific Ocean Will Be Swallowed Up in a Great Crack In the Sea Bottom.

How New York Will Be Engulfed in a Great Chasm Under the Hudson River.



Ships Sailing Over Submerged Boston.

Spangler Predicts a Mountain Will Rise Under Chicago, Toppling Its Skyscrapers Over Like Children's Toy Block Houses.

BY LEE J. SPANGLER.

ON a Sunday toward the close of next year, 1908, the destruction of the world will begin.

Then will be made a new heaven and a new earth. There will be no more seas.

In the new millennium which will begin with the new earth all the surviving inhabitants will come together into one great nation, being no longer separated by the barriers of seas or race prejudice.

The disasters at San Francisco, Valparaiso and Kingston within the past nine months have been but the rumblings and premonitions of the final destruction.

The next great catastrophe will be the annihilation of New York by earthquake and fire in the Autumn of 1908. That city stands on the edge of what geologists call a "fault," an old crack in the earth's surface. At some remote period the ground broke apart, leaving on the western side the precipitous Palisades. Down through this gorge the waters of the mountain region to the north flowed. The Hudson River was formed and the Island of Manhattan came into existence, as suddenly as new islands arise in the Pacific Ocean.

Just as suddenly will come the disappearance of New York.

There will be a rocking tremor of Manhattan Island. The tall buildings will collapse in a moment. Fire will sweep the ruins in a few hours. In the midst of this calamity, the quakings of the earth will increase. The old crack in the earth under the bed of the Hudson will reopen. The river will disappear in the wink of an eye.

As the river and the sea flow into the heated interior of the earth there will be a mighty blasing of steam. The explosion following will cast the ruins of New York high into the sky and falling they will be engulfed in the great crack, filling it with rocks powdered as fine as the dust of a city street. Nothing will be left to mark the site of the great city save a few fire-swept ruins on the outskirts that have escaped the greater catastrophe of Manhattan Island. Millions of people will be killed in a few minutes.

After New York's doom Chicago will meet its fate. Instead of being swallowed up in a chasm, the earth will suddenly rise up into a great mountain. The tall buildings will topple over and fall down the mountain sides like houses built of children's blocks.

This will be but the natural course of geologic events, guided by the Divine Hand. It will be merely a repetition of what occurred once before in the Mississippi Valley region. This was the first part of the American continent to rise out of the primeval sea when the waters covered all the world, as the Bible tells us, and, as science assures us, was literally true.

A hundred million years ago the Mississippi Valley was a great mountain system as high as the Rocky Mountains now are. Geologists tell us how this great mountain system was worn down to a level plain by the action of wind and water and the decay of rocks.

About thirty million years ago the Appalachian Mountains rose to the eastward, by a crumpling up or folding of the earth's surface. These mountains poured their flood of waters down into the Mississippi Valley and it became the great Laramie Lake of prehistoric times, where the strange monsters flourished which scientists have dug up in the last few years. Five or ten million years ago the Rocky Mountain system was upheaved by volcanic action.

All these great movements would have been considered catastrophes by man had he then existed on the earth. Greater changes are now coming than have ever before been witnessed by man in his brief life on earth.

The convulsions in the Mississippi Valley will cause the Great Lakes to rush tidal floods through the new-made valleys.

The few people who can manage to get in the stable ground of the Appalachian Mountains on the east and the lofty plateaus of the Rocky Mountains on the west will be saved. There have always been mounts to which the righteous can flee and be saved.

While these tremendous quakings of the earth's crust are occurring in what we call the East and Middle West, Boston, already slowly sinking into the sea at the rate of a foot a century, will suddenly subside in a night and ships for a time will sail over her tallest buildings.

Where the Pacific is deepest a great crack will open in the ocean bed. The waters will rush hissing therein with a noise like Niagara, clouds of steam will arise covering the earth with darkness, shutting out the light of sun, moon and stars for days.

When it clears away the bottom of the Pacific Ocean will be dry, save where mighty rivers flow through the lowest parts, as the Mississippi now winds down through its great valley. The greatest of these rivers of the Pacific plain will be the united San Joaquin and Sacramento Rivers, which will flow westward past the Hawaiian Islands, which will then loom up like mountain peaks. The mighty river will flow to the yawning cracks in the earth where the ocean disappeared. It will be called the Great Sink.

San Francisco, purified by fire and earthquake, will rise into a city beautiful. Before her will spread the valley of the Pacific to pay eternal tribute to her.

The interior valleys of the Rocky Mountains and Sierra Nevadas will at first be ravaged by floods from the newly risen mountains of the Mississippi Valley. Their inhabitants will build arks, as Noah did, and the wisest of them will escape.

After the flood subsides they will go forth upon a new and beautiful country, clothed in verdure and tropical plants, with no more need for irrigation works, for the rains of heaven will thereafter provide them with moisture. While the Western World is thus being destroyed and made over anew equally strange things will be happening to the eastward.

Across the South Atlantic there is a thin spot in the earth's crust. The volcanic outburst of Mt. Pelee and the shaking and sinking of Kingston, on the island of Jamaica, show how unstable this part of the earth is.

As a result of the convulsions in the Pacific, this part of the Atlantic will also split open, the seas will flow in, and the bottom of the Atlantic and Mediterranean will then be dry land.

In this great fertile plain, watered by the rivers flowing from the mountains, Europe and Eastern America will come together and live as one nation.

It will be the new Garden of Eden, and here will be the new heaven on earth. Earthquakes and fire and floods will have purified mankind and made them fit for a new destiny on earth. The signs of the heavens all point to these changes on the earth.

Mars has been discovered by Professor Percival Lowell, of Boston, to be a world on which the seas have disappeared, where all the people live together as one nation.

Scientific men the world over have for some time foreseen some such destiny for the earth. But they have lacked the courage to proclaim the coming of the new earth. They have hinted at the changes that would occur, but have said these things are millions of years removed.

I now foresee that they are close at hand. The trembling of the earth's surface, the wonders seen in the skies, the crises in the affairs of men, proclaim that the new creation is nashing upon us.

The calamities that have occurred in the past twelve months are as nothing to what is before us.

Greater things are yet to come to awaken and convince the people my words are true, not only in this country, but throughout the whole world.

There will be great sickness all over the world, such as the doctors will not be able to wipe out, as noxious vapors from the earth's interior fill the air. Strange diseases will appear, such as never before existed. Medical skill will be exhausted and the doctors will not know what to do.

All these and many other things will occur simultaneously before the destruction of the world. People will laugh at my predictions, but I tell you they are true. They are coming thicker and faster. One right after the other, and yet the people are so blind they cannot see that it is God's hand working out the destiny of man and the evolution of the world.

So I tell you that there will be a new heaven and a new earth, and there will be no more sea.

Madame de Thebes Predicts That Our Atlantic Coastline Will Sink and Engulf New York.

FOR the United States in the next year or two I see great catastrophes. Fire and water menace the New World generally. There will be great economic changes after the coming political conflicts in the United States.

But, worst of all, your America is going into the ocean in 1907, not all of the United States, but there will be upheavals and sinking of coast line on the Atlantic. There will be a convulsion in the bottom of the Atlantic sending an awful tidal wave to New York. I see her skyscrapers tumble and burn. The ground seems to be sinking under them. I am surprised to see how many indications point to catastrophes in the United States. You will have a war and lose some of your island possessions.

With so much trouble in the American side of the Atlantic I am asking myself if the coast of Europe may not also be affected. I fear our continent may suffer from sudden convulsions terrific on the coast. What quantities of water! I have seen disquieting signs in the hands of so many inhabitants of the coast.

It may be a tidal wave that will sweep both ways, to Europe and America.

I am struck by another strange coincidence. In the hands of thousands of Americans I have seen a mysterious violent mark. Of course, they may not all refer to the same sinister; but if even half of them indicate a common shock, it must be shortly due—I have seen the mark in the hand of many an aged American! Nevertheless, cheer up! Did the San Francisco earthquake hurt your country as a whole? Nor even cataclysms can check the triumphant march of the indomitable American people!

Looking over Europe, I see Italy rising strong and powerful among the nations. The Latin races are destined to rule the world.

Rich Italian society will be called on to give a great patriotic example, and in the mingling Quirinal and sVtican are to be reconciled. But what changed things, what dangers to Italians from the side of the sea!

As for the Pope, his power will grow sensibly. Kings will call on him to protect their countries from popular appetites exasperated by materialism.

From what points in Europe threatened? You will have gained from Belgium! At the end of a great financial scandal the king will grow crazy and the rest will follow.

In Belgium the time of social transformations is at hand—and the shocks they bring with them. What a scandal will first trouble both countries! What a plot will threaten the most celebrated partisan of the House of Orleans! Belgium is the sensitive point of Europe!

Russia is not. Apart from a plot to kidnap the imperial children, dangerous for them, scarcely to succeed, but from which may come unexpected things, the world's attention will not be much drawn to Russia. Later Russ a will be "neither what she is to-day nor what she thinks she will be"; but in 1907 the little country of Holland will be more looked upon than Russia. Because: Finally, in 1907, the low countries will emerge from their incognito. Redoubtable dangers threaten Holland from the sea.

I cannot precise more. I unravel only that now, for the first time in long years, Holland is on the point of occupying universal attention.

At present Industrialism reigns king—everywhere. But this will end, and thought, science and art will regain their ascendency.

France is going to suffer sudden convulsions of nature. Water and severe weather are going to work havoc. There are signs of political disorder in the south central part, which will lead to civil strife. An epidemic of disease is threatened. There will be no foreign war, but an outburst of popular anger and many parliamentary and financial scandals than usual. There will be many devastating fires.

The weakness of Germany will be revealed more and more. Emperor William has seen his best days. Death is likely soon to overtake him. The sensational actions of the German royal family will increase until they are compelled to take heed.

Financial catastrophes threaten. There will soon be a crisis in Germany's national affairs. A situation is being prepared for the inexperienced Crown Prince which he will be utterly unable to cope with when he comes into power.

Austria and Vienna in particular, will be visited by frightful fires and storms.

"I Shall Dress Only in a Fig Leaf as I Did in the Garden of Eden"

How Would You Like to Wander in This Curious, Freakish, Earthly Paradise, Situate in Denver, with a New Eve Entirely Free from Clothes and Original Sin and Spitefulness and Nagging, or Any of the Faults Which Have Been Imputed to Woman Since the Fall?

The School Hour for the Children of the Garden of Eden.

The New Mother Eve as She Looks Living the "Simpl... Life."

One of the Transport Wagons of the Adamites en route to Eden.

The New Adam Reading the Early Morning Scriptures in the New Eden.

OF all the freak new religions that are flourishing in the United States, perhaps the most freakish is the Adam and Eve sect of Denver, Colo.

Adam is a man formerly known as James Sharp, and Eve is his wife, formerly known as Melissa Sharp.

The fundamental tenets of the new religion are that these two interesting people are Adam and Eve, returned to earth free from original sin and just as good as they were before the fall and their expulsion from the Garden of Eden.

They have a divine mission to lead men and women back to the Garden of Eden, which they will establish in the vicinity of Denver.

The central figure is naturally Mrs. Sharp, or Mother Eve, as she is now called, a handsome young woman of magnetic personality. It will be recalled that Eve was unquestionably the most interesting figure in the Biblical drama of the fall of man and his expulsion from the Garden of Eden. The role of man was a passive and rather cowardly one. Eve listened to the voice of the serpent and was persuaded that it would be delightful to eat of the forbidden fruit of the tree of knowledge. Then, mistakenly, she persuaded Adam to share the fruit with her, believing that it would contribute to his happiness. When they were both punished for their disobedience Adam basely and weakly attempted to excuse himself by saying:

"The woman tempted me and I did eat."

In a restored Eden the woman must be a stronger and nobler character than Adam, and the Denver Mother Eve is so regarded by her followers.

How would you like to wander in the Garden of Eden with a new Eve, entirely free from original sin, curiosity, spitefulness or any other of the faults which have been imputed to woman since the fall?

This is the pleasure that awaits those who join the new religion, and it is attracting people in considerable numbers.

There is no danger that this Eve will listen to the voice of the serpent. He may advance his most specious and delusive arguments, employ his most winning and seductive flatteries, but she will turn a deaf ear to him. Mother Melissa Sharp Eve will invite no man to a picnic of forbidden fruit.

It must be admitted that the members of the new sect are a strange looking lot, and it appears that the majority of normal men will continue to prefer the ordinary woman, with all her faults, including her disposition to listen to the voice of the serpent.

Your correspondent called at the present headquarters of the Adam and Eve sect, a large house on Marion street. He was met by a handsome woman, with an enthusiastic and visionary smile upon her face. Instinctively he felt himself in the presence of Mother Eve.

"Mother Eve, I presume?" the correspondent began, lifting his hat reverently.

"Yes," she answered. "I am Mother Eve come back to earth again. Do you wish to enter the Garden of Eden?"

"I should like to visit it very much."

She led the way into a large room full of untidy looking people, among whom were a number of children. A wild-eyed, tremendously whiskered man sat upon a throne and announced in a loud voice that he was Adam, sent to lead man back into the Garden of Eden.

The correspondent sidled into the most distant corner of the room, preferring to obtain enlightenment from Eve, who kindly accompanied him.

"How do you know that you are Adam and Eve?" asked the visitor.

"One night when we were living in Oklahoma and had been attending a revival meeting, we saw a star fall, and we knew it was a sign. Then we heard a voice saying, 'You are Adam and you are Eve. Henceforth you are free from sin, and yours is the gift of prophecy. Go forth and lead the children of men back to the Garden of Eden.'"

"Is this the Garden of Eden here?"

"Oh, no," said Mother Eve. "This is only the gateway where the redeemed are gathered together and instructed before they are led into the garden. That is in one of the beautiful valleys of Colorado. We shall move as soon as Adam has completed his preparations.

"I shall dress only in a fig leaf, as I did in the Garden of Eden, and my husband, Adam, will redeem the world."

"A-hem," ventured the correspondent, delicately, "would a fig leaf be necessary in a community entirely free from sin? It was after the fall that Adam and Eve found fig leaves desirable."

"Well," said Mother Eve, with a touch of uneasiness, "perhaps I shall be able to do without a fig leaf in time, but we do not wish to offend the sinful and unregenerate. We have been sent into the world to bring peace and happiness and not to stir up strife. Whenever we need it, we receive a revelation telling us just what we ought to do. We shall know when the time is ripe to drop fig leaves. I have no doubt that when every man is a true member of the Garden of Eden fig leaves will not be required."

"How many people already belong to the garden of Eden?"

"We think there are two hundred of us now. Many of them are children, because they are most free from sin and, therefore, fit to enter the garden after Adam has preached the word to them for a short time. We gather up orphans and children of parents who are not able to care for them."

"Have you any children of your own?" inquired the visitor.

"Oh, yes," said Mother Eve, smiling proudly and indicating a boy of twelve with a bulging forehead and a solemn expression. "That is little Abel. He is the brightest flower in the Garden of Eden. He has preached hundreds of times and he is almost as powerful a preacher as Adam. He will bring many of the race of Eve into the promised land."

"As you have a little Abel, am I to infer that there is also a little Cain?" ventured the correspondent.

"Ah," said Mother Eve, "it makes us very sad to speak of Cain. Yes, we have been compelled to leave him behind. He is a little Cain. His name at first was Thomas, but when the light was revealed to us we knew that he was Cain. He put our dear little Abel on the stove and did a lot of other dreadful things. Of course, Cain could not come into the Garden of Eden. We had to leave him to wander in the wicked world."

"You don't mean to say you have deserted your child?"

"Well," said Mother Eve, "that is hardly the way to put it. Cain would not come with us. He is working for a grocer in Kansas City and is earning filthy lucre."

"How will your community be supported in the Garden of Eden?"

"Every believer must give up all that he has and follow Adam. He will care for everybody. We shall need very little in the Garden of Eden. We shall not have money or clothes or homes or any property. We shall sleep in the fields or under tents, and every man will take what he needs from his neighbor.

"There will be neither sin nor sickness in the Garden, for it was by sin that death came into the world. Adam will cleanse men from their sins and lead them back to the Garden. There we shall live forever.

"We shall live on the fruits and plants of the field in the Garden. We shall not have herds of cattle. Wasn't were the earliest form of property that man took to himself after the fall, and they were a sign of his sinful condition. It is wicked to own cattle and to eat meat. He that eats the flesh of his fellow creatures is surely bringing about his own destruction."

"Will you do any work in the Garden of Eden?"

"Certainly not. You know that the first punishment of Adam for his disobedience was that he should earn his bread in the sweat of his brow. When my Adam redeems men from their sins they have no longer any need to work. It would be a sin to do so. We shall just wander happily and guilelessly in the Garden and smell the flowers and listen to the birds. We shall do no work forever and forever. Adam will preach to us when the spirit moves him."

Here Adam thumped his Bible and yelled out:

"I am opening up the third kingdom. I will redeem the world. These children here will help me."

"A-a-amen!" cried Mother Eve.

"A-a-amen!" echoed all the others.

"Do you feel quite sure that none of the sisters and daughters of Eve will disturb your sinless and peaceful life in the Garden?" pursued the visitor.

"Of course not," said Mother Eve, indignantly. "If you imagine that, you have failed to understand one of the greatest truths of our religion. When woman is redeemed by Adam, she ceases to lead man into temptation, which is her great fault as an unregenerate state. Nearly all the unhappiness and wickedness in the world are caused by this fault of women, as you are aware. When she is free from it, the greatest cause of sin will be removed and that is why we shall all be good in the Garden of Eden."

"Will women have no desire to wear beautiful clothes in the Garden of Eden?"

"None whatever," said Mother Eve, with conviction. "That desire was part of her punishment for her disobedience. The woman was condemned to desire finery in order that she might perpetually tempt the man, and he was condemned to labor in the sweat of his brow in order that he might perpetually strive in vain to satisfy her longings. We are the new Adam and Eve, and we are sent to redeem our brothers and sisters from this slavery. Henceforth Eve will only desire to appear as the Lord made her."

The correspondent felt that he had learned everything essential about the new garden of Eden and he went away.

As he did so, Mother Eve called out: "Come and join us when you are sure in very sad to speak of Cain. Yes, we have been Women Themselves Are to Blame for So Many Bachelors.

TO the ends of happiness women of wealth and position have given up everything. They have given up all in order to marry the men they loved.

In all cases, however, involving love there are other points that balance, and often decide the important question. The money part of matrimony is no small factor in the comfort and well-being of the two concerned, but it does not deserve the stress that seems to be placed upon it by young women who have been honored by proposals of marriage by honest, industrious young men who love them.

One of the main points that girls should dwell upon seriously to-day when confronted with proposals of marriage is the fact that their refusal in many cases opens the door of bachelorhood to the man.

We can fancy lots of girls smiling at the idea that it is possible to lose the affections of a man who is now anxious above all things to marry them.

Many a girl may say, with a tone of her head, that a man who will not remain a faithful and devoted lover through all the years is not, in the beginning, worth the marrying.

But the fact is bachelorhood is getting to be a very popular profession for men.

And although many other affairs tend to this, young women are doing more to make it so than any of the other causes.

Rain through the ridiculous importance they attach to the amount of money involved in this early period of a man's business career; through the extravagance of their ideas as to living, and to the overrated notions they have as to the importance of their own wage earning capacities at this special time.

More men turn to bachelorhood on their first refusal by the girls they love and ask to marry than would be easily imagined in this unsentimental age.

But it must be remembered that this first fancy in a young man's life, when it is strong enough to steer him to matrimony on a small salary, is one of the very strongest impulses of his life.

And usually one of the most generous and finest. Turned back into the heart, soul, brain, or wherever first love is born, it frequently becomes a destroying influence.

But in most cases it turns the unselfish impulse to provide a home for two out of his small income into a more selfish channel.

He sets up as a non-marrying man.

This is true, whether he is a sentimentalist who may really suffer from being thrown over, or a practical fellow who can meet the matter philosophically, telling himself that there are other fish in the sea.

He will never be so quick to fall in love or so eager to marry again.

He will quite likely go in for business success, anxious to eliminate the possibility of being refused again because his purse is not big enough.

Hurt pride makes men bachelors. The selfishness that sets in with the condition is only a secondary symptom. Turn back to an unselfish impulse and it will always become a selfish one.

Let us give men the belief, when they offer themselves to us for life, that their money is more important than they are, and they will start to make money, and women will never count for as much in the scheme of their lives again.

Girls never reckon with these facts. When they refuse a young sweetheart because he is, poor they fancy a prince of fortune is to come along by the roadside and pick them out of the factory or the laundry or the shop to set them on a throne.

So women go on idealizing all through life, marrying over-mannered nonentities, posers and rich vulgarians rather than men. They are always waiting for a man to come on horseback with a spear and feathers in his hat like a matinee actor.

In the meantime the real men and the fine men and the actually generous men are being turned into professional bachelors by little fools of girls, who refuse them because the men make a few dollars less a week than the various amounts they set mysteriously as the limit.

There are, of course, exceptions to the rule that the young man refused by his first love turns to professional bachelorhood, but the rule stands, nevertheless. Bachelorhood is a result, not a choice.

Optimists like to assert that there are just as many marriages as ever in proportion to the population, but statistics prove that there are fewer marriages of young people.

There are more marriages than formerly among the middle-aged and, between persons of widely different ages who marry through motive, but the old-time marriages between grown-up boys and girls who love each other are not so many.

The young man who, sad and sorrowing, emerges from his first love affair, refused by a girl who means all the world to him, finds that world changed forever. It becomes, by degrees, a very pleasant world, where he has palaces built to accommodate him, perfect service, good cooking and obliging clerks, boys, and managers on every side.

SCIENTISTS WHO NOW BELIEVE THE DEAD COME BACK AND VISIT US

IN the last few weeks the names of Flammarion, the great astronomer; Lombroso, the distinguished Italian scientist; Professor Charles Richet, the French savant, and Marconi have been added to the growing list of eminent scientists who now announce their belief that the human soul survives bodily death and sometimes communicates with the living. Prof. Hyslop, of Columbia University, is a firm believer in spiritual manifestations. These distinguished men have arrived at their conclusions from the investigation of phenomena which can be explained on no known scientific theory—they can be accounted for only as the manifestations of life beyond the grave. Science has at last undertaken to grapple with the problem of most tremendous importance to mankind—to search out, study and interpret the evidences that there is an unseen world, that there is a future life and that the dead come back and visit and communicate with the living. This new attitude of science toward spiritualistic phenomena is explained by Professor Karl Pearson in these words:

"Wherever there is the slightest possibility for the mind of man to KNOW, there is a legitimate problem for science. Hence ALL appearances, whether of microbes or of men, are legitimate subjects of investigation. Because they happen to be fitful, or phenomena occurring in an unseen environment, does not render the investigation improper or unscientific, though it makes it considerably more difficult."

SCIENCE the world over is now turning its attention to the wide field of spiritualistic phenomena, which hitherto has been avoided as a quicksand of fraud and superstition. The work of the psychical research societies in America and Europe has piled up a mass of material relating to dreams, premonitments, apparitions, visitations from the dead and messages from spirits which has challenged scientific interest.

The venerable English prelate, Archdeacon Colley, loppishly welcomes the new turn of men's minds toward spiritualism at this time, when materialism fills the world, when the churches are not filled and when the opposition to criticism and neglect the Bible is so widespread.

"Spiritualism," he declares, "comes as a real godsend to save men from the Sadducean materialism that looks for no hereafter beyond the grave."

The Roman Catholic Church believes in the facts of spiritualism, but condemns its claims and practices as contrary to the commands of the Bible, and likely to involve those who practise it in delusion and error. So writes Father G. G. Franco, S. J., in the Roman Civilta Cattolica, a Papal organ. The spirits who pretend to be the souls of historic or other persons come back from the dead may be mere impostors. At any rate, their actions and language are often scarcely in harmony with the character and genius of the great and good. Doubtless, however, spiritualistic phenomena are real and not imaginary, they can easily be distinguished from mere material phenomena, maintains Father Franco.

He supports his contention by stating that no one but a fool can withstand the testimony of such men as Williams Crookes and Lombroso, which testimony fully establishes the reality of what is called materialization. Spiritualism is, in fact, one of the recorded facts of history. It is found in the Old and New Testaments and among the early Christians and Neoplatonists of Alexandria. Any attempt to confute the genuineness and authenticity of all this testimony in favor of spiritualism is simply absurd. Half a century ago, indeed, incredulity might have been excusable; at the present moment it is unpardonable, Father Franco says.

"In our time (1907) no one denies the real existence of spiritualistic occurrences excepting certain men whose feet are on earth, but whose wits go woolgathering in the moon. Among these latter I am surprised to find several university professors in Italy, men in other respects admirable specialists. It is well to remind these gentlemen, and others who have not studied spiritualism, that spiritualistic phenomena are not the productions of pure and lofty metaphysics or astronomy, but are objective acts, that fall under the cognizance of the senses and can easily be observed by all men.

"When such phenomena have been witnessed to by very many men of learning and good faith, it is useless, even foolish, and ridiculous, to reject such well-proved facts. These facts are accepted as certain by all reasonable men. The phenomena of spiritualism, it may be added, from the moment when they were first observed up to our time, have become more and more palpable and objective, and therefore have furnished opportunity for better and more unmistakable authentication by the senses."

Professor W. F. Barrett, professor of physics at the Royal College of Science at Dublin, writes:

"The connection between the seen and the unseen world may be physical or psychical, but it is always a specialised substance or living organism. In some cases the receiver is a body in a state of unstable equilibrium, a sensitive material—like one of Sir Oliver Lodge's receivers for wireless telegraphy—and in that case its behavior and idiosyncrasies need to be studied beforehand. It is doubtless a peculiar psychical state, of the nature of which we know nothing, that enables certain persons whom we call mediums to act as receivers, or resonators, through which an unseen intelligence can manifest itself to us. And this receptive state is probably a sensitive condition easily affected by its mental environment.

"We should not go to a photographer who took no trouble to protect his plates from careless exposure before putting them in the camera. And I do not know why we should expect anything but a confused result from a so-called medium if the mental state of those present reacts unfavorable upon the sensitive. Infinite patience and laborious care in observation we must have (as in all difficult investigation); but what good results from any scientific research could we expect if we started with the presumption that there was nothing to investigate but imposture.

"In connection with this subject of mediumship, it seems to me very probable that a medium, an intermediary of some sort, is not only required on our side, in the seen, but is also required on the other side, in the unseen. In all communication of thought from one person to another a double translation is necessary.

"Furthermore, if my view be correct, that the self-conscious part of our personality plays but a subordinate part in any telepathic transmission, whether from incarnate or discarnate minds, we shall realize how enormously complex the problem becomes. So that the real person whom we know on earth may find the difficulty of self-manifestation too great to overcome, and only a fitful fragment of their thoughts can thus reach us.

"There is, however, another view of the matter, which to me seems very probable. The translation from this life to the next may in some respects resemble our ordinary awakening from sleep. The discarnate soul not only knowingly regards the circumstances of his past life "in this dream-world of ours," as we now regard a dream upon awakening. When we try to recall all the incidents of a more or less vivid dream, we find how difficult it is to do so, how fragmentary the whole appears; and yet in some way we are conscious the dream was a far more coherent and real thing than we can express in our waking moments. Is it not a frequent and provoking experience that, while some trivial features recur to us, the dream as a whole is elusive, and as time passes on even the most vivid dream is gone beyond recall? May it be that something analogous to this awaits us when we find ourselves amid the transcendentally deep impress of the present life will doubtless be left on our personality, but its details may be difficult to bring into consciousness, and we may find them fading from us as we wake to the dawn of the eternal day."

"Not many years ago science denied the possibility of hypnotism and animal magnetism. There is a parallel to be drawn between the past and present attitude of science toward hypnotism and the past and present state of opinion regarding apparitions, telepathy, second sight and other metaphysic phenomena. Thirty years ago people scoffed at the very mention of these phenomena; nowadays, thanks to the example which has been set by Crookes, Wallace, Lodge, Ochorowicz, Lombroso, Myers, De Rochas and others, no thinking man denies their reality. In short, it is becoming more and more recognized among scientists that these phenomena are worthy of close study, and that they must be submitted to the same rigorous methods as those which are applied to ordinary branches of science."

Mr. W. T. Stead, the distinguished litterateur and editor of the "Review of Reviews," has made a special study and investigation of "spirit photographs." Understanding how easy it is for a photographer to make "trick photographs" by double exposure of a photographic plate and various other methods of deception, Mr. Stead took great precautions against fraud. Having personally procured a package of plates from the factory, and after careful investigation of the studio, camera and darkroom, Mr. Stead marked his plates for identification and then had a sitting with a mediumistic photographer. The photographer Mr. Stead calls "Mr. Z.," and this is his record of what happened:

"Mr. Z. told me that the previous night he had seen a female form of great beauty, which he had not seen before. She had a wreath in her hand, but what she intended to do with it, or for whom she destined it, he could not say. He said he hoped she might come again, but that was a matter beyond his control. Before I sat this time I pinned my handkerchief on to the curtain in the background, so that if long features recur to us, down to my left elbow. Mr. Z. announced that Philemon had come with his staff and would be photographed first. The form of Philemon, who, on this occasion was without his turban, is identical with the most vivid dream that which appeared on the photograph obtained by Mr. Wallace. The psychic form appears to have been standing in front of me, and my face comes out through his shoulder. His robe is distinctly visible across my right hand. The white handkerchief pinned on the curtain behind comes out, of course, very distinctly, somewhat obscuring the pale and shadowy form of the invisible presence. This picture contains no feature throwing light on the question.

"I then sat again. Mr. Z. laid a small cross with a ribbon on the table. Why, I do not know. I hung a piece of string across the background and suspended my handkerchief, believing that the unexpected variation of the background might afford a means of detecting any attempt to juggle with the plates. Mr. Z. said he could see a female form which he had seen before. He then exposed the plate, and on removing it from the camera said if I should sit still he thought the next picture I got would astonish me, as the lady with the wreath was there again.

"He then took the third marked plate and exposed it, with the result shown in the illustration. The features are the same as those which had appeared in the picture taken immediately before, but the pose of the figure was different, and the wreath, of course, was additional. Who the lady may be and what she meant to indicate by the wreath I do not know. All I can say is that upon my own marked

But the spirit, although within it, or speaking through it, is not the body any more than your coat is your soul.

"No; mere thought forms that are thrown off by the mind without incarnation make no impression on the plate. No; your thought cannot be photographed. But if you use your thought to create a pictures and you present that picture in its materialized shape before the camera, it can be photographed.

"'Yes; thought can materialize for the purpose of the camera the landscape you have seen and the pictures you have admired. The whole process is akin to photography. In that case your thought can develop the invisible memory into a materialised picture sufficiently solid to be photographed exactly as the chemical develops a negative.

"'What you call the astral light I cannot exactly describe. It is what I should describe as the thought substance of the universe.'"

Professor Burns, in trying to explain the mystery of spirit photographs, says:

"Nature around us is a condensation into palpable forms of previous aerial and inscrutable forces. Man as an organic being is composed of these things. He holds them in suspension in his nervous system. We are all materialized spirits. The solid food we eat is condensed air. The life within us decomposes it again into gaseous form, rearranges its component elements, and uses the product to maintain the structure of the body, supply it with force, and the mind with means of feeling, thought and expression. This fluid within man's body is called psychoplasm, because it is so highly vitalized that the soul can mould it into organic form.

"The connection between magnetic and spiritualistic phenomena has long been claimed. The photographer the mediums say, has as guide, philosopher and friend a spirit-artist whose part it is to gather from the atmosphere certain rare and fine semi-luminous particles, of which he shapes a mask of the spirit sitter, much as a sculptor models in moist clay. This mask is then held up in such fashion that the rays of it, invisible to everything but the sensitive plate, can imprint its image upon that surface."

Professor Flammarion, the great French astronomer, writing to his publishers about his new book on spirit phenomena the other day, said:

"The work that you are about to issue will prove indisputably the objective reality of psychical phenomena. These phenomena are absolutely certain to every impartial observer who has been able to give sufficient time to their study. My work on 'Some Natural Unknown Forces' will contain the results of my experiments with the famous medium, Eusapia Paladino, and with the principal mediums since the time of Allan Kardec."

Other episodes related by Archdeacon Colley had to do with the conveying of persons out of danger of imminent death by unseen hands, in one case in view of several witnesses. Again striking a queer crooked stick against an old-fashioned coat with a piece of blue ribbon attached to its lapel, he told how a deceased grandfather, who had owned both articles, appeared to a grandson in India who had never seen them, but who, after the appearance, sent home a description which tallied in every way with the coat and stick preserved at home.

Yet another story was of a book exhibited to the audience, which a spirit whisked away without permission, and returned months later through the ceiling of a house a hundred miles distant from the spot whence the book was originally removed.

Marconi, the wireless telegraph inventor, was brought face to face with spiritualistic phenomena by the Princess d'Antonio del Drago in Rome recently. Explaining this the other day, the Princess said:

"Shortly after my marriage the first phenomenon of any importance happened to me. I was in bed, awake, when the blankets were pulled off violently by some unseen hand. Strange to relate, I was not alarmed or frightened. I felt that I was rendered motionless.

"Suddenly I saw a shadow over my bed—a black shadow, which gradually took the shape of a female figure. I saw it clearly and quite distinctly in all its smallest details of figure, features and dress.

"The figure spoke and said: 'I am your husband's first wife. I am dead, and I came to tell you that you shall have a son, but he will die. Give this to my husband, with my love.' So saying, the figure handed me a lock of hair.

"I cried aloud for my husband. He rushed into my room, saw the shadow, and picked up the lock of black hair I had dropped on the floor. He had a lock of his wife's hair in a locket, and when we compared it with the one that had just been given to me we found that the two were identical in color and softness.

"When my son was born I again saw the figure of my husband's first wife. She pleaded that the child should be baptized, as it would soon die; and, in fact, it had hardly been christened when it died. No doctor could explain the cause of death, as the child was quite healthy and had only been born a fortnight.

"Later I had other spiritualistic manifestations. I saw my grandmother in Paris on the same day and hour that she died at Naples. I was warned several days before my husband died, and when everybody, including himself, believed that he was in the best of health.

"Lately I began to hold seances here in my palace. I met Signor Marconi a few weeks ago at an entertainment given by the Marchese Pino-Lecce, and spoke to him about spiritualism. He said he did not believe in it, so I invited him to come to my house and assist at a seance. He came last Tuesday.

"There were only myself, Signor Marconi, and the medium Politi. We formed a chain around a small table, and without telling all the phenomena we obtained it is sufficient to say that when Signor Marconi left he was a convinced spiritualist and quite determined to study the subject scientifically."

The distinguished Prof. Lombroso in a recent article reports on supernatural manifestations which no known scientific theories will explain. After discussing in full detail the unaccountable and recurring breaking of bottles in a quiet and uninhabited wine cellar, Prof. Lombroso writes:

"In May, 1903, I had the opportunity of personally examining into phenomena which took place in an … house in Turin, that of the … … 0, Via Massena. I was accompanied … Dr. … Imoda, who afterward drew up a short … … the … .

"… family who inhabited the 'haunted' house was composed of the father, mother and two children. They lived in a single room, with one window giving on to a balcony which ran round the building overlooking the courtyard. The furniture of the room was very simple; it consisted of a centre table, some chairs, a wardrobe and two beds.

"Every evening for three months past, when one of the children, aged eight, went to bed, they began to hear very strong blows on the wall against which the bed was placed. These blows continued for several hours, far into the night.

"They had tried in vain to … … the mystery. The Mignotti family had … … police, who had made careful and minute search, … under the very eyes of the officers, the blows resounded with such force that the wall trembled under them and the noise of them was heard even in the adjoining rooms; on placing the hand on the wall the vibration could be distinctly felt, such as might have been produced by the violent shock of a heavy body.

"As soon as we arrived on the spot Dr. Imoda and I carefully examined the walls and furniture of the room, especially the bed and the wardrobe. The child was lying beside its mother. Besides ourselves there were in the room the father, mother and two boys. Some minutes afterward blows began to be heard on the wall. This phenomenon was evidently directed by an intelligence.

"When a verbal question was addressed to the unknown cause of the noises it replied by blows according to a conventional code. It was possible in this manner to carry on a conversation by naming the letters of the alphabet denoted by the blows. I do not think it necessary to report the whole conversation; I will only remark that some of the things communicated by this occult cause were recognized to be correct, others absolutely false, others again inconclusive. After about a quarter of an hour the boy fell into a deep sleep, the blows, while still very strong, became more and more inconclusive as regards their significance, and finally ceased.

"Such is the phenomenon, set forth as simply as possible. Everything shows that the boy is the cause, at least the immediate cause. He did not present any abnormal peculiarity. The intensity of the mediumistic phenomena seem to be dependent on his physical condition; during some days when he was ill with fever, caused by the grippe, the blows were less resounding. The fact is conformable with what has been observed with many other mediums—Eusapia Paladino among others—and it is highly disconcerting.

"In speaking of 'haunted houses' I have had occasion previously to remark how curious it may appear that we can now report such facts, and find them in … … and so well attested, when a … … have passed without any one taking … … except among the lower classes, who … … in communication with the … … It is not that they did not occur; … … no longer believe in them … … no one paid any attention …

"For my part, if I may have been wrong in denying the … facts before studying them, I have not, at all events, thought myself bound to deny them because I did not succeed in explaining them."

One of the most recent notable instances of communication after death occurred in Boston a little over a year ago. In the Fall of 1905 Dr. Richard Hodgson, secretary of the American Branch of the Society for Psychical Research, died suddenly. Years before he had made a pact with his friend and co-worker Prof. William James, of Harvard College, to communicate after death if that were possible.

About a month after Dr. Hodgson's death, Prof. James was experimenting with Mrs. Piper, the famous medium of the Psychical Research Society. At … communications began to come in the peculiar words and phrases of Dr. Hodgson. Even the ideas were characteristic of him. It seemed as if their old friend were present, and discussing scientific subjects. His words were as good natured, almost as jovial, as were those of the living Dr. Hodgson. Yet there was not the frivolous levity and nonsense so common in many so-called spirit messages.

There was no materialization of Dr. Hodgson's bodily form. It was as if his words and ideas had come from a distance, or like listening to friend's voice in a phonograph.

Prof. James made a careful record of this communication for the purpose of having it printed in the proceedings of the Psychical Research Society.

For some time before his death Dr. Hodgson had become convinced that spirits of the departed could communicate with the living. Some years ago he had made a pact with his friend Prof. Myers, of England, a former president of the Psychical Research Society, that whichever died first should communicate with the other. Three months before Dr. Hodgson's death, in talking with a friend he said:

"I have received messages which I believe came from Myers." He added that he believed they were of such great importance that he was going to embody them in a book.

Death overtook him so soon that he never carried out this plan, which would have been of … estimable value to science.

Three photographs of how a "spirit" can be produced from a man's side by illusion. This trick was done by Mr. J. N. Maskelyne, a London conjuror, to show that even the most difficult "supernatural" phenomena done by spiritualistic mediums can be readily done by a skillful conjuror without the aid of spirits at all. The Venerable Archdeacon Colley, of England, had expressed himself as convinced that a certain medium had demonstrated his undoubted communication with the spirit world. Mr. Maskelyne wrote the Archdeacon that he would duplicate any mediumistic phenomena the Archdeacon would suggest. Archdeacon Colley volunteered to forfeit $5,000 if Mr. Maskelyne, as a conjurer, could reproduce a phenomenon which the Archdeacon declared had been produced by Dr. Monk as a medium. Mr. Maskelyne has described his illusion thus: "I fall into a trance, and then a vapor curls out of my side. The so-called materialization begins. First a hand, then other parts of the body appear, until the whole living, moving form stands revealed." The $5,000 has been duly claimed, and Mr. Maskelyne has announced that he will sue the Archdeacon if the money is not forthcoming. The Archdeacon is, it is said, to issue a writ for libel against Mr. Maskelyne. In the illusion Mr. Maskelyne plays the Clergyman; Mr. J. B. Hansard, the Archdeacon; and Miss Cassie Bruce, the "Spirit." The photographs show:

1.—The hand of the "spirit" first appears.

2.—To be followed by the upper part of the body.

3.—And, finally, by the whole body.

HER HAND! HER HAND! IT'S POISON!

How the Dying Visions of a Pretty Telephone Girl Are Helping to Solve a Murder Mystery in Which Poison and a Jealous Woman's Threats Are Features.

WHEN one after another of the lovesmitten young men of Evansville, Indiana, "popped the question" to the most exasperatingly pretty girl in that city of pretty women, Agnes Saulman, eighteen years old and a telephone operator in the office of the Hercules Buggy Company—her answer was invariably:

"No; I prefer your company simply to have a good time."

Pretty Agnes Saulman had a "good time" until about the middle of January, when, suddenly and mysteriously, she died and was buried.

But her body was not permitted to rest in the grave. There were too many questions, too many strange stories, altogether too much suspicion and too much mystery surrounding her death and the Coroner was forced to trace stories and finally to exhume the body of pretty Agnes Saulman in an effort to answer the questions:

"Did she die of poison?"

"Who poisoned her?"

"Why was Agnes Saulman murdered?"

These questions are not yet answered conclusively, but suspicion is pointing its finger more and more persistently in one direction; as the tangle of innuendo and strange stories and threatening letters and the last wild words of Agnes Saulman is being straightened out.

Agnes Saulman went to Evansville from Memphis, Tenn., several months ago, where her brother, Augus Saulman, holds a responsible position with a railroad company. Only a few days elapsed before she obtained employment at the factory of the Hercules Buggy Company as telephone operator. She was regarded as one of the prettiest girls of the town, wore good clothes and had numerous admirers.

The Fatal Sunday Afternoon.

On Saturday, January 19, she died under mysterious circumstances at the Deaconess Hospital, and it was said that her death was due to taking a dose of corrosive sublimate by mistake.

The Coroner was compelled, as already stated, to make an investigation.

Witness after witness was summoned, and the more the case has been investigated the more complicated the mystery appears.

For a week or ten days before her death Agnes Saulman had been ill with neuralgia and was taking quinine in capsules. She roomed alone at No. 812 John street, and on Sunday, January 13, while she was in bed, with her were her sister and John Saulman, her brother-in-law, and his wife.

The Coroner says he has evidence that Mrs. Dan Reel, a well-known married woman, entered the room and remained a short time. Exactly how long she remained there is a mystery to the officials as Mrs. Reel figures in the case from the start, and the police have been unable to prove her connection with the unfortunate girl.

A short time after Mrs. Reel and Agnes's sister and brother-in-law left the room on that fateful Sunday afternoon she was seized with a sinking spell and became partly unconscious. While in this condition she crawled across the street to the home of Mrs. R. H. Rohifer, only partly dressed, and fell in a faint on the front steps. Mrs. Rohifer took Agnes into her house and administered stimulants and the girl was revived. As soon as she opened her eyes she cried at the top of her voice:

"They have poisoned me! Oh, they have made their threat good! Oh, God! They have poisoned me and I am dying! She is done it at last! She is the guilty one!"

Raved About Poison

Then the poor girl [illegible] and talked nonsense [illegible]

The next day she was taken to the hospital, where she suffered terrible agonies and had delusions in which she manifested deadly fear of a woman's hand that had long reached out to do her harm and now at last held her in its fatal clutch.

Then she would sit up in bed with staring eyes and shriek:

"Her hand! Her hand! It is poison."

These delusions continued up to the hour of her death. Near the end she had conscious moments in which it is said she told her sister about her life having been taken by a woman, about some one entering her room while she was half asleep on the Sunday afternoon of January 13 and leaving some strange looking capsules on the mantel in place of the capsules containing quinine that she had been taking.

The sister does not admit that the dying girl mentioned the name of any woman. Here the story becomes more complicated than ever.

The stomach and other organs of the dead girl were analyzed by some of the best chemists of the town, and in the stomach Dr. Conover, a well-known chemist of Indiana, asserts that no traces of corrosive sublimate were found.

But the most eminent authorities differ as to the length of time corrosive poison of this kind would remain apparent in the human system.

E. M. Chamot, of Cornell University, in New York, is authority for the statement that corrosive poison will show traces in the human body after six months. Other well known authorities say that all traces would be eliminated in a few days. Doctors differ on this point and it is safe to say that if the girl's death was caused by the poison alleged to have been administered to her the poison did not show in her system after death.

It was nearly a week from the time the capsules were taken until the girl's death, and that she carried a pistol. She declares anything to do with his wife, as she demanded admittance, but Agnes, who was was jealous of her and might harm her.

MRS. DAN REEL, WHOSE HUSBAND ADMIRED AGNES SAULMAN.

AGNES SAULMAN, THE MURDERED GIRL.

The Coroner has in his possession parts of a letter that Agnes wrote to Reel on January 10. It is said to abound in the most endearing terms. The girl wrote she loved him better than anything on earth and that unless she could be with him more she feared she would die from a broken heart.

"I love you more than your wife does," she went to say. "You know that I love you more than any other woman can love you and I want to know what you are going to do. You know the relations that have existed between me and you know the sacrifices that I have undergone.' Now are you going to throw me aside like a soiled glove or a faded flower?"

It is said that Reel's wife caught her husband reading the letter and that he tore it in two, after setting fire to it, and threw it in the fire-place. Mrs. Reel went and fished parts of the letter out of the grate.

After this Reel and his wife, it is understood, had a meeting with Agnes Saulman and Mrs. Reel pleaded with the girl to see her husband again. It is said the girl promised, but the promise was broken, as Reel exercised a wonderful and strange power over Agnes which she was unable to shake off.

On the fatal Sunday night Agnes is known to have received a letter from a woman written on an envelope from the St. Nicholas Hotel in St. Louis. It is known that Mrs. Reel had spent several days in St. Louis along about this time.

The envelope was not postmarked. On it in a woman's handwriting were the simple words:

'Agnes Saulman.'

Did Mrs. Reel leave this letter in Agnes' room? This is one of the many questions that the police are asking themselves. It is said that in the letter, the contents of which were divulged to Agnes' sister, the woman told Agnes that her days were numbered and that she was going to kill her.

The sister says that the letter was destroyed, but the officials are in possession of the envelope and it is said they have identified the handwriting, although they refuse to discuss this.

Accuses a Married Woman.

Mrs. Reel has been unable to account to the officers for her whereabouts on the fatal Sunday afternoon between the hours of 5 and 6:30. She says she was at her home at the time making coffee, but the officers say they have evidence that she was not at home then. At night it is known she was at home and that she entertained several neighbors with selections on the graphophone.

Agnes Saulman was a favorite at the Hercules Buggy Company's factory, and the employes have made up a fund to aid the officials in solving the mystery of her death. They are fully convinced that she was foully dealt with.

One of the interesting characters in the case is Park Burbert, who was one of Agnes's sweethearts. In a sworn statement before a notary public, he made the following assertions for this newspaper:

"Agnes Saulman told me before her death that Mrs. Dan Reel had given her poison. I went to Dan Reel and asked him for a private interview. I was accompanied by William Martin. We went into the front room of Reel's house. His wife was at that time in the sitting room listening to our conversation.

"I told Dan that Agnes had said that his wife had given her the poison. Before we had time to finish, Mrs. Reel rushed into the room, crying:

"'How can you accuse me of murder!'"

William Martin also made an affidavit, in which he corroborates everything that Burbert says.

Mrs. Reel has made a statement to the Coroner that Herbert paid Agnes Saulman's last hospital bill for her. Augus Saulman, the brother of the dead girl, says he knows that Herbert never paid a hospital bill for his sister.

The important questions that now confront the officers are:

Who entered the room of Agnes Saulman on Sunday afternoon, January 13, while her sister was visiting her?

Who placed the letter upon her mantelpiece threatening her life, written on the letterhead of the St. Nicholas Hotel at St. Louis?

Who took the quinine capsules upon her mantel and substituted capsules containing poison.

The Grand Jury will be called together as soon as the Coroner has completed his investigation and report, and asked to make ful inquiry into the mystery. The public prosecutor thinks there is no question about the pretty telephone girl having been murdered. He points out that Mrs. Reel has made many conflicting statements about the case, and he thinks these should be investigated by the Grand Jury.

It has leaked out that Agnes underwent an operation about ten days before her death, but in the opinion of the physicians she had recovered from this when the poison was administered to her.

The whole mystery seems to centre in the woman's hand which the dying girl saw in her delusions.

Sugar Will Make You Immune to Consumption

THE statements advanced by a prominent English physician regarding of sweets.

the healthful qualities of sugar and sealing wax ought to bring joy to all who seek health, good complexion and who wish to be armored against consumption.

"Sweets factories and sealing-wax factories, where there is plenty of resin dust in the air, are the finest health resorts for consumptives imaginable," said the doctor.

"Take sealing wax factories first," he continued. "Study the girls that work in them. They are invariably strong, robust and cheerful. Why is it?

"All day they are breathing the most stimulating air imaginable—it is air very dissimilar from the pine wood sanatoriums of Germany. The resin dust is the essence of the pine gum, and is especially good for laryngeal troubles.

"In sealing wax factories the workers cannot help absorbing a little of the vermilion (red sulphite of antimony) into their systems, and although this is a virulent poison, it has a good effect on anaemics.

"Now take the case of the candy factories, where the girls can and do eat a lot of sugar. Have you ever noticed their complexions—how pink and white and fresh they look?

"My experience has taught me that a sugar-eater is proof against consumption, and cannot possibly become a drunkard. Furthermore, for a girl who is sallow and yellow-skinned there is nothing more sure to make her complexion clear than to eat plenty of sugar.

"All children should be brought up to like sugar—they should be allowed plenty is their tea and have a moderate allowance

"This would do away with the vast army of consumptives.

"I should recommend as a health preserver that every person should eat at least twenty lumps of sugar a day. The difference in health would become apparent in a few days."

The war that is to-day being waged on consumption, or tuberculosis, as the dreadful white plague is often called, has never been more earnest than the combined actions of the civilized world are now actively engaged in.

We hear of congresses and meetings held by numerous medical men and societies and we read of the results and latest advances made in an effort to stamp out this mortal disease. But all this is not half so beneficial to civilization as it is for each person to take every precaution not to contract the disease.

In a report lately issued by an institution for the study, treatment and prevention of tuberculosis it was stated that the malady was more than any other a house disease. It is implanted in the house, developed in the house and it matures in the house.

It is therefore easily seen that sanitary condition and surroundings and pure, fresh air are a requisite if a cure is to be effected. Overwork, want, sorrow and dissipation are also strong fertilizers for consumption.

A cough is often misunderstood as a symptom, but it should be remembered that tuberculosis of the lungs in itself does not produce much coughing and may be entirely free from it.

The Importance of Palm Beach Clothes

The Exquisite Gowns Worn Under the Southern Palms Forecast the Fashions for Spring and Summer.

Fabrics and Models Seen There Are What Will Be Worn All Over the Country by Well Gowned Women in the Months to Come.

Women Dress More at Palm Beach Than at Any Other Resort in the World.

Extravagance and Elegance in Gowning Features of the Season at Palm Beach.

OF course, everybody doesn't go to Palm Beach, but gowns for Palm Beach at this season of the year are indicative of what thin gowns will be like in the months to come, and, therefore, every woman is interested in the dainty garments made up to wear at all the Southern beaches, and Palm Beach especially.

Palm Beach is the Riviera of America and one would think, to see it of Fortnights also, for fashionable Palmer flocks to Palm Beach instead of the Riviera when, they say, is the much given over to invalids and has become stale by custom.

Women dress more elaborately and more frequently during a day in Palm Beach than they do anywhere else in the world. Dressing at Newport and Monte Carlo is quiet in comparison with that at Palm Beach, where a woman does a different gown every few hours and endeavors to look more bewitching in each one. The woman who goes to this smart resort with the intention of keeping up with the social whirl will need a fortune in costumes. She will require more gowns than she would wear in the same time in any other resort known to her.

No wonder that dressing has become an art at Palm Beach. Instead of tailored frocks and simple silks and wool materials the most dainty, delicate and enchanting stuffs are made up into elaborate gowns, which are the delight and envy of every beholder. Some of them wear an air of sweetest simplicity purchased at great cost in materials and making, while all convey the air of extravagance which is essentially a product of Palm Beach society.

With diaphanous materials silk of the heavier sort is sometimes used, as in figure A, which has one of the 1907 three quarter coats of more blue silk over a gown of entirely different character.

In figure A the stock and deep V shape yoke is of lace. The same kind of lace is used in two narrow puffs and a little ruffle at the bottom of the dress sleeve. Three bands of black velvet ribbon are arranged around the arm between these lace puffs and ruffle, and the latter terminates above the elbow. The rest of the blouse is of chiffon satin of the extraordinarily thin new quality. It is of the new tint known as Danish blue, and the bodice, sleeves and most of the skirt are composed of it. Three folds of silk, narrowing at the waist line, begin under each side the girdle in front and extend over the shoulders to a strap of trimming which crosses the middle of the back a short distance above the line of the girdle. On each side of the centre of the back the folds curve to a point, giving a sort of bolero effect, enhanced by the crossing strap of heavy medallion embroidery above two very long, wide pleated Directoire coat tails. The medallion embroidery borders the surplice of silk on both sides and also edges the skirts of the coat. In front the lace yoke extends like a shirt front to the girdle, which is of soft satin the color of the coat. It may be made of tucked moire, but that is more bulky.

The gown is built over mousseline de soie of the same shade as the chiffon, and this, in turn, is attached to a slip of light blue surah silk. For coolness the silk slip may be omitted or be made of thin Japanese silk. The top of the skirt is laid in pleats stitched a short way down, and around the lower portion extends a large Greek design carried out in folds of silk and the embroidered trimming which decorates the coat. The lower part of this design rests upon a wide extension flounce of the deeper blue of the moire of which the coat is made.

This style of gown could also be made of white lace or net or sheer embroidery without the silk in the lower portion, and with a silk coat of any desired color. Flowered, or pompadour silk, is very effective to make up into a Directoire coat, such as the one illustrated.

Another beautiful Palm Beach gown is shown in figure B. This one is in princess style, with a distinct Empire upper portion. It would probably be called a modified Empire. It is made of embroidered India mull laid in stitched pleats at the top to obtain a perfect fit. Where the pleats are released below the hips the soft filmy material flows out in full lines to the satin fold which borders its edge. This is worn over a silk underslip with a knife-pleated flounce under one of lace. The bodice is built with a collarless neck and lace yoke, tied by ribbons which cross each shoulder in a square fashion and disappear under the Empire girdle on each side of the front and back, leaving a square space between the ribbons. This is crossed by a three band trimming of folds above a gathered piece of [illegible]. From the edges of the surplice and the top fall of lace hangs over the sleeves and down the sides of the front and back in points. It passes beneath the girdle in the front and back and merely shows in a scalloped ruffle below it. A small sleeve of dotted lace is finished with a lace elbow band.

This gown may be made either with or without a yoke and puffed sleeves. Without them it is one of evening gown. The woman who has few gowns might wear a guimpe with the sleeves attached, and so make use of the gown for double purposes. It is a pattern suitable for any sheer wash fabric of the finest sort, for thin silks and satins and chiffons and gauzes.

A very chic yet very simple gown so far as making is concerned is shown in figure C. Here the gown is given a distinctly Empire appearance by means of a dainty lace Directoire coat of rare point lace, which floats delicately about the sheer silk voile of the gown.

Very new and exquisite textures in silk voiles are among the novelties in fabrics for Spring and Summer, and some of the loveliest possible gowns for Southern resorts are made up of these dainty voiles. These are variously striped indefinitely, striped with tiny cord, striped satin figures or are plain. They are extremely diaphanous and yet quite strong and more serviceable as well as fashionable than chiffon.

Of this new silk veiling material is the gown in figure C built. It has a gathered baby bodice with a wide soft girdle of satin, and a long, full train. The striking feature of the gown is the lace coat, which is arranged in two wide pieces over each shoulder with a buckle in the centre of the back holding the lace in place in a sort of coat position. The arrangement of the lace leaves an open V in the neck above which the baby waist shows with a shirred top. Puffed lace sleeves are finished with a ribbon armlet and a bow above a lace frill.

Figure D shows a very representative Palm Beach gown. It is of embroidered mull alternating with panels of plain mull. The embroidered India mulls for the coming season are so fine and beautiful that no more extravagant or charming dress materials are to be had, and the method of making up Indian mull as shown in figure D, may be applied to far less expensive fabrics of sundry sheer variety.

The gown has a princess effect without being a princess. The front and train are of embroidered mull and the sides of plain quality tucked crosswise in graduated tucks, which become very wide towards the bottom. On each side the front near the bottom of the skirt a panel effect is outlined with lace galoon, having a double row across the top. Under these top bands of galoon the dress material is gathered, which gives a flounce effect to the sides of the gown. At the top the skirt is tucked to fit and is worn with a wide, draped satin girdle. A collarless yoke edged with lace may, if one pleases, be finished with a high stock of the same kind of lace. The yoke is of tucked chiffon with a V shaped chemisette of lace below it. Surplices of embroidered mull are finished with wide borders of lace galoon and a shaped lace shoulder frill that falls over the top of the sleeves. On each side of the front velvet ribbon comes from under the chemisette and catches down the ends of the surplices upon each side of the wide girdle in such a manner as to give a high point in front. Small lace shows here the flounces of lace over the lace and a ribbon band and bow at the elbow.

In the lingerie gowns, of which there will be an innumerable quantity at Palm Beach, it will be noticeable that the methods of combining laces and embroideries which obtained last season will not be used this year. Different laces and embroideries will be used upon the same gown, but not in the mingled, and sometimes patchy, effects formerly employed. Small, rather than large figures, will be seen in the embroideries, and raised or blind effects, together with a bit of open embroidery of a style distinct from the English eyelet, which is no longer fashionable.

Small Empire wreaths are noticeable among the newest embroidered figures in fine Summer white materials, for the Empire period in dress is a dominating factor in everything of the richer class.

Embroideries are elaborately and extravagantly used in the wash dresses for Southern resorts. More embroidery than lace is to be seen, but all are of a very sheer, fine variety that makes them almost as diaphanous as the filmy laces now in vogue.

New among the filmy laces of fashion are the princess and point Alosto. These are machine made imitations of duchesse and point applique laces respectively. Real duchesse of the finest quality and real point laces are far too expensive for even wealthy women to wear to any great extent, and so these delicate substitutes have been provided. Lierre, a charming French lace, which has had a tremendous vogue for more than two years, is also smart still, but all filmy laces are having a vogue. This is to be a season of cobwebby and airy textiles of every sort, and as the Spring and Summer advance these will appear in a glory never before witnessed. Just now some are to be seen in the Palm Beach gowns, but the others are still hidden from all but initiated eyes.

It is just as well to learn, however, that the wise woman will not buy a new dress for any purpose that is not pretty this and soft of texture.

No, the little word "fan" holds within its single syllable a whole wealth of meaning. It suggests the grace, the energy or the languor of motion, and is the interpreter of feminine moods. The Ostrich Feather Fad, Showing Hat and Boa to Match Fan.

downcast faces, and emphasizes the mere droop of an eyelash or flash of a pair of eyes.

In skilful fingers the fan can be made to speak a language more eloquent than that of the tongue, more potent than that of the eyes. It can flutter in agitation, murmur in faintly murmured motion, and sigh in gently swaying bands. Moreover, it has one way of leaving a question open to discussion and another of expressing negation in a sharp, emphatic click. The average woman, especially the average woman of Europe, expresses herself through her fan.

American women are lending the fan more importance than they have ever done before. They have always been more or less votaries to its witchery; but its value as an adjunct to dress has never appeared so completely understood as it is this season.

It is the new fashion to carry the fan en suite, as it were. The vogue for ostrich plumes in the hat has extended to an unprecedented desire for ostrich feather fans, fascinating articles, always popular among well-gowned women.

Women pay from $50 to $250 apiece for these handsome fans of waving plumes mounted upon sticks of ivory, tortoise shell or amber. The craze for sandalwood sticks in fine fans has always its devotees among those who love the soft cloud of ostrich feathers as a screen to the face and an alluring charm to the toilet.

Ostrich feather fans are large, and are preferably black or white. All colors and tints are also produced in fans of this kind, and these are usually made to order. A woman sends a bit of her costume to be matched in a fan, and the ostrich feathers are dyed in the same tint and then made up into this article of coquetry.

The woman who carries such a fan wears a boa and head dress or hat to match. In evening costume she will wear an ostrich feather pompon the color of her fan, with an aigrette or ornament of some sort rising from its center. Or she will wear a picture hat with costly plumes waving over it of the same hue as those repeated in her neck boa and fan.

Boas to match fans and hats are sold by the yard, the usual price varying from $18 to $30 a yard, wholesale, which brings a short boa to considerably more than $30, and a long one to quite a large sum. Long boas are generally preferred and the woman plumed in ostrich feathers looks as though enveloped in a soft cloud of wonderful becomingness.

Just how expensive ostrich feather adornments are may be imagined when it is known that raw feathers, just plucked from the bird, cost $183 a pound.

One milliner, during this season, has paid $40,000 just for ostrich feathers for hats and the wearers of these confections invariably carry a fan to match the hat and a boa to harmonize with both. Ostrich feather trimmings, too, are much in demand upon gowns and are used in wonderfully charming methods upon the skirt and sleeves and in the fleciest of frames about a decollete neck

Sticks for ostrich feather fans are frequently inlaid with precious stones and gold and add much to the lovely effect of a fine fan.

But not only are fans of feathers all the rage, delicate wisps of lace mounted upon pearl, amber, tortoiseshell, ivory or sandalwood are very fashionable, indeed they are so appropriate to gowns of diaphanous materials and are given a glimmering illusion by means of the spangles which glitter over most of them. Especially popular among lace fans are those made of princess or Prince Henry lace, a delicate mesh resembling somewhat very fine duchesse verging upon Devonshire point. Fans of lace are often made up with small shaped medallions of bolting cloth in them whereon are dainttily painted romantic scenes after the fashion of Watteau. Lace fans with neither painting nor spangles to relieve them are principally carried by brides and girls at commencement, although a fan of fine lace is always in good taste and also in very good fashion.

There is a subtle and seductive aroma about a fan of sandalwood, which accounts for its popularity. The fragrance of the richly carved and ornamented wood seems to blend into the prettiness of the fan and make of it almost a thing of life and quite a part of the woman who wields it. Fans of lace and of sandalwood, as well as those in the new Japanese and gauze spangled styles are all in medium sizes and shaped much like a clam shell. Fancy and odd styles in fans are not just now in vogue, while the charming bouquet fans are seldom carried except by young girls who want something of the kind to accompany a certain flowery style of dress.

Fans of sandalwood have the carved openwork sticks merely held together along the tops by a narrow ribbon, while all the other varieties of fans mentioned are made with sticks of sandalwood, except the paper Japanese kind. The sticks are invariably carved in open decorative patterns, as though the fragrant wood were converted into lace.

Ivory, shell, pearl and clouded amber take prominent places among sticks in handsome fans, while the Japanese wooden sticks are decorated elaborately with colored arabesques in gold or silver, and mingled colors that repeat the plan of decoration in the fan

Japanese fans are especially pretty in the new painted groups of figures and flowers mounted upon sheerest lace net or bolting cloth, which, everybody knows, is as thin as air. The effect is very charming where brightly attired geisha girls seem to stand out from the thin black screen which forms the groundwork of the fan. All manner of floral and rural designs are arranged in true Japanese fashion upon this type of fan, which will become more and more popular as the Spring advances and fans for every day become a necessity.

A great variety of fans made of lace, nets and bolting cloth, enriched with paintings, medallions, appliques and spangles in designs, are made up with sticks of the finer sort. These show all the attractions of fans of less expensive qualities, which are suitable for full dress purposes.

The old fashioned satin fan seems to have disappeared this season, and its place has been taken by the flimy, diaphanous affair which seems to harmonize better with the sheer and flimy garments worn by well gowned women

Quite a difference exists in the price of fans that are spangled and those which are not, and some girls buy plain fans and then sew spangles over a lace design lightly traced upon the fan. Spangles of gold or silver are best, but iridescent ones showing other colors or representing some one color in several shades to match a gown are very smart. A plain gauze fan can be made very rich looking by sewing on it a design in spangles and then adding a narrow lace edge along the top.

Nothing, however, in the whole galaxy of fans of lace, paper, gauze or decorated wood can compare in becomingness and beauty to the exclusive and ultra-fashionable ostrich feather fan which now forms one of a trio of graces in a woman's toilette.

White fans, of course, are most fashionable for evening use, but black ones are very evident and smart and are far better for the woman of small means to use. White ones are easily soiled, and when the time for cleaning comes the entire fan has to be taken to pieces in order that the feathers may be cleaned. This is naturally an expensive process and one not beneficial to the fan.

When a fan becomes flattened a bit from lying in its box ostrich feather dealers have a very simple process for bringing renewed curl into the feathers. They merely comb each feather stick with an ordinary comb, so curling preferably a comb with open teeth

Feather fans in every conceivable color are smart, but one must be sure that the fan exactly matches the gown or its trimmings, and a woman must needs be wealthy to indulge in a fan which may only be carried with one or two gowns. White or black fans on the contrary, may be carried with practically all gowns.

One of the pretty ways of making ostrich feather trimming is to have it in a curled fringe put on bands. These bands are then attached to the decolletage of a gown and to the sleeves and may also be curved in designs upon a skirt. They are wonderfully airy and delicate as a trimming. Clusters of three feathers upon a flounce at frequent intervals are among the most charming and, incidentally, most expensive of trimmings.

Another trimming effect is produced by overlapping feathers, as one sees them in fine boas. These, by the way, are going out of style and are not nearly as fashionable as the big, round fluffy boa of which one sees an increasing number as the season advances

The Ghost of Lochrain Castle

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Elspeth Dean obtains a [illegible] as typist at the great Scottish Hydro [illegible] of Lochrain Castle. On her journey from [illegible] in a first class compartment the [illegible] she travels with Lady Lambart and Lady Hilary Vane, her daughter. John Kenrith, the Lancashire millionaire, joins them and shows the ladies some [illegible] diamonds. At the station for Lochrain Elspeth Dean is met by one Grant, a clerk from the hotel, who drives her to the castle. On the way he explains that a room has been reserved for her in the tower and that it is haunted. Grant, however, absolutely declines to tell any story about the haunted room, although obviously there is one. Grant shows great admiration for the beautiful typist, but is not encouraged. The first night the girl was startled by a strange sound. Several drops, apparently of blood, fell from somewhere above. But the girl bravely controls her terror until morning, when she hears that a certain Captain Oxford was shot mysteriously during the night. Next day Lady Ardcliffe insists upon speaking to her. Lady Hilary also takes Elspeth into her confidence, confessing she is in love with Captain Oxford, and asking for information about the mysterious shooting. That night Elspeth confronts the ghost in her room and tries to pursue it, believing it to be a living man. It escapes and she tries to find out who it might be. Next day Grant proposes to Elspeth, saying that he must have her love and co-operation.

"THEN I am afraid you will have to work alone, or at least without me," said Elspeth, "for I can only be bound to you as a friend."

She spoke decidedly, and a dark flush mounted to the roots of the young man's hair. He was not only deeply disappointed, but embittered by his disappointment, and Elspeth was half alarmed by the angry, thwarted look in his eyes. She could not doubt that he had really been attracted by her, that he fancied himself in love with her, if nothing more; yet she felt dimly that love denied would not be enough to bring that look to his face. Evidently he considered her help very necessary in some undertaking important to his interests, and was almost inclined to ask for it, though she had just refused to be engaged to him.

"I believe you will change your mind yet!" he exclaimed. "I must have you."

"You know, if you are going to persist in talking to me like this," said Elspeth, "I shall be driven away from Lochrain, though I very much wish to stay here. Do be kind and leave me to myself now. You have excited me a good deal and made my headache worse. I must get at my work."

"I told you I wasn't going to let you work this morning," returned Grant, almost fiercely. "Go to your room or take a walk—do anything you choose, except work. I will do everything myself."

"I can't have you doing my work," said Elspeth, "less than ever after what you've said." She would have sat down at the desk, but Grant came between her and the chair, moving it away.

"You want to hurt my feelings, I see," he said. "If you didn't, you'd be willing to accept a small favor like that from me."

It was now Elspeth's turn to hesitate, for, odd as his manner seemed to her, she did not wish to be ungenerous. "Oh, very well," she answered. "I will leave most of it to you, since you are so kind, if you will promise after this to act as if nothing had happened between us."

"I'll do my best," replied Grant.

"Thank you. Then I'll just get things in shape here." She drew toward the desk again, but still the young man kept her back.

"If you must interest yourself in these things, take a few letters up to your room," said he. "I can work faster if I'm alone."

Elspeth made no objection to this proposal, which indeed was a relief to her, for she was far from anxious to remain in Mr. Grant's society, especially after what had passed. But she was somewhat surprised at the evident satisfaction he felt at being taken at his word. He did not express this, except by his face, yet it set Elspeth wondering. Had his offer to help her, and let her rest, not been made entirely for disinterested reasons then? Did he wish to get her out of the way, and have the room to himself?

In any case, the girl thought, it was not her affair, and she was glad to go, without further argument. She gathered up a few letters, took her own typewriter, which she had brought down as usual, and went away.

It was true, she had been very tired and slack, but the excitement of the little scene she had just now passed through, had stimulated her, and for the moment she felt as fresh as if she had slept well, with never a dream, throughout the night. She typed the letters which she was able to answer herself, through the knowledge of Mr. McGowan's wishes, and then, as she was not in the mood for reading, she made up her mind to take a walk before it should be time to begin work for Mr. Kenrith. Somehow, she wished to be feeling and looking her best when she went to him, though, of course, as she scornfully reminded herself, her appearance was less than nothing to him, and the best thought she could hope for from him was that she served his purpose as a secretary well enough.

The girl brought downstairs the letters she had finished and as she thought by this time Mr. Grant must have finished any work he wished to do alone in Mr. McGowan's office, she opened the door to leave the neatly directed envelopes on the desk there.

"You must work upon her ambition," were the first words she heard as she entered, spoken in a voice she knew. "Once engaged in the work she daren't"—

Silence instantly followed the opening of the door and Elspeth saw Mr. Trowbridge standing talking with James Grant. The American—if American he was—showed no confusion, but Grant started and frowned.

"There!" exclaimed Trowbridge. "Speaking of angels! Now the cat's out of the bag. Miss Dean will guess that you have confided your troubles to me, my friend, and that I've been trying to give you good advice how to win her. I do hope you don't mind, Miss Dean. You've no idea what an interest I take in love affairs, and yours"—

"I have none," said the girl coldly.

"Well, Mr. Grant here has, and he's an excellent chap. He has done me no end of little favors since I arrived in this hotel, and, by Jove, I'm going to make his fiancee a handsome present, when he gets one. I've more money than I know what to do with, unfortunately, so"—

"Perhaps, when Mr. Grant has a fiancee she will be willing to let you spend some of it on a present for her," cut in Elspeth, "but her affairs and mine have no connection with each other."

She laid down the letters on the desk and without another word went out. But there was a deeper emotion in her mind than vexation with the American millionaire's officiousness, or with James Grant for taking her name in vain.

"What could they have been talking about?" she asked herself. "It must have been of me, or Mr. Grant wouldn't have looked embarrassed, but it wasn't what Mr. Trowbridge wanted me to believe. Once engaged in the work, she daren't'—were the words he was saying, and his voice sounded so eager and odd! What work was I to be engaged in, which would prevent me from daring—something? Oh, that 'scheme.' Mr. Grant wanted me to go in with, if I were bound to him, first, so that my interests and his would be the same. Can it be possible that it has anything to do with Mr. Trowbridge?"

This was too intricate a puzzle to be solved easily, and Elspeth thought it over so hard that when she returned from her short walk she was unrefreshed and more nervous than when she had started. She had gone a little farther than she had intended, and consequently was rather late for Mr. Kenrith. To reach the hotel in time, she walked very fast and tore her dress. Altogether, it did seem as if everything was bent upon going wrong this morning, and when she made several mistakes in taking down from Kenrith's dictation, for the first time since she had begun working for him, the last feather appeared to be added to her burden.

She grew red and white, and the tears rose to her eyes, stinging her lids so sharply that she had to bite her lip to keep them back. Then, in the midst of her distress, she saw that Kenrith was looking at her.

"My child," he said, "you are overworked. I have seen it for several days."

How different was his tone from James Grant's! This time, the girl's heart went out in gratitude, though the genuine concern of the man's manner made her long to cry comfortably.

"It's nothing," she faltered. "I'm very stupid."

"You are anything but stupid. You are very brave, and clever, too. I have a great respect for you, Miss Dean."

Now the girl dared not look up at him, the unshed tears hung so heavy in her eyes, and her heart was beating fast. How good he was—how kind, and how far, far away from her in spite of his sympathy and consideration.

"Tell me," he went on, "is anything worrying you? And if there is, couldn't you let me help?"

"I—I am quite happy, thank you, only a little tired," she said.

"Not homesick?"

"I have no home."

"Poor child. You are [illegible] to be fighting your own battles [illegible] in the world. You ought to have companionship and amusement. I don't [illegible] are out in the fresh air enough. Motoring would do you more good than anything."

Elspeth laughed.

"I'm not joking," Kenrith went on. "Do you like motoring?"

"I've never tried," said the girl. "I am sure I should love it, but I'm not very likely ever to find out by experience."

"You shall find out by experience this very day, if you will, in my motor. Instead of taking your usual walk—I know you do walk at a regular hour, for I've often seen you going out as I sat near my window—you shall have a run in my motor. I have been lending it to Captain Oxford since he has been able to get out, but he has a friend coming to see him this afternoon, it seems, and has just sent word to me that he won't be able to use the car. You shall go instead."

"Oh, thank you!" exclaimed Elspeth. "But—all alone, I"——

"No, not all alone. I'm sure Lady Hilary Vane will be delighted to go with you," said Kenrith, "and in that case I should be able to be of the party."

Elspeth realized quickly that for her sake he could not have gone with her alone, but with the two girls, his presence in his own car as host, could not arouse gossip in the most censorious clique. "It would be too glorious," said she. "But—but I don't think Lady Lambart would allow Lady Hilary to go."

"We shall see," replied Kenrith, with a determined look in his eyes, which told Elspeth that the chances were in favor of the expedition.

She finished her work with no further mistakes and left Kenrith's sitting room feeling singularly, unexplainably happy.

After lunch a note came up to Elspeth's room from Lady Hilary, with a heavy coat and a thick motor veil. "How nice!" said the letter.

"I am going out with you. Mr. Kenrith suggested that I should look up something warm and comfortable for you, in case you might not have come prepared for motoring and chilly emergencies of that sort. I hope the things I send may do. What a talk we shall have!"

Elspeth's heart was very warm towards Lady Hilary as she read the friendly note and put on the pretty coat, so much handsomer than any she had ever worn. She tied the long chiffon veil over her hat and found the big, fluffy bow under her chin very becoming. "I wonder if he'll like me?" she was asking herself as she went downstairs; and was so absorbed in her own thoughts that she had almost collided with the Countess Radepolskoi before she saw her coming up.

"Ah, how pretty you look," exclaimed the handsome woman. "You have the air of one who is to go motoring."

"I am going," Elspeth answered.

"I can guess," said the Countess. "You are driving down to the station in one of the hotel motors."

"No," answered the girl. "I have had a much pleasanter invitation than that and have accepted it."

Suddenly the woman's dark face changed and her eyes dilated with a look of horror. "It is not—you are not going with Captain Oxford in Mr. Kenrith's car?" she asked, in an odd, low voice.

"SUDDENLY THE WOMAN'S DARK FACE CHANGED AND HER EYES DILATED WITH A LOOK OF HORROR."

"Mr. Kenrith has invited me," Elspeth replied; then, remembering the conventionalities she added, "Lady Hilary Vane is going, too."

The Countess Radepolskoi's clear features seemed to freeze, and a curious glitter, like steel, lighted her eyes, bleakly.

"Lady Hilary is going?" she repeated. "Has—Mr. Trowbridge heard that—she is to be one of the party?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," said Elspeth, surprised. "I don't suppose he has. Why should he have been told?"

"Why, indeed?" echoed the Countess. "It—is a matter of no importance. It was only—a foolish little [illegible] of mine, as he seemed to be—rather interested in Lady Hilary Vane's movements of late. Let her go. I hope—she will have a pleasant drive. But you—I wish you would give it up, and spend an hour with me instead. I am in one of my bad moods. I am lonely. I should like your society. Make some excuse. Stop with me and I will see if I can't find something pretty for you—some little trinket"——

"You are too kind, Countess," said Elspeth, really grateful, though she would not have given up Kenrith's invitation for anything which could have been offered. "I'm so sorry you are [illegible], but you see I've promised, and if I didn't go, Lady Hilary would have to stop behind."

"Oh!" almost whispered the Countess. "Oh—if you didn't go, Lady Hilary would have to stop behind. Of course, in that case—I say no more. Good bye, child. I wish you luck. It will be a pleasant party: you, and Lady Hilary and Captain Oxford."

"Oh, Captain Oxford isn't going to-day," the girl explained hastily, for Hilary's sake, lest some trouble should be made with Lady Lambart.

"Not going!" the Countess cried sharply. [illegible] that she had [illegible] It was [illegible] and Elspeth wondered at [illegible] the [illegible] face.

CHAPTER VIII

"MY chauffeur has had a [illegible] night, it seems," said Kenrith [illegible] as the two girls in motor veils [illegible] appeared at the door. "He has [illegible] his hand and can't [illegible] to [illegible] you myself. You [illegible] be [illegible] [illegible] without [illegible], I'm a better driver [illegible] two."

He put the two girls [illegible] in the [illegible] of the car, which was [illegible] of the latest type, 40 horse power. [illegible] started the motor [illegible] took his place in the chauffeur's seat, and [illegible] they were [illegible] away down the long [illegible] avenue [illegible] castle and through the park. [illegible] had not gone far when they came in sight of Mr. Trowbridge walking leisurely toward the hotel. He looked up, saw the car, with Kenrith driving, and quickly his eyes flashed over the other occupants.

Neither of the girls wore veils heavy enough to disguise their features; they both bowed. Lady Hilary rather coldly and mechanically. Trowbridge snatched off his Panama. But seeing Lady Hilary in the car, instead of smiling in greeting, he grew ghastly pale, and, turning, shouted after the motor as it flew by him.

Elspeth caught the look of horror on his face, which reminded her of the expression she had seen Countess Radepolskoi wear when told that she, Elspeth, was going motoring in Mr. Kenrith's car. A chill crept through her veins, and she wondered greatly; but neither she nor her two companions heard Trowbridge shouting, "Stop—stop!" In the distance, a dog-cart was coming up the avenue, and Kenrith was loudly sounding a warning, so that the voice of the man who had turned to run after them was lost in the shrill noise of the horn.

The car passed the dog-cart and sped on past it through the park gates, and out into the public road.

"I thought of taking you to see the ruins of the old castle of Lochrain," said Kenrith over his shoulder. "It will be a good spin, and there's a little inn close by where they will give us tea. Oxford and I have been there once or twice."

The girls answered that that would be delightful, and Hilary began to tell Elspeth something of the history of the ruin they would see—an old stronghold destroyed in the days of Mary Stuart. But Elspeth scarcely heard the story, which would have held her interest at any other time. She had looked forward intensely to this afternoon's pleasure given her by Kenrith, and enjoyed with him so near her; but now that the experience had begun, it was spoiled for her by the strange thoughts which would come into her head. Why had the Countess looked so startled on hearing that she was to be in the car? Why had she tried to dissuade her from going, and only ceased her arguments when told that, if Elspeth stayed at home, Lady Hilary would no doubt be obliged to do so, too? Why had she laughed as if in amusement because Captain Oxford was not to be of the party, and why had she seemed almost savagely pleased to know that Lady Hilary would be in his place?

A voice within herself seemed to answer Elspeth's forebodings with a warning. A vague depression fell upon her. She felt a sense of responsibility, as if she ought to say something, do something while there was time to prevent a calamity. Still she kept silence. Mr. Kenrith would only think her foolish and cowardly if she said: "Please stop the motor. Because Countess Radepolskoi didn't want me to come out with you, and because Mr. Trowbridge looked distressed at seeing Lady Hilary in the car, I have a presentiment that something dreadful is going to happen." "Perhaps every one feels much the same when they are motoring for the first time," she told herself. "I have the idea that I should be glorying in it if it hadn't been for the Countess and Mr. Trowbridge; but maybe I shouldn't. Maybe this is only part of the experience."

Just at this instant Kenrith half turned his head for a second to ask: "How do you like it, Miss Dean? You're not frightened I hope?"

Then Elspeth felt that not for anything in the world would she have said "Yes. I think it's glorious," she answered bravely, though still the inward monitor whispered "Tell him to stop the car. Tell him to stop the car."

Now they were coming to a steep and winding descent, and all Kenrith's attention was needed for his driving. He spoke no more, and the girls were at liberty to be silent or talk together.

"You don't look very happy," Hilary said. "I believe you are terrified, after all. As for me, I don't think I should much care, provided I had only myself to think of, if Mr. Kenrith drove straight into that wall of rock just ahead."

"How can you say that!" exclaimed Elspeth. "You, who are so beautiful and young, and so much loved—you have every thing of the best that life can give."

"How little you know," answered Hilary bitterly. "What good does it do one to be young, if one has nothing to hope for, of joy in the future? What good to be loved, if one can't hope to spend one's days with those one cares for most?"

"There's always hope," replied Elspeth "until one is old."

"I feel old, though I'm not twenty yet," Hilary said. "I know I oughtn't to talk in this way to anyone, but I am so miserable, and if it were not for you, I should have no one to confide in. I should really be glad to die, unless unless——"

"Unless what?"

"Oh, unless I could suddenly come into a lot of money, or—find a few jewels like Mr. Kenrith's, which he showed us the other day. Then—then everything would be different."

"Are things worse than you have told me before?" asked Elspeth, sympathetically.

"A thousand times worse, if that could be possible. Mother and I are in dreadful difficulties. I don't know what is going to become of us. Any day—any hour the most awful disgrace may fall upon our heads and we shall be ruined forever."

"Can nothing be done?" implored Elspeth, forgetting all her own anxieties.

"I could do something—something I would far rather die than do."

"You mean"——

"I see you've guessed."

"May I speak out?"

"Yes. We're friends. You have done so much for me. Oh, you can't help me now—except by sympathy. But that's a great deal, when a girl is as wretched as I am."

"Your mother wants you to marry some rich man?"

"That would be nothing new. She brought me up for that. Once I didn't mind the thought so much, when—I cared for no one in particular, and—when it was only an abstract idea. But now, mother insists that it is my duty to say yes, at once, to a certain man."

"Mr. Trowbridge! Has he spoken already?"

"Last night he spoke to mother. She likes him tremendously. He told her all about his circumstances. He is very rich and he as good as told her that, if he once had my promise, he would help her in any way."

"You won't give it to him? You can't!" exclaimed Elspeth.

"I don't know what I shall do. I'm afraid I must. There seems no alternative. Oh, I would beg or steal, I believe, if I could only get the money which could save us in some other way."

Elspeth would have answered, would have tried to bid the girl have courage, and wait upon events, when suddenly the car swerved; there was a grinding crash of wood, a sensation, as if a wheel were giving way, an instant of cold fear with no desire to scream, and then—a cessation of everything. The world stopped for her.

* * * * * * *

"Is this death? Have I died, and solved the great mystery? Am I on the threshold of a new life?" Slowly, falteringly, the words formed themselves in Elspeth's brain.

She was conscious of no suffering; she scarcely remembered what she had passed through, yet the impression of some tremendous experience just undergone, floated dimly in her mind. Either her eyes were open, and she saw nothing but a soft green and golden light changing and pulsing, else it was an illusion, a waking dream.

"I must have died, for I seem to have no body," she told herself. "What has happened and what is coming next?"

Thaw—Money on Trial for Murder

A Case New in Our History, and New in the World's Record of Celebrated Cases. Money Takes the Place of Mystery

EVERY thinking man and woman in the United States is interested in the progress of the trial of young Mr. Thaw for murder. This is not merely a murder trial. Our modern civilization is on trial, our scheme of inherited wealth is on trial, the morality, the standards of our day are on trial.

The Thaw case, which concentrates the attention of this country and of the world, is an event of historical interest. It is not merely a little movement of the second hand of time ticking off news events.

There have been in the world's history many famous trials. Among those that come to the mind are the trial of Dreyfus, of which the basis was race and religious hatred.

The trial of Warren Hastings was made famous by the eloquence of Burke and the descriptive power of Macaulay. This trial was based upon the tendency of powerful nations and their representatives to exploit and abuse the weak.

The trial of traitors, spies and suspected generals have been famous and almost innumerable. Patriotism and the love of fighting make those trials important.

The great trials of the French Revolution, during which one leader after another sent his enemy to the scaffold, and in his turn was sent there, illustrate brilliantly the passions of political strife, and of revolutionary hatred.

Here in America, of late years, our minds have been fixed, chiefly as newspaper devourers, upon "famous trials" of a lower order. We had the Nathan trial, a murder of mystery. We had the Lizzie Borden trial, dreadful in its mysterious complications, and, like the Nathan trial, still a mystery.

We have had the innumerable trials in which cunning and poison seeks to destroy life and evade the law, as in the case of Carlyle Harris.

This Thaw trial is something new in America. Its records will be studied centuries from now, if historians care to get an accurate idea of that condition of life which we are pleased to call "our civilization."

The centre of attraction in the courtroom is not the man accused of murder, but his wife—a frail, young and beautiful some woman. Our artist presents this young woman as a sphinx, with money piled up around her, facing the law. The millions ARE piled around the young girl's tastefully dressed form, and those millions are working to defend the husband. But there is nothing sphinx-like in the young woman. Her story is simple enough.

The law forbids the killing of one human being by another. And it permits NO JUSTIFICATION WHATEVER. Yet human beings and human nature ignore the law, when the law IGNORES them.

And in this murder trial it is already made clear that the efforts of the lawyers defending Thaw will be to prove by Thaw's wife and others that it was a meritorious act to kill the dead man.

There are three important figures in the case. Out in the graveyard lies the man who was shot dead. HE WAS TYPICAL OF OUR CIVILIZATION; fortunately, however, he was typical of a very SMALL class only.

There is the young woman, whose good looks, with her husband's millions, attract the crowd.

She is typical in her way of American life. Her testimony proves that money can destroy moral life to-day, as it has been able to do since history began.

The third figure in the case is the man on trial for murder. He represents inherited wealth, he represents lack of self-control, and ignorance as to the meaning of life. He sits with a puzzled look as his lawyers argue. He seems to miss from his fingers the pen, that hitherto has solved all his problems with the signing of a check. He has never learned to act, only to express his ungoverned feeling. The tears roll down his face, as his wife confesses her own story, and tells of her girlhood, begging Stanford not to come to see her. These tears make it clear to the lawyers defending that they are going to have hard work to get that conviction which their reputations demand.

One of our earnest readers, a member of the Reverend Dr. Lorin Parkside Proudfoot's church in Brooklyn, has put to the editor this question

"Will not the historian in the future, looking back on this Thaw trial, declare that human beings of this twentieth century are as low in morals as they were two thousand or more years ago?"

Fortunately, we can answer that question with a decisive "No."

Men are still foolish, inasmuch as they struggle to leave to their children unrest with to ruin their boys and make their daughters victims of selfish intrigues and lying protestations.

But, while we still in misguided affection leave great wealth to children, WE DO CONTROL THE THINGS THAT THEY CAN DO WITH THAT WEALTH.

Some centuries ago a young man as rich as Thaw must have committed, not one murder, but a thousand, without finding himself seriously embarrassed or deprived of his liberty for one day.

Further back still, it might have been his daily amusement to have men murder each other before him. And he might have descended into the arena to kill and satisfy his own love of destroying life. It is to the credit of our day that it takes so great an interest in crime against life and against morality that only a short time ago would have been merely commonplace.

The story of Thaw's wife is sad and depressing. It is a dreadful thing to know that a young girl, poor and friendless, lacking for exceptional moral strength to defend herself, should be made the victim of heartless men.

But in that respect also the world has improved. It is at least recognized as a crime against the law and a crime against human decency to injure a defenceless human being as Evelyn Nesbit was injured.

It is discouraging to read the charges made against Stanford White, a man of power, of intellect and real achievements.

It is horrible that he should have been treated as a man, much less as a friend, by those that knew the life he led.

And yet, we can at least say that such men are rarer in our day than they were. The crimes they commit against womanhood are recognized AS CRIMES. Not so many years back in the world's history, Stanford White might have BOUGHT a dozen or a hundred Evelyn Nesbits, at so many dollars apiece, had he chosen to do so. In order to take advantage of the poverty, and ignorance, and helplessness of a young girl to-day, a man must BREAK OUR LAWS. And, in addition, as many of our murder trials have shown, HE MUST PUT HIMSELF ABSOLUTELY OUTSIDE THE LAW, OUTSIDE THE PALE OF ITS PROTECTION.

While we reflect upon the improvement in human conditions as the result of education there is still much room for improvement. We know how and how little the human truths which the trial brings to light.

We know that the superficial and often almost wealth society that is not penalized at all by our present laws and prospects in the next. This trial is full of lessons for rich [illegible] and [illegible]. It is also a WARNING for poor mothers and [illegible].

Fortunately, it is possible to say with absolute certainty that one fact is taking its place. REGARDLESS OF THE WEALTH OF THE MAN ON TRIAL.

That is to our credit as a civilized people. The lawyers defending Thaw themselves confessed in the suggestions that jurors be secured from all parts of the country during the course of the trial. And while this is not very much of a compliment to these jurymen, but rather an insult to their many good and true," it certainly shows the desire on the part of the man accused of murder to be tried on his merits.

The plea of insanity which is made by the man's lawyers is an interesting one episode. This plea alone makes it possible to introduce the evidence that will tell the jury what Thaw has to say as an excuse for the killing. No evidence excusing murder can be admitted. His lawyers say, "The man is crazy. You must permit us to tell you the things that he heard and that made him crazy." And in that way only they are able to put before the jury the story of the wife, the accusations she makes against the dead man, and the provocation under which Thaw lived.

From the lawyers' point of view, the case is interesting because of the skill with which it is conducted by the leading lawyer for the defence, Delmas of California. This man, who now stands out as perhaps the most powerful man in the country before a jury, is writing in our law practice a new chapter, that the young lawyers of the future will study. And not only lawyers, but the public in general, will be interested when the time comes for Delmas to say to the jury, in other words, but perfectly plainly:

"I called my client insane. I admit that he did the killing. My real defense to you is simply this question: WHICH ONE OF YOU WOULD NOT HAVE DONE THE SAME UNDER THE SAME CIRCUMSTANCES?"

A boy spoiled from his babyhood by excessive wealth, a girl wretchedly unfortunate in the fact that she was beautiful and poor, a dead man whose friends have not dared to speak for him, a jury, who, if the defence is to be victorious, must be convinced THAT THEY, TOO, WOULD HAVE KILLED STANFORD WHITE—

This, with MONEY in place of MYSTERY, is the foundation of a famous case watched by the whole world.

THE REAL AND THE UNREAL

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"HOW do you keep your illusions?" writes a friend who is in trouble. "I, too, have had my illusions about life, but they have flown before the hard facts of reality."

Just what people mean by this much-used word "illusions" I do not know. Each one seems to give it an individual significance.

Hope, courage, happiness, love, friendship, success, pleasure, health, beauty, usefulness, fame—I have heard them all called illusions, separately and collectively.

My friend has known much of the ebb of life. She has always possessed comfortable means, and for the greater part of her life has enjoyed wealth. She has loved and been loved; she has talents which she uses for her own pleasure, and she has travelled widely and known interesting people. She has helped relatives and friends. But now, that sickness and trouble have come to her door, she thinks life has lost its "illusion."

We may as well say that the earth has lost its light because we are passing through a tunnel on a train.

The illusion of the average mind, it seems to me, is the idea that nothing but gayety and amusement is worth while. That only when we laugh do we live.

But is there not a deeper experience gained through tears than through eternal smiles?

Do we not oftimes learn more of real value to our after lives in a week of sorrow than in a year of happiness?

It is an "illusion" to imagine we are put on earth to do nothing but amuse ourselves.

Earth is not a vaudeville, nor are we engaged by the Great Manager to do a continuous song and dance.

Earth is a Great School, and we are pupils, learning the lessons which will be of value throughout all eternity in successions of life to come.

The lessons are interspersed with amusement. We have our "recess" and noon hours, our vacations, our play hours, our sports, games and dances. But always the Great Master remembers the higher purpose of our lives, and the bell is sounded for our return to the class.

The wise pupil goes bravely and knows the lessons are important. That is why he is in school—to learn, to acquire knowledge, to grow. However hard the tasks, he must accept them and profit by them.

The weak pupil is the one who weeps and rebels against his cruel fate in having to return to his lessons.

He has dwelt in the illusion; that vacation and its amusements were the purpose of life.

The hard reality of study is painful. No one, no other pupil, he is sure, ever faced such difficult problems.

So he goes complaining and unhappy through the school season, and knows no more at the end of the term than at its beginning. He is "disillusioned."

The wise scholar meantime keeps his illusion, because his illusion is the reality; the severe study of school is a pleasure; fatigue brings its own reward, and in the anticipation of increased powers there is satisfaction in the struggle with difficult lessons.

Never yet was a sorrow sent to a mortal soul that was not meant as a lesson, the learning of which would lead to higher possibilities of happiness here or elsewhere. Any other view of sorrow and trouble is an "illusion."

I mean the inevitable sorrows and troubles which are not of our own making. And surely those which are of our creation carry with them, like blazing headlines, their own meaning.

The man who celebrates an event with an orgie wakes with a headache.

He has lost the "illusion" of the previous night, that there was joy in being intoxicated. But he is just so much wiser for the future if he chooses to commit the lesson to heart.

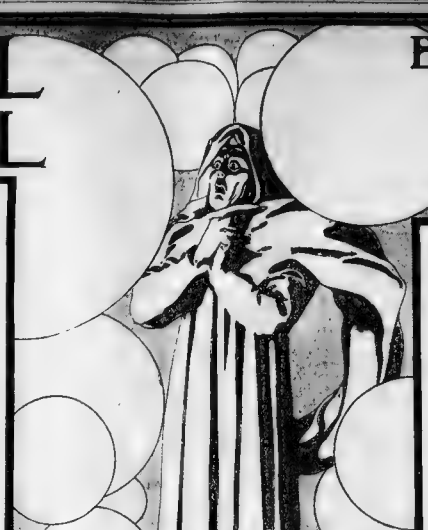
The man who risks his fortune on the gambling table and loses bids adieu to another illusion. In the stubborn fact of labor he may find the real meaning of life and its best happiness if he will.

"There is a pall over everything," writes my friend. "No outside pleasures seem possible again. I feel life is nearing its end, so far as happiness is concerned."

She fails to understand that when we are shut in by a pall of sorrow it is meant that we should look within our own souls and find light.

And when we see this light, then will life glow with an "illusion" never before seen, or imagined.

And after the pall of sorrow is lifted (as it almost invariably is, in this ever-changing existence) that new "illusion" will lend its radiance to every humble event, and enable the human heart to find unexpected joys in a thousand ways, down the sloping path of the western hill to the sunset horizon. And beyond—lies the great fact, where we shall look back and say, "It was all illusion! This is the reality!"



ILLUSION

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

GOD and I in space alone
And nobody else in view.
"And where are the people, O! Lord," I said,
"The earth below, and the sky o'erhead
And the dead whom once I knew?"

"That was a dream," God smiled and said,
"A dream that seemed to be true.
There were no people, living or dead,
There was no earth, and no sky o'erhead;
There was only myself—in you."

"Why do I feel no fear," I asked,
"Meeting you here this way,
For I have sinned I know full well;
And is there heaven, and is there hell,
And is this the judgment day?"

"Say, those were but dreams," the great God said,
"Dreams, that have ceased to be.
There are no such things as fear or sin,
There is no you—you never have been—
There is nothing at all but ME."

Remarkable Star Dances

By Garrett P. Serviss

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal Examiner.

THE most picturesque results of recent astronomical studies is the revelation of a surprising number of stars which alternately approach and then advance or retreat with astonishing changes of velocity, at one time rushing earthward at the rate of perhaps twenty miles per second, and then arresting themselves and reducing their speed to only three or four miles per second.

These erratic dancing stars are found in all parts of the sky. Some of them, in spite of their changes or variations of velocity, are gradually drawing nearing to us, while others are moving away.

Among them is included one of the greatest stars in the heavens, the fiery red Antares, in the constellation Scorpio. This huge orb, which is known to be many times brighter than our sun, has been found at times to be approaching the earth with a speed of about a mile and a quarter per second and at other times to be retreating at as much as three and a half miles per second. Upon the whole Antares appears to be receding into the depths of space.

The swifter motions mentioned above have been detected among smaller stars, some of which probably possess less intrinsic brightness and a smaller mass than our sun.

The fact that all the stars are in motion, some going one way and some another, has long been known, but the peculiar motions here referred to have a different origin. The only explanation suggested for them is that the stars thus affected by what seems a kind of dance craze are in all cases double—that is to say, there are really two stars concerned, where only one is visible, and it is the revolution of the visible star around the centre of gravity common to it and its unseen companion which causes the alternate advance and retreat, or the successive quickening and retardation of the motion.

In the diagram here appended the effect described is graphically shown. Suppose that the star under observation is one of those which, upon the whole, is approaching the earth, but which at certain times appears to be receding. It must be supposed to have a very massive invisible companion, heavier than itself. The two revolve around one another in a plane nearly coincident with the line of sight from the earth. The consequence is that they are, alternately, on opposite sides of that line. When one is retreating from us in its orbit, the other is simultaneously approaching.

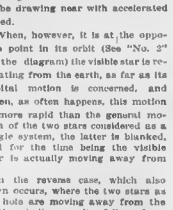
But we see the light of one only, the other being invisible. Consequently at such times as the visible star is swinging in its orbit toward the earth (See No. 1 in the diagram) its orbital motion is superadded to the general motion of approach of both stars, and it seems to be drawing near with accelerated speed.

When, however, it is at the opposite point in its orbit (See "No. 2" in the diagram) the visible star is retreating from the earth, as far as its orbital motion is concerned, and when, as often happens, this motion is more rapid than the general motion of the two stars considered as a single system, the latter is blanked, and for the time being the visible star is actually moving away from us.

In the reverse case, which also often occurs, where the two stars as a whole are moving away from the earth, similar results follow from the orbital motion of the visible star. In those cases in which the direction of motion does not appear reversed, but only a change of speed, either if approach or recession occurs, the explanation is found in the fact that the orbital motion is not so swift as the general motion, the consequence being that at one time it seems to accelerate the latter and at other times to retard it, but never to overcome it.

There are two proofs that stars possessing these motions really are, as the explanation suggests, double stars. The first proof is direct, and is found in the fact that some of them can actually be seen double with telescopes, the dark star being entirely without light. The second proof comes from the spectroscope, which, by analyzing the light of the visible star, reveals the shifting of the spectral lines caused by its to and fro movements and furnishes data by means of which the motions of the two stars may be disentangled. This proof depends, of course, upon inference, but it fits in so exactly with observed facts that its validity cannot be doubted.

No. 1—The bright star's orbital motion being superadded to the general motion toward the earth, both stars become very rapid.



No. 2—The bright star's orbital motion being subtracted from the general motion toward the earth, and being swifter than the latter, causes the star for the time being to retreat from the earth.

Different Othellos

By Clara Morris

SHAKESPEARE should be as clear as crystal, one would think, to the sympathetic student and still scarcely any two actors understand him alike. It would seem impossible, were not the fact familiar, that critics have discussed for nearly three centuries whether Hamlet's madness was felt or feigned and would believe the tragedy of Othello could be misapprehended, yet some scholars still wonder at Iago's motive for exciting the baseless jealousy of the Moor.

The interpretations which Signor Salvini and Mr. Edwin Booth each gave to the Moor formed great contrasted pictures of that tragedy. They showed me—for I had the good fortune to play opposite to both—the different results which artists of different temperaments and training frequently produce, although they have labored under the same inspiration.

Miss Cushman, who heralded the coming of Salvini to America, pronounced him the greatest living actor, and, dwelling particularly on his Othello, pronounced it without compare. "So original that it might seem his conception came rather from self-consciousness than study of the theme. But he has not in the least neglected his author—or, I might say authors, for has he not the work of Giovanni Cinthio, from whom Shakespeare borrowed his plot—and has so absorbed the pages of the play that he has discovered the true meaning below the characters. His big theories and his noble analyses of his own, as every true actor should, and he makes Othello a civilized barbarian."

Listen to this close study, as Salvini afterward told it to us: Othello is a union of dissimilar natures. All that we know of his birth is "that it is fetched from men of royal siege." How he became a Christian we are not told, but it is certain that he must have passed his childhood in a harem, thus acquiring with his earlier impressions the jealousy and suspicion respecting women, and the domestic despotism of a manhood are military, and we find him at the opening of the play "somewhat declined in the vale of years," a grave and dignified soldier, all the barbarism obliterated. When summoned to the Senate he pleads his cause with consummate moderation and skill, accepts the commands to drive the Turks from Cyprus with modest self-reliance, and willingly obeys the order for instant departure.

With cause gained, he is about to retire with Desdemona, when Brabantio says:

Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to see;
She has deceived her father, and may thee.

Salvini started here as though pricked by a poignard; his eyes fairly blazed, his bosom heaved; the man for the moment looked savage. The point was most dramatically made—perhaps the best of his whole performance, for what came after was but the proper sequence of that fear, the keynote of the tragedy.

Often when Salvini sat on that ottoman, near the footlights, and Iago was goading him on, his face turned livid through his makeup, took the form of welts and knots, which gave it a tuncated and volcanic appearance. In these turbulent transports he left all competitors behind him save Edward Forrest.

The long continuance of Edwin Booth's Othello in the service of the Venetian State had educated and refined him, and humanized and softened his stern heart. The commerce and power, the civilization and art and architecture of Venice had all entered his soul—for Booth gave him a soul and sharpened his moral and intellectual perceptions. Booth's Othello loved one woman out of all the world, who so twined herself about his affections that even after he thought her false he could not quench his love.

But I cannot take more space to dwell upon the different effects produced in the death scene, neither to add nor take from either picture. Salvini's or Booth's—the greatest Shakespearian actors the world has ever known; the one carnal in his treatment of the Moor, the other spiritual—which is Shakespeare?

A Short Cut to Fame (The Song Writer)

By William F. Kirk

"THE love lyric of to-day," observed the Song Writer, "lacks the punch. In the good old days, when Cleopatra stood on the terrace of her German castle and waved a passionate farewell to Henry the Eighth while he was returning to Moscow, love songs had real merit and strength. But the sentimental lyrics of to-day—nix on them!"

Although I had in mind at the time perhaps a dozen of the Song Writer's original love songs, some of which had enjoyed their brief hour of success, I didn't remind him of the fact. I let him spout.

"See here," continued the Song Writer, unrolling a piece of typewritten manuscript, "I'll show you a set of words that are all to the speedway. You won't find anything in this lyric to make you weep dimited tears and you won't be able to spot anything about the happy twilight of the long ago, where him and her strolled hand in hand beneath the harvest moon. You will notice, in glancing over the lines of this, my latest and best contribution to the song world, that while love breathes from every stanza it is love of the strong and primitive kind—forceful, heroic love such as the Trojan Hector lavished on his wife, Joan of Arc. I want you to write the music, and I want you to make it good and strong."

"Cleopatra waved a passionate farewell to Henry the Eighth."

The lyric is this:

MY HEART BEATS LIKE A PILE DRIVER.

I.

A tall and wide and heavy gent was hanging on the gate,
Handing a line of Almost-Talk to trusting little Kate.
They did not go inside her home to deal in sentiment,
For gas is worth a dollar, while hot air costs not a cent.
The maiden was a beauty with a drooping golden head,
And listened to his eloquence while happy tears she shed;
Then as he paused to get his breath and waited for the Gong,
"Describe your love for me," she said, "and make it good and strong."

CHORUS.

"I love you," said her heavy friend, "as flowers love the dew;
I love you like a Yankee loves the old Red, White and Blue;
I love you like a plunger loves the nag that races true—
My heart beats like a pile driver, and all for love of you."

"A tall and wide and heavy gent was hanging on the gate."

II.

The happy pair was married on a bright and sunny day,
Spliced by a Justice of the Peace at Hoboken, N. J.
For five long days no sorrow came their happiness to blur,
His heart kept right on beating like a pile driver for her.
Alas! Their dream of Eden was no more a dream when he Tried for some life insurance, and was told by the M. D.:
"Your heart beats like a pile driver; to-night you may be dead."
And now his sad young widder thinks of what he softly said:

CHORUS.

"I love you," said her heavy friend, "as flowers love the dew;
I love you like a Yankee loves the old Red, White and Blue;
I love you like a plunger loves the nag that races true—
My heart beats like a pile driver, and all for love of you."

Buxom Marie Dressler is in vaudeville, and at the Orpheum is to give her satire on Belasco's proteges, called, "Oh, Mr. Belasco." Houdini returns to Keith's. The stock companies put on strong plays and the variety houses all have new offerings. In fact, the plays that everybody has been saving up money for are here this week. What the Theatres Offer

Majestic Theatre

"Spontaneous laughter is Nature's language," is the axiom of Lew Fields and his all-star company which will present the musical concoction "About Town" at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow night for an engagement extending over Washington's Birthday, at which time they will give a special matinee. "About Town" is merely a musical absurdity but it serves to introduce the cleverest band of fun makers that has ever been gathered together. As the night hawk ... the consensus of opinion that Lew Fields is even funnier than he was in "It Happened in Nordland." Mr. Fields unquestionably has scored a great personal triumph, and the same may be said of Blanche Ring, Peter F. Dailey, George Beban, Edna Wallace Hopper, Harry Fisher, Louise Dresser and the balance of the remarkable cast of stars. The production, employing nearly 100 persons, most of whom are pretty singing and dancing girls, is said to be one of the most elaborate ever devised by Julian Mitchell. Thursday and Saturday matinees will be given, in addition to the extra matinee Washington's Birthday.

Park Theatre

Miss Hattie Williams will make her bow in her native city as a star at the Park Theatre to-morrow night. Hard work, charming personality, undoubted talent and more hard work, has brought to Miss Williams not only stellar honors but the distinct advantage of making her appearance under the management of Charles Frohman. Miss Williams is supported by seventy people, and the staging and costuming proved a delightful artistic ... to sated New York, when "The Little Cherub" was first produced there some seven months ago.

The engagement is for three weeks, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, and special matinee on Washington's birthday. The curtain will be raised promptly at 8 o'clock and 2 o'clock.

Tremont Theatre

To-morrow night at the Tremont Theatre Mary Mannering will begin a fortnight's engagement in "Glorious Betsy," the successful American play by Rida Johnson Young, author of "Brown of Harvard." In it Miss Mannering is said to have achieved the greatest success of her career. "Glorious Betsy" deals with the life story of Elizabeth Patterson, probably the most famous belle of the early days of the American Republic. Famous equally for her beauty, her wit and her daring, she was the toast of every notable gathering from Baltimore to New Orleans. The play deals principally with her romantic meeting and marriage with Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, who had just been proclaimed Emperor of the French. In the company surrounding Miss Mannering are Robert Warwick, Douglas J. Wood, Herbert Carr, Wallace Shaw, E. J. de Varney, H. S. Hadfield, Edward Earle, Edgar Baume, Harold de Becker, Reginald Barlow, James A. Dickson, William Boneill, J. Edward Trevor, Theodore MacLean, Misses Adora Andrews, Maud Hosford, Gertrude Clemens and Alice Butler.

Colonial Theatre

Otis Skinner's annual engagement at the Colonial this year is in "The Duel," a play that had long runs in Paris, Berlin, New York and Chicago. It is the work of Henri Lavedan. "The Duel" is so strong and appealing in its dramatic interest that, in the language of the press agent, it may be characterized as a play for the masses. Mr. Skinner's role is that of a young priest, a religious enthusiast, who finds himself the antagonist of his brother in the conflict for the soul of a woman. The situation is novel, and is treated with tremendous power, both by the playwright and the players. Mr. Skinner's company this season includes that time-tried veteran, Charles Walcot; Walter Hitchcock, a handsome young leading man; Alfred Hudson, Jr., Walter Ladd and Miss Keith Wakeman, an American actress who has a score of London successes to her credit.

"The World—And His Wife"

One of the most interesting theatrical events of the week will be the special performance of "The World—And His Wife," which William Faversham will give at the Hollis Street Theatre on Tuesday afternoon. This new play is an adaptation by Charles Frederic Nirdlinger of "El Gran Galeoto," the most brilliant work of the ... illustrious living Spanish dramatist, Jose Echegaray. "The World—And His Wife" is a powerful exposition of the evils of calumnious gossip. Mr. Faversham has engaged a special cast for this performance which includes H. Cooper Cliffe, Morton Selten, Frederick Murray, Harry Redding, Hugo Toland, Bertram Marburgh, Frank Bixby, Julie Opp, Alida Courtelyou. The proceeds of this matinee go to benefit the Students' House.

Keith's Theatre

This week is a notable one in the history of Keith's Theatre, for it marks the return of Houdini for a special engagement of twelve performances, the last he will give here for two years. Houdini has accepted enough challenges to permit of his attempting one or more feats at every appearance. Several of the special stunts will be different from any one he has ever tried. Edwin Stevens, character actor, comes in a new sketch portraying personages in the novels of Dickens, making up in sight of the audience. "What Will Happen Next?" a ... farce played by Wilfred Clarke, Theo Carew, Eleanor De Mott and Archie Gillies; the Colonial Septette, musical act; "The Somewhat Different Comedian," George H. Wood; Holcombe, Curtis and company in "The Alphabet Class"; the Onlaw Trio, equilibrists; the Frazer Trio, in national dances; Herbert, the frogman contortionist; the Sawadas, ... acrobats; Conlon and Hastings in a lively sketch; Tyson and Brown in ... on roller skates, and the kinetograph complete the program.

DANIEL SULLY AT THE GLOBE

Orpheum Theatre

Marie Dressler is the high card in the vaudeville bill at the Orpheum this week in her very funny skit "Oh, Mr. Belasco," in which she burlesques the stars of the Belasco regime and shows up their peculiarities and personal characteristics in a most amusing fashion. Another strong attraction will be the amusing comedy "The Piker," presented by Eddie Clarke and the six winning widows which has been a laughing success elsewhere. Others are Girard and Gardner in their original comedy skit; Chris Bruno and Mabel Russell, in "The Insurance Agent"; Matt Keefe and Tony Pearl, the yoddler and the harpist; the Seven Samols, Oriental acrobats; Madge Maitland, dainty comedienne; the Martin Brothers, xylophone solos, and the Kratons in hoop rolling. The usual vitagraph novelties will conclude the bill.

Castle Square Theatre

Once again "Little Em'ly," the famous dramatization of Dickens's "David Copperfield," is to be seen here. It will be produced at the Castle Square Theatre during the coming week, and it will bring to light all the famous characters and familiar scenes that have helped to make Dickens's name a household word. "Little Em'ly" is all the ... for not being a new play. It has stood ... of many years. The version to be used at the Castle Square is the same that held the Boston Museum stage for many years.

OTIS SKINNER IN "THE DUEL" AT THE COLONIAL — W. H. VAN BUREN IN "BEN HUR" AT THE BOSTON

Every member of the Castle Square company will have an important role. Howell Hansel will appear as Daniel Peggotty, Edward W... as Ham Peggotty, Shelley Hull as D... Copperfield, Mark Kent as Uriah Heep, ... Jansen as Mr. Micawber, John Waldron as Mr. Wickfield, Charles Miller as Steerforth, Louis Alldon as Traddles, Kate Ryan as Mrs. Micawber, Jane ... Rosa Dartle, Frances Brandt ... Lotwood and E... Laste ...

Bijou Theatre

"Innocent as a Lamb," a four-act farce by ... and W. Stokes Craven, will be the offering at the Bijou Theatre this week. There are many mirthful complications in which Tobias Pipkin, a ... broker with a penchant for whist, goes to Patterson when his family think he is in Boston. He is mistaken for another man, is assaulted, has his overcoat stolen and gets on a railroad train, and the rumor is started that he is killed. All of these are so ingeniously arranged that the merriment never ceases. The dialogue is bright and snappy, and Mr. Craig will set the piece in his usual good taste.

Hollis Street Theatre

William Faversham has only one week left of his engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre and next Saturday ... Boston's ... "The Squaw Man." When Boston likes ... and that has been exactly the case with this production. From the opening night the audiences have ... and the heartiness ... has shown conclusively ... Mr. Faversham ... of Jim Carston ... exile from England, taking upon himself the crime of another with all his bravery of soul. Mr. Faversham has some of the finest dramatic opportunities that he has ever enjoyed. Julie Opp is the Diana of the play, and again she shows her artistic charm and dramatic effectiveness.

MARY MANNERING AT THE TREMONT

MARIE DRESSLER AT THE ORPHEUM.

Thought Sully a Priest.

While Daniel Sully was playing his last engagement in Brockton, the famous fair was in progress, and it was demonstrated to him how much he resembles a priest, even when not in his character in "The Matchmaker." With his manager, Edward L. Bloom, Mr. Sully started to enter the arena where a "thrilling automobile feat" was to be pulled off. A Celtic policeman was stationed there to see that no one without a ticket entered. This particular Irish officer obeyed orders so strictly that he would not let his own brother pass without a ticket, but when Mr. Sully, who had no ticket, came within a few feet of him the officer raised his hat, said in true Irish style, "Good day, Father," and cleared the way for what he thought was a flesh and blood priest. Mr. Sully is playing the role of a priest at the Globe Theatre this week in "The Matchmaker."

Boston Theatre

The end of the phenomenally successful engagement of "Ben Hur" at the Boston Theatre is in sight. In fact, there remain just eight more performances, including the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, this week being the fifth and final week of the series. Already the advance sale for the week is the largest in the history of the Boston Theatre, an evidence that all New England recognizes the fact that the opportunity to witness this magnificent spectacle are becoming fewer and fewer. It is to be seen nowhere else in New England ... the production at the Boston Theatre is, by all odds, the most elaborate and beautiful that the great biblical play has yet received.

Globe Theatre

Daniel Sully, the cleverest interpreter of clerical roles on the American stage, has not been seen in Boston for six years, but he comes to the Globe on Monday in his new play, "The Matchmaker." It is a heart interest play of the Western frontier with a number of eccentric characters. Some of the greatest comedy situations are brought out by the association of the lovable priest with a waif of a girl who finds more trouble for him than the most troublesome Indian. "The Matchmaker" ... a very pretty love story, with enough of strong villainy to counterbalance it, but all ends well, and Father Daly hears the wedding bells ring out. Matinees will be given at the Globe on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday and every lady who attends Monday evening will be given a silver souvenir.

Grand Opera House

If it be true that "everybody loves a horse" and "all the world loves a lover," then the ultra-sensational conditions ... which Theodore Kremer introduces ... horse in his far Western melodrama, "A Race for Life," which comes again to the Grand Opera House this week ... heart stirring and ... which he portrays love and its ... make his ... even more popular and successful ... many predecessors. The scene is laid in that romantic California coast region buttressed by the picturesque Sierra Nevada range, and the culminating interest of the ... title is derived. Marie Fans plays the leading female role. She was at one time a member of the Castle Square stock company. "Chinese Johnny" W... as Hop Lee creates a "heap lot of funnee." Matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Columbia Theatre

Even the man who has ... knowledge of affairs in the burlesque world knows that Edmond Hayes stands preeminent as a comedian in this field of entertainment. "His Wise Guy" is as standard in its line as "Hamlet" is among the classics. Such being the case it will be a series of big houses at the Columbia this week to see the great comedian in the ... who is forced to impersonate an extremely rich father to an ambitious and adventurous daughter for the sake of "appearance." The "Jolly Girls" will dispense some tuneful songs and evolute some fetching dances during the action of the farce. In the company are Helen Jessie Moore, James J. Collins, Harriette Belmont, the De Kabers, the Four International Comiques and other well known varietyists. Steurs and Samson will compete in Tuesday night's wrestling bout.

Flashlights Upon Stageland

By "The Observer"

MARY MANNERING, that charming actress who comes to the Tremont to-morrow in "Glorious Betsy," is fond of outdoor life, and her principal diversions are golf, driving and automobiling. She does a prodigious amount of walking all the year round. Her love of nature is almost primitive in its intensity. I asked her once what was her greatest ambition, and she said it was "to lead such a normal life that I can get up every morning in time to see the sun rise." Often she will dismiss her carriage and revel in facing wind and weather, on foot. An acquaintance of mine accompanied her from the hotel to the theatre one March night in the teeth of a driving gale. The sidewalk was like the bed of a mountain stream and the wind made umbrellas a sarcasm. Miss Mannering enjoyed every step of the walk and reached the theatre in a gale of laughter and high spirits. It is the abundant vitality, this capacity for getting fun out of things which annoy or bore most people that gives a compelling charm to her art, and a rare, sweet vivacity to her personality.

AFTER three false alarm attempts to get away from Joe Weber's little music hall and his burlesquers, and at one time getting as far away as England, Marie Dressler has finally landed in vaudeville, and this week is to be the feature at the Orpheum here. Born in Canada as Leilo Koerber, Miss Dressler certainly had a varied career before she joined Joe Weber's forces. Her first engagement was as Katisha in "Mikado" with the Grau Opera Company; next she went with the Bennett-Moulton Opera Company, singing thirty-eight different roles. Her first appearance on the Great White Way was in 1892 in "The Robbers of the Rhine," then in "The Princess Nicotine," "Girofle-Girofla" and with Camille D'Arville in "Madeline." In 1895-6 she played Richard Harlowe's part of Queen Isabella in "1492," and after appearing in "The Stag Party" as Flo Honey Dew, in "Lady Slavey," "Hotel Topsy Turvey" and "The Man in the Moon," she started in "Miss Print" and "The King's Carnival."

HOUDINI defied the jails—now Volta defies the electric chair. They both have done it at Keith's. Houdini has done it also in various prisons, and Volta has offered to do it in the electric chair. I saw Volta one evening during the past week. He had currents of electricity shot through him that would illuminate a town—that is, if they had a municipal light plant. He lit a cigarette with an electric current from the tip of his finger. He lit gas jets with his tongue. He burned paper handkerchiefs with the sole of his foot. And to crown his act he held two pieces of iron in a vat of water and such a current of fire passed through him that the ends of the iron melted and dropped in red globules to the bottom.

Danderine

AND WE CAN

PROVE IT.

Little Frances Marie Knowlton is the daughter of Dr. E. W. Knowlton, the discoverer of this great hair-growing remedy, and her beautiful hair was grown wholly by the use of this great tonic.

This little girl had no more hair than the average child before using Danderine, while now she has the longest and most beautiful head of golden hair ever possessed by a child of her age in the world.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair producing remedy ever discovered. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c. bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made.

NOW at all druggists, in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

MANY NEW PLAYS TO OPEN IN BOSTON ON MONDAY.

List of Stars Scheduled Takes a Lot from Off the Top; Great Variety Is Offered in the Way of Amusement for Playgoers

Palace Theatre

The success of the continuous plan of entertainment at the Palace Theatre is now assured. Last week the house was crowded at every performance. The fact that "Charlie" Sutton has given the patrons more amusement for the size money in what has appeared in Boston travelling company this week is the fact that Charlie and Frank H. Bryan's Congress of American Girls. An excellent one includes the Pittman Girls, who also dance girls in historical groupings and rapid costume changes, the musical marvels, Delo and Walters, in "The Streets of Italy," the Ruppells, Fred Reeves, trick cycle battle act, Hayes and Wynn, the famous Martini Mimosa sisters from London, Ga Georgia, in a novel act, and the Lydells Six in "Five Little Dollies." Especially engaged for this holiday week are Charles Cutler, the talks comedian, Frankie Greene, prima donna soubrette; Frank Manning, Dutch comedian. The Palace vaudeville includes Gates and Nelson, comedy acrobats; the Julius brothers, Irish comedians, Dolan and Horne, travesty artists, Alice Barton, trick trial novelty, Moran and Wiser, comedy jugglers and Hamming hat throwers, Howard and Colby, illustrated songs, the Cycling Brothers, and Grace Lyons, comedienne.

Howard Athenaeum

Charmion comes to the Howard this week. This queen of sensational aerialists has hundreds of admiring lovers, and has a style distinctly her own, and will show some new stunts. Blake and Mitchell both have an original sketch, entitled "The Ladies' Interfering Society," said to be a screecher; then comes Sorry and Pitt, champions of cycling comedy, the Wald on brothers, in "The German and the Sport," Cavana, contortionist, on the wire; Campbell and Kenney, comedians; Mardo, clown juggler; Fazardaire and Bohme, eccentric slacking comedians; Facus and Merrian, Celtic humorists; Lydia Hall, black face comedienne; George K. Whales, baton juggler; Russell and Russell, vocalists and dancers, and the girls in "Peculiar Vaudettes."

Austin & Stone's Museum

Broncho John and his cowboys, soldiers scouts and Indians now exhibiting at Austin & Stone's will continue the headline feature at the museum another week in the company are Sammy Gesell, seventeen years old, rifle thrower; Oregon Charley, Stumpy Bob, Halfbreed Bobby, also Big Tex, Kentucky Frank, Mustang Seth, Mexican Jack, Colorado Charley and Curly the Rocky Mountain cuboy. New to-day, a real Indian Princess, also one of the features. Irwin, the man on the dancing ladder; Thil's Marionettes, Topp's Band and the giant snake are other attractions. Besides the "Minstrel Maids," a vaudeville there will be Martin and Ridgeway Sam Cole, the bagpiper, for the first time in fifteen years; Joseph Maxwell, in picturesongs, Jeanette Lifford, Hudson and Hall and new motion pictures.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"A Great Temptation" is the offering at the Bowdoin Square theatre this week. It is said to be a powerful melodrama abounding in thrilling situations, startling climaxes and having a strong vein of humor as the name implies. "A Great Temptation," deals in human interest. Alexander Gaden, who has won many success at this West End playhouse, will have the important role of Don Spencer. Irene Charlotte, a leading lady returned to the stage and will be seen in the lovable character of Cecile Willoughby. "A Great Temptation" is for one week only with a matinee every day, at which popular prices for ladies will rule. Friday night is Souvenir Night.

Lyceum Theatre

Lively and glittering Rose Hill Folly Company should prove a big drawing card at the Lyceum Theatre the coming week. This will be the first appearance of the company in this city at the present season. It has always been one of the best attractions of its kind. George W. Rice and the funmakers and those that have seen him previously will know what to expect from him. The production is said to be a most lavish one. There is plenty of clean comedy and musical numbers. Others in the cast include Mabel Lavere, Cain Evans and Wheeler, Tom Thomas, Patton and Van, Blanche Newton and twenty shapely girls.

Roller Skating

At the Park Square Rink Monday night there will be another of the no Wednesday evening professional basket ball game, and on Friday evening another big professional race meet. Both events will be held nightly, afternoon and evening as usual, and on Saturday afternoon children's session. Good music will be in attendance and no one should fail to make up a delightful visit to the colossal amusement garden.

Band of 350 to Play

Arrangements have been perfected for the great military band concert and ball of musicians, to be given in Mechanics' Hall Emil Mollenhauer will conduct, and the programme comprises many of the most popular selections of the great International Peace Jubilee in 1872, but little heard in military band concert in these days. The concert band, with Herbert L. Clarke, cornet soloist, will be drawn from the members of the Boston Musical Protective Association, for whose benefit the concert is being given. This association has given to the local public some good concerts this organization.

Miss Pasqualina DeVoe Hurt

Miss Pasqualina DeVoe, the Brahm girl who is starring in "Why Is Mrs. Sleeper?" at the Bowdoin Square, had her engagement at Fall River two years ago, also at Lowell, cut short on account of a broken ankle, in the result of which she was compelled to use crutches for a number of weeks. Monday was the first time she appeared on the stage since the accident, and has since been compelled to give up her part for two weeks on account of a sprained ankle and back.

Edward Wade's Night

There is no more popular singer of the Castle Square stock company than Edward Wade, and his complimentary testimonial next Tuesday evening should be the signal for an enormous audience to assemble to witness a play of Dixie. Tragedy in "Little Eva" will find Mr. Wade has been at the Castle Square for the past six seasons, and during all that time played a great variety of characters, but his specialty has been that of a boy, who, be given away at the Tuesday evening performance.

For Dorothea Dix Hall

A vaudeville entertainment and dance for the benefit of the Dorothea Dix Hall in Boston Common street will be given at Huntington Chambers Hall, Huntington avenue, next Tuesday evening by the same dramatic club made up of Dorothea Dix members. The play may be exhibited other all the West Newton street home or of the members.

Fight Views at Hub.

Lovers of the prize ring are to have a week of pleasure, for at the Lyn Theatre to-morrow the Miles Brothers' moving pictures reproduction of Tommy Burns and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien at the play in Los Angeles will be opened. There will be a matinee every day. The pictures are clearer than any that were ever taken of a fight before.

BEING A GOOD FELLOW ON THE "GREAT WHITE WAY" Spells Failure Says Trixie Friganza

By Eleanor Ames.

THIS is an Open Letter to Stage-Struck Girls.

Not a week passes that I do not receive letters from girls in various towns and cities of New England, asking me to point the way to stageland. The ambition of these girls does not strike me as ludicrous or absurd. There is nothing funny nor ridiculous in the fact of a girl who believes she has talent trying to find out whether there is any foundation for her self-belief.

If you never go near the water, how can you learn to swim? By the same reasoning, how can you tell whether you have the divine spark of dramatic fire in your makeup until you have stood on the magic other side of the footlights?

Experience may be a severe teacher but where in this human world can you find a better?

I believe that if a girl is serious in her desire to succeed in anything that she feels she has ability for, she will be a success, to a relative degree, for all success is relative. But I do not believe that every girl who writes me, asking how she can get on the stage, really feels that she has great dramatic ability.

I do not believe many of them would endure the hardships which lead to success. I may misjudge them, but I think a great many of the girls who say they want to "go on the stage" really want to get away from home and restraint and out into a world which seems to them to be made up of fine clothes and good times and applause.

And that is why, not knowing the girls, if I were to write personal answers to all these letters, I should read a lecture on the folly of being stage struck and advise them to stay at home and help mother or keep on in the work which lies nearest at hand.

At the same time, I believe that for the right kind of girl, who possesses the right qualities, the stage offers many inducements.

"Stage Struck Girls? Tell Them to Stay Home," She Made Reply.

Still, whatever opinion I might offer and whatever advice I might give, would be only the opinion and advice of a layman, without personal experience. So I have asked Trixie Friganza, who has been entertaining so delightfully this week at Keith's, to answer the question for me.

"How can a girl get on the stage?" I asked.

"Just go," she replied nonchalantly, patting the pink bow just above her dimpled elbow, "and she'll not be able to get a parlor car nor an automobile either," she added.

"Yes, I know," I argued, "but can't you give some advice to all the girls who write me these letters?"

"Yes," she replied. "Tell them to stay home."

Then she grew serious.

"Tell me," she demanded, "do these girls want to get on the stage or on to Broadway?

"Do they want to work harder than they ever worked before in all their lives, and deny themselves, and sacrifice everything for success? Or do they want to get into the glare of the Great White Way and use the stage as an excuse for being there?

"Have they got the grit and determination to get up after they've been knocked down by disappointment and clench their fists and shut their teeth and go at their work harder than ever? Or are they going to quit at the end of a month because they are in the back row of the chorus, and nobody knows they're there except that they fill a space?

"I know these stage-struck girls," she declared, nodding her head vigorously, "and there's an awful lot of fools among them."

"Let's eliminate those," I suggested, "and grant the existence of the serious ones. You know a girl has a right to an honest desire to be an actress, and having the desire, how can she get the chance?"

Trixie Friganza's piquant face brightened and her big eyes grew

"Bless their hearts!" she cried, with good-humored, loyal vehemence. "Of course they have the right, and I'm always glad to see them get the chance and willing to help them along."

She twisted the pink bridle of her lingerie that under her saucy chin, fluffed out the skirts of her dainty, exquisitely embroidered muslin gown and grew very serious.

"Opportunity," she declared solemnly, shaking her forefinger in emphasis, "is everything.

"Greater than genius? Mmh—yes, I almost believe it is. For if genius doesn't get the opportunity, how can you know it is genius?

"I believe in the chorus as a stepping stone. That's where I started, and I am glad of it.

"Now, there are several ways of getting in the chorus. You can hook everything you own and give your money to an elocution teacher if you are foolish. There you'll learn to bend your body and wave your hands and twist your feet to match your words and come out anything but natural, when the one thing you want to be is perfectly natural.

"Or you can just butt in on some manager who wants girls for the chorus and take your chance with the others. You can't be worse than some of them, and you may be better. If you have a little knowledge of Delsarte it will often come in use, for if you know enough to wave your hands the right way when everybody else waves them wrong, the stage manager may notice it. And if he should, and say, 'There's a bright girl; I'll watch her,' why you might some day get moved into the front row and perhaps get a line. However, Delsarte isn't necessary.

"Once in the chorus, however, watch the prima donna.

"Watch the prima donna! I can't make that too emphatic. She is a success. You want to be. You can learn by watching.

"And work! Work every minute that you are in the theatre, and study outside.

"Eat well, sleep well, keep your health and good looks."

"It's a Long, Weary Way from New England to Broadway."

"And that will lead to success and Broadway?" I murmured.

Again Miss Friganza settled the lingerie hat, and the sparkling smile faded from her face.

"Broadway!" she half whispered. "Ah, it's a long, long, weary way from a New England home to the centre of a Broadway stage! And God help you when you strike Broadway! It's the hardest game in the world! I've had my share of Broadway applause—they call me a Broadway favorite. New York is my home. I know it and love it. Yet I never worked so hard in all my life as I am working now, for the Broadway stage demands the hardest kind of work, if you would keep a foothold."

Suddenly she straightened herself, faced me squarely and looked very determined.

"It isn't the centre of the Broadway stage that the majority of stage-struck girls want. Broadway means to them all a blaze of light, music, song, life and gaiety. When they say 'Broadway' they don't see a theatre in their imagination.

"No, sir! They see a restaurant. They hear the music of a hotel orchestra and the popping of corks instead of honest applause.

"Honey, dear," and the great eyes were pleading and the voice soft with emotion, "it may sound as if I were posing, but it comes from the bottom of my heart.

"If I could send one message to stage-struck girls and chorus girls and all girls, it would be, 'Keep away from the Broadway restaurant.' The Broadway restaurant and trying to be a good fellow on the Great White Way has been the ruination of more women than anything else in the world.

"When you see a chorus girl with circles under her eyes and her eyes half closed and deep lines down by her nose, it isn't the result of hard work in a Broadway theatre. It is late hours in a Broadway restaurant that has done it.

No "Tearing Round of Pleasure" in Bitter Struggle for Success.

"No actress who has any ambition or any regard for herself can afford to be seen night after night in a Broadway cafe. No successful actress is seen there night after night. The managers won't stand for it. The public doesn't want its theatrical favorite always on parade. The actress of today knows that she can't afford to be seen all the time.

"I suppose these girls picture the life of an actress as a touring round of pleasure! I wish they could know the truth. Why, she lives the most secluded, quiet, domestic life—a life that the average woman would call deadly dull.

"The girls in the restaurant—what a story might be written of them! You don't see the same faces many weeks. They are constantly changing.

"Where do they go?

"I don't know. I've often wondered. I've looked at their careless faces and listened to their nervous, forced laughter, and said, 'What's your goal? What's your ambition?' You can't succeed without a goal. Nobody ever has. Nobody ever will.

"There were girls of all kinds in the chorus with me. Many of them I haven't seen nor heard of in years. But here are some of them: Hattie Williams, who comes to the Park just as I leave Keith's; Paula Edwardes, Grace George, Irene Bentley, Christie Macdonald—they were all chorus girls and they prove that the chorus girl can be a great big success.

"But they worked, every one of them, and they didn't spend their time in the restaurants. You've got to work if you stay in this business. Of course, you can't put it through it after a fashion but you'll never get anywhere."

Work Hard and Avoid the Great White Way, Strewn with Thousands of Wrecks

Vaudeville has offered to Trixie Friganza this season exactly the opportunity for rest that she needs. She works four weeks and then rests two, and meantime is perfecting plans for the future.

"Vaudeville," she declares, "is most exciting. Impress that upon your girls. In sixteen or eighteen minutes you've got to do a little of everything, make good at the start and keep the audience with you to the end. There's no gradually working up to a climax.

"And it's the chorus for the girls—"

"Yes, the chorus and hard work, and no wanderings on the Great White Way."

"Now there is Evelyn Nesbit Thaw—" I began.

"Please don't," she interrupted. "It's bing! there you are right at the have nothing to say. I've been describing Broadway life to you, haven't I? Well, such a tragedy seems a not illogical sequence.

Boston to See Many New Plays.

The dramatic event of the current season will be the engagement of Annie Russell at the Hollis Street Theatre, beginning Monday evening, February 18, as Puck in Wagenhals & Kemper's magnificent production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The entire production, one of the handsomest ever presented on broad way, and the company, numbering 127 people, will be brought from New York, where it won the approval not only of the playgoers who crowded the Astor Theatre to the doors at every performance, but also of the metropolitan critics, who were unanimous in the opinion that never in the memory of the present generation has there been a production of Shakespeare's best comedy on such a vast scale and with such a royal disregard for expense.

The play at the Hollis Theatre for the week of February 18 will be "Don Cæsar de Bazan," which pictures life in Spain in the eighteenth century. The play is full of romance and has not been acted here for some years.

Klaw & Erlanger will present Frank Pixley and Gustave Kerker's new musical comedy, "The Grand Mogul," in this city at the Colonial Theatre for a run beginning Monday, Feb. 25. The company is composed of nearly 100 people. Frank Moran, who achieved a reputation as the Sultan of Sulu, plays the principal role in "The Grand Mogul." The supporting company is headed by John Dunsmuir, George L. Moore, W. H. Macart, Sager Midgley, Swayne Hoxie, Eugene Moulton, Maude Lillian Berri, Pauline Thorne, Edith St. Clair, Carrie Reynolds and Pauline Norne.

Life in Montana has been drawn on in several successful instances for good American plays, but none have seen the footlights with brighter prospects of success artistically and financially, than the latest Montana drama, "Bedford's Hope," which appears at the Globe Theatre week of February 18. The story of this drama is about a gold mine. Special scenery and unusual effects help round out a worthy production. There will be a special matinee on Washington's Birthday. "The Cowboy Girl" is not a freak, but the game of the newest melodramatic musical fun play that is making an immense hit on tour. Lots of pretty chorus girls help make the show go with a dash. The comical character quartet, called "Your Dad Men from Kansas," is a big hit. "The Cowboy Girl" will be seen at the Grand Opera House as the attraction for next week, with an extra matinee on Friday, Washington's Birthday.

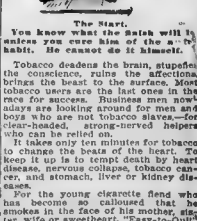
Tobacco Kills

An Absolute "Stopper" for the Brain-Killing, Nerve-Destroying Tobacco Habit Has Been Found.

You Can Try It Absolutely Free.

The tobacco habit is a curse, and every man knows it. Some "smart kids" don't know it. Most men would like to quit, if they knew they could do it "easy," without causing them discomfort.

"Easy-to-Quit" is a treatment that will make the smoker and the chewer absolutely quit for good the use of tobacco in any form.



The Start.

You know what the finish will be unless you cure him of the awful habit. He cannot do it himself.

Tobacco deadens the brain, stupefies the conscience, ruins the affections, brings the heart to the grave. Most tobacco users are the last ones in the race for success. Business men nowadays are looking for young men and boys who are not tobacco slaves,—for clear-headed, strong-nerved helpers who can be relied on.

It takes only ten minutes for tobacco to take possession of the habit. To keep it up is to tempt death by heart disease, nervous collapse, tobacco cancer, dyspepsia, liver and kidney diseases.

For the young cigarette fiend who has become so calloused that he smokes in the face of his mother, sister, wife or sweetheart, "Easy-to-Quit" is a salvation.

Mothers, save the young smoker's brain, he can't do it himself. Wives, sisters and sweethearts, help save the life and happiness of some one who is near and dear to you. Without your help he may die.

"Easy-to-Quit" is a positive, absolute "stopper" for the habit. It is not a substitute, but a remedy that any lady can use. It acts quickly and surely. It is harmless leaves no reaction or bad effects. It is sent on trial. Try it at our expense. Fill out blank lines in coupon below with name and address, and mail it to-day. It is free.

SAYS RHEUMATISM WEATHER IS HERE AND TELLS HOW TO AVOID THE DREAD DISEASE. WORTH SAVING.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. Every man, woman and child here should dress as warmly as possible and above all else keep the feet dry. Avoid colds and exposure and don't become constipated.

Rheumatism is strictly a blood disease, caused by inactive kidneys which, through cold or exposure or improper diet, fail in their duty of filtering the rheumatic poisons from the blood. This poisonous waste matter, uric acid, oxilate of lime, urea, etc. If not strained from the blood promptly, decomposes and settles about the joints and muscles causing rheumatic disease.

In damp or chilly cold weather the kidneys are liable to do double work. The pores of the skin all over the body do not assist in eliminating the poisons of the body, throwing this work to the kidneys, which become clogged and feeble, thus causing not only rheumatism but all forms of kidney troubles, backache, weak bladder and urinary troubles, and sometimes, terrible blood disorders, and even Bright's disease, dropsy, gravel or stone in the bladder.

Don't take backache too lightly, nor "frequent desire to urinate," either.

The following simple prescription should be mixed and taken in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Any good pharmacy can supply these ingredients and all the mixing required is to shake well in a bottle. This is entirely a vegetable prescription, making a harmless and inexpensive mixture.

There is no other medicine known which acts so favorably and promptly on the entire kidney structure and it does wonders for some people.

It will force the kidneys to take all the poisons out of the blood and makes new, healthy blood. It should also prevent rheumatism during the entire winter if taken a few doses on cold, bad days.

Every druggist here knows of this prescription, but the best way to do would be to purchase these drugs and mix them yourself. Anybody can.

Boston SOCIETY BUDS OF THE Season

Remarkable Camera Catches Never Before Published

MILDRED COX. RUTH WINSOR. MARGARET STIMSON. MAUD STURGIS. CATHERINE HIGGINSON. DOROTHY FAY

Plan Brilliant "Bud" Function in Honor of Pretty Margaret Pope

By a Society Woman.

As the curtains rises down upon the last scene of the social drama until Easter time, those who have held the centre of the stage are quickly making their exits, and preparing to appear in less strenuous roles in Southern Europe and other spi hends.

The air is full of "good-bys," and each outgoing steamer carries away scores of the fashionables who convert Lent with its leisure into the most charming of holiday seasons.

By far the most attractive of late "bud" functions will be the dance at the Country Club, Friday evening, Feb 15, which Mrs. Benjamin Pope of Beacon street, Brookline, is giving for her pretty blonde daughter, Margaret.

The ballroom at the club will be appropriately decorated, the scheme being carried out in the dance orders which will be adorned with hand-painted hunting scenes.

Miss Pope, like her sister Mildred, is a Farmington girl, and many of the guests will be from Philadelphia. The ushers will be Sinclair Bouvier, Winthrop Richmond and Willard Perker of Philadelphia, Ripley Gage and Gardiner Marion of Brookline and Neil aniel Maddison of Baltimore.

First of Season's Buds to Join Matrons

First among the season's buds to don bridal attire will be dainty Emma Atherton, whose engagement to John Lawrence, son of Amory Lawrence of Commonwealth avenue, was announced three weeks ago and who is to be married early in March.

The winsome and youthful bride is a daughter of Mrs. George E. Atherton (Isabelle King Ray) of Marlboro street, and is counted one of the most popular girls of her year.

Mr. Lawrence is a Harvard '01 man and is a member of the Union Boat and Eastern Yacht Clubs. His mother is Anne A. Lawrence of Exeter street, and his sister is Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge of Berkeley street. After the wedding journey the young people will live with Mr. Lawrence's father at No. 81 Commonwealth avenue.

Dodge-Whitney Nuptials in Spring

Among the most notable of the late Spring brides will be that of Miss Laura Whitney, the third and prettiest of the four daughters of the Hon. Henry M. Whitney of Brookline and Cohasset, to Philip Dodge, Harvard '98.

The engagement, which was announced at Christmas, came as a surprise to all but Miss Whitney's nearest friends, as it was generally supposed that she would eventually wed the wealthy Back Bay bachelor who had long been paying her court. Mr. Dodge comes of a wealthy Nebraska family, and it was during his course at Harvard that he met and fell in love with the handsome heiress.

Miss Whitney was the most admired girl in the group of attractive attendants which surrounded her sister Ruth at her wedding last Spring in the First Parish Church, Brookline, to Herbert Lyman of Marlboro street. Mrs. John Pennington Gardiner of Brookline is the other married sister.

"When Do You Sail?" Asks Smart Set

"When do you sail?" seems to be the question on the lips of all society folk of the Back Bay when they meet those of their set who contemplate passing Lent abroad.

February 25 is the date Mrs. Nathanile Thayer and her stepdaughters, the Misses Cornelia and Sally Thayer, have decided upon, and they will have in their party Miss Mary Ames, a sister of the late Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, and Miss Juliet Higginson of Beacon street, who will later accompany them on an extended automobile tour.

Mrs. William R. Rogers of Commonwealth avenue and Miss Eleanor Emmons are sailing on the 16th, and and Mr. and Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames are sailing on the 19th to spend the commander of the Winter in Sicily.

Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas and their daughters, Helen and Margaret, are others sailing on the 19th. The Thomas' will spend the greater part of their time until June touring through Southern Europe and on the Continent.

A reception will precede the dance and the mother and sister of the bud will assist her in receiving. Mrs. Pope will wear an imported gown of black velvet; Miss Mildred will wear white lace, and Miss Margaret will wear an imported creation of white tulle and silver, trimmed with garlands of roses.

SALOME'S EMOTION CAME OUT LIKE A BIG EARTHQUAKE, SAYS ARTIST MAX BACHMANN

MAX BACHMANN'S OBSERVATIONS

"NATURE? Nature is O. K. But sometimes even nature will make mistakes."

Going to speak about "Salome." Not going to speak for myself. Will quote opinions of others. Why? Once was a student in Berlin. Favorite method to get a chance to fight a duel consisted in going to a place where students congregate; spot some other student who looked inclined to have a fight, fee the waiter, send him over to said student with a message that in the opinion of sender of message he looked like an "ass." Waiter did as requested. Extract another fee from party thus classified and now comes the point. Waiter would invariably tell party that designating him him as an "ass" was the private opinion of sender of message, and that he, the waiter, did not share those sentiments. Then he got another fee, and the sender a duel.

Now, in case of Salome shall act like that waiter. Will not tell my own opinion about said opera. Why should I? Others gave me theirs. I'm going to use them.

Clover Club Member with Mild "Draper."

"Is He Going? If His Wife Lets Him."

Opinion No. 1: Richard F. Field, assistant secretary to His Honor Mayor Fitzgerald, is going to see Salome, providing his wife lets him, but he intends to sneak out of the Boston Theatre when Salome removes the fifth veil. He's too bashful to remain for the removal of the seventh. Don't blame him. Got a wife myself.

Conductor No. 2,251 of the Boston Elevated Railroad is a philosopher. He can talk philosophy and at the same time announce his stations. He gave me most of my points.

Police Officer W. W. Fay of the Lagrange street station keeps his views to himself. He's got them—I mean views. Dr. Owens of Huntington avenue looks at Salome from an entirely different point of view than Jack Quinn of the Oxford Hotel. This last-named party thinks Salome is more like a creme de menthe because it will cause people who cannot go turn green with envy. He will go.

J. H. Edler, the Stradivarius of the twentieth century, is only interested in the dances of the seven veils.

Will Jenkins, the theatrical agent, agrees with John J. Enneking in regard to Salome. This last-named celebrated painter claims "art is what you think it is."

Parker Shannon and Billy Hurley, the champion mixologists of the Bamboo Palace, got in a fight about Salome, because Shannon can go and Hurley's wife won't let him.

Get a Mild Draper "One," and See "Salome."

W. H. Newman, president of the New York Central, doesn't know, according to latest newspaper reports, where Boston is located, so we have to depend on the opinion of Van Etten, vice-president of the Boston & Albany road.

Should Morris indorse Salome, the public would be entertained by O'Meara's well-known ability in word manipulation. Should, on the other hand, O'Meara indorse Salome, that full fulmination of Morris's mighty intellect would—better imagine the rest. Should Salome be able to run the Moran-O'Meara gauntlet, then she must have a good chance for the Clover Club. They will try, before going to see Salome, the O'Neil Draper stunt. Go to Exchange Club, imbibe not too freely, simply get a mild "Draper" one. This will insure those brainy members of the Clover Club to see a double production of Salome.

The garbage plant is now our busy and beloved Mayor's nightmare. Solution for this garbage question for Hon. John Fitzgerald is to have Salome performed at the garbage plant; it would not be any more offensive to the merchants in that vicinity than its present use.

"What Makes Earthquakes?"

Let's get at Salome. Not necessary for me to tell the plot. Presume you know it. Let's go ahead with my collection of opinions. Will scatter them over this column like a crazy quilt. Philosophy, prose, nonsense and almost everything. What made Salome have John the Baptist beheaded? Funny question to ask? What made the earthquake? Cause? Effect? It has to get out. Salome had emotion, and out it came like an earthquake. Cause? Repulsed love.

"Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

Love? What is love? The species demand continuance and the reaching out for that end is called love in the individual. If Salome had been perfect, she never would have done what she did. Nobody is perfect. I'm not, you're not; not even my mother-in-law. Again we are drifting. Can you conceive the motive which prompted Salome to have John the Baptist beheaded? No? That which cannot be conceived through anything else must be conceived through itself. Emotion, yes, there we are.

"What Is a Woman's Love?"

Emotion! An emotion can only be controlled or destroyed by another motion contrary thereto. Pleasure is emotion whereby the body's power of activity is increased. Pain is emotion whereby the body's power of activity is checked.

What is a woman's love? The love of species—yes, all that culture, all that civilization can bring to bear upon the development of a woman's mind, cannot eliminate—I think I'm getting hot.

It was emotion which prompted Salome; it was emotion which prompted Thaw to kill Stanford White. It is nothing else but the law of species which cannot and will not permit interference. All superficial laws and rules of society can never abolish this fundamental law. Law? Yes, a law of nature! He who conceives that the object of his hate is destroyed will feel pleasure.

Salome felt pleasure, and so probably did Thaw when they destroyed the object of their hate. To hate a man is to conceive him as the cause of pain; hence they endeavor to destroy him. Salome loved John the Baptist, but repulsed love hated him as only a woman can hate. Thaw hated White and destroyed him. Yes, destroyed his body. The human mind cannot be absolutely with the body —there remains something which is eternal.

Conductor 2,251 Caused It All.

Should men have repentance for destroying somebody else? Yes or no? Repentance is not a virtue, it does not arise from reason. But as a man seldom is under the guidance of reason, repentance will bring more good than harm, so, if repentence is a sin, as the ancient Egyptians tell us, we better sin in that direction.

Some men delight in the company of flatterers, but hate the company of the high-minded.

Should Salome and Thaw have acted as they did? The endeavor to injure and destroy one whom they hate is called ANGER. The endeavor to repay in kind injury done to ourselves is called REVENGE. Beg pardon, readers, if I have said things to which you object, don't blame me. Blame Conductor 2,251 of the Boston Elevated Railway, or Assistant Secretary Field to His Honor Mayor Fitzgerald, or the other gang. Don't blame me—I have troubles of my own.

Will You Join Me in Making a Fortune?

As a conservative business man, I tell you that we CAN do it right there in Cobalt,—the richest silver mining district in the history of the world.

560 Acres of Silver

HERE is your chance to make a big income for life by investing in a legitimate mining property. A safe, sound, honestly managed proposition backed by men of the highest character and standing, who have put their own money into the purchase of 560 acres in the very heart of the Cobalt region—within gunshot of Nipissing, Temiskaming, La Rose, Foster and other famous mines that are making enormous fortunes for their owners.

The land is of absolutely proved value. Construction and Development work is being pushed to the limit.

COBALT

What I Saw in Cobalt

When I invite you to join me in this investment I do so with full personal knowledge of actual facts. My information is exact and first hand. For months I have been investigating the mining district of Cobalt, Canada—the greatest silver producing camp in the world. I first visited that region about eight months ago to see, with my own eyes, what was going on, and with the determination to accept no man's statement as true without proof, but to find out for myself, as a careful business man, the exact situation. After a searching personal investigation I became convinced that half the real truth had never been told. I saw, with my own eyes, more than enough to convince me of the amazing richness of the mineral deposits. I saw tracts of land that three years ago would not have sold for $1 an acre, which to-day could not be bought for $36,000 an acre. I saw eighty to ninety per cent pure, weighing 300 to 400 pounds. I saw many carloads of ore running from $40,000 to $60,000, and one car of picked ore that actually sold for $80,000. The whole region seems to be one vast rock, covered with a thin skin of earth, filled with mineral deposits. In places the rock crops out of the top, and shows the silver veins of almost pure silver so rich that you can see the metal shine as though the rock were plated with it. I examined the entire region, saw the miners at work, talked with conservative men whose experience, ability and recognized standing placed them in a position to give me unbiased advice—and then I made up my mind that Cobalt offered the

for those who were shrewd enough, and had money enough, to secure title to claims of proved value. After I had become personally sure of the facts I made up my mind to act quickly. My first step on returning to Cleveland was to secure the services of Mr. F. B. Weatherbee, one of the best mining engineers in the country. With Mr. Weatherbee and an able corps of assistant engineers I returned to Cobalt, inspected many properties, and carried on negotiations with different owners of land until I finally secured title to 560 acres, free and unincumbered, of the richest lands in the Cobalt district all located right in the heart of the silver producing section within easy range of well-known producing and shipping mines.

I Took No Chances

in property of doubtful value. This acreage was rigidly tested by experts, and the presence of high-grade ore was established beyond question. The Canadian Government recently sold to a Canadian Syndicate a claim of people living right in Canada around Cobalt. The Cobalt Lake, covering 40 acres of ground, for $1,08[illegible]. This tract is within a few miles of my holdings, on which I have every reason to believe there is as much or more mineral than on this tract sold for over a million dollars. I have formed a holding company—viz.: THE COBALT MUTUAL MINES COMPANY—composed of a number of well-known professional and business men who are associated with me in the management of my property.

Our first intention was to make our Company a close corporation within our own hands. At that time [illegible] we intended buying only 560 acres. The opportunity presented itself for us to acquire an additional 360 acres of rich, claims, giving us a grand total of 560 acres, which is the second largest tract held in the district. As we knew the opportunity to buy any of this property would never present itself again, we decided to acquire it while we had the chance, and on this account we now offer for quick public subscription a block of 462,000 shares fully paid and non-assessable, par value $1.00

we will accept subscriptions on this block of stock, subject to previous sale, at the low price of

25 Cents a Share

On February 20th the price of this stock will advance at least 40 per cent. I can conscientiously advise my friends to invest in this stock at 25c a share, and those who join us now will naturally reap the richest rewards, as the shares will positively increase at least 40 per cent in value on February 20th.

Do not fail to read further full particulars of this splendid opportunity to become interested in a sound mining proposition that has every indication of being a big money-maker

Note: If you are interested you might like to see a sample of the silver bearing Cobalt ore. Since returning from my last trip I have had a number of attractive gold-plus made up for my friends, and will send you a sample of the ore in this form, if you will send me your name and address stating your business or occupation, and using your business stationery if possible. Please write at once, as the supply of pins is limited.

The Cobalt Mutual Mines Company's Claims

Are five in number, covering an area of 560 acres, free and clear of encumbrance—which makes these holdings the second largest in the entire district. This great acreage of richly mineralized land affords ample space for more than 100 working shafts and tunnels, and even with this number actively at work the supply of minerals would not be exhausted for many years—probably not for several generations.

Title

Title is perfect. In Canada all mines are carefully examined by the Government Inspectors, and no claims are allowed unless approved of by the proper government officials. The penalty for misrepresentation is very severe in Cobalt. For this reason "wild cat" mining schemes have been barred out from the beginning.

Present Development

On Lot 1, Concession 4, Bucke Township, several large and heavily mineralized veins have been found and prospected. At a junction of these veins a shaft is now being sunk. Work will be pushed. Shipping of high-grade ore will be a matter of about four months. On Lot 7 many large, strong, true fissure veins have been prospected and No. 1 vein has been traced and tested for over 300 feet. It will be one of the heaviest producers in the district. On this vein No. 1 tunnel is now being driven to penetrate the vein about 50 feet from its outcrop. This will give more working depth than has been found on any property in the district without a shaft. High-grade ore will be shipped from this vein in less than 90 days. As soon as the weather permits, the entire acreage will be thoroughly prospected to determine on which of the many veins the future work will be done.

Business Methods

The Cobalt Mutual Mines Company is organized on strictly business principles and investors are not asked to risk their money on a mere prospect. We are going at the Mining Business in Cobalt with the same care and caution and with the same methods as we would employ in any manufacturing or other business enterprise.

First, we secured enough land to be sure that we had a property that could be mined for years in the most aggressive way and now we are going to mine it on business principles to make money for our stockholders.

Directors and Officers

The officials of the company are all well and favorably known and are men of substance, character and standing in the community. An investigation will reveal to any investor the fact that the directors and officers are eminently reliable and can be depended upon to conduct the affairs of the company fairly and honestly.

Cobalt Ores of Great Value

Here are the actual values of ores taken from a few of the Cobalt mines:

LaRose	mine ores run		$60,000	to the carload.

There is every reason to believe that our five tracts covering 560 acres will be as productive as any others in the entire Cobalt mining district.

Fortunes in Cobalt Stocks

The Temiskaming and Hudson Bay stock, which sold as low as 40 cents per share, now sells for over $100 per share, and has paid about 4,000 per cent in dividends.

The stock of the Nipissing mine sold below par and afterward advanced over 675 per cent.

The stock of the McKinley-Darragh-Savage was put on the market at $1.35 per share (par $1.00) and advanced to $4.00 per share.

The stock of the Silver Queen started at $1.00 per share, and advanced to over $3.00 per share.

The stock of the Foster Cobalt started at 80 cents per share and advanced to 4.00 per share.

The stock of the University mine advanced $7.00 per share in a short time and made a half million dollars for its two discoverers.

The stock of the Trothewey mine advanced $7.50 a share in a few days.

The stock of the Right of Way mine has had a very great boom. It is reported that $180,000 was taken out of a narrow trench less than 30 feet in length and not more than 10 feet in its greatest depth.

Please remember that this is not a "paper" mine—nor a wildcat speculation, but a safe business venture—an investment in 560 acres of actual land of absolutely proved value, into which my money and that of my associates will be united with yours in building up our fortunes. Remember the day, shares now 25c will advance at least 40 per cent. Don't wait till it's too late and lose this 40 per cent advance in price. Further advances will be made rapidly as the work advances and develops, and this stock will undoubtedly be worth at least par within six months' time.

FEBRUARY 20TH At Noon

We advise you to telegraph your orders for stock and forward remittance at once, as there is every indication that the entire allotment of shares to be sold at 25c will be largely oversubscribed

We wouldn't give you this advice unless we were absolutely sure that the proposition is right. We know from personal knowledge—the evidence of our own eyes—that we have rich silver bearing ore on this acreage. We know that the title is good—we know that our engineers are capable, honest men who will serve us faithfully and intelligently. We have much faith in the outcome of this investment that we have put a large amount of our own money into it, and our business friends and associates have done the same. If you invest with us, your money will join ours in developing this property.

Prospectus and additional information will be sent on application. Address all letters, telegrams and remittances to

JULIE OPP'S BABY IS THE "CUTEST" IMAGINABLE.

"Bill-Bill" Has His Photograph Taken Under Unusual Circumstances That Reveal His Personality to Advantage

"Cute" seems to be the only adjective that can fitly describe this photograph of Julie Opp Faversham and her tiny son, William Crosier, or "Bill-Bill," as they nickname him at home. It is a snapshot made by Sarony after "Bill-Bill" had become tired from posing and was begging his mamma to take him home.

Mrs. Faversham took him in her arms to comfort him, and he dug one chubby fist into her cheek and snuggled up to her.

"Snap that, quick!" exclaimed Mr. Faversham to the photographer, and in a twinkling this remarkably attractive photograph was taken.

"Bill-Bill" Faversham is now seventeen months old and this picture was taken [illegible] a year ago. Julie Opp, his mother, and William Faversham, his father, are two of the best known stage people in the country. They have hosts of friends here in Boston, and their success in "The Squaw Man" is deserved. Mr. Faversham says he isn't going to make "Bill-Bill" an actor unless he can be sure that the boy's wife can always travel with him.

"My wife and I are the best of chums," says he, "and we always travel and play together. In this way we can make 'home' wherever we hang our hats."

Sunday Concerts.

The concert program at the Orpheum this evening will introduce all of the artists in last week's bill, including Henri de Vries, the Dutch protean actor; Walter C. Perkins, comedian, and George Mozart, English entertainer.

To-night at the Majestic Theatre the North End Dispensary will have its usual benefit. The program will be headed by Carlton Macy and Maude Hall, in "The Magpie and the Jay." A Chance to Make a Fortune in a Copper Mine

by JULIUS SINGER

(NOTE—This is a plain statement of facts, as I know them. All I ask you to do is to read the story through; if you believe my story, join with me.—J. S.)

THE STORY OF AN ALASKA MINER.

I am a practical miner and for several years past have been mining in Alaska, in the vicinity of Cook's Inlet, and before that worked in the mines in the Olympic Mountains in the State of Washington.

JULIUS SINGER
Pres. Copper Mining and Development Co. and Mining Superintendent.

I have done everything in a mine from working with a pick and a shovel up to mine manager, with a large force of men under me, and having direct superintendence of all the operations of a large property in Alaska. I have a large acquaintance in the district where I have been working for the past three or four years, and know the conditions up there thoroughly. I have personally examined nearly all of the large properties that are being worked at the present time, and have an excellent opportunity of making connections with owners of mining properties that I know to be all right. I have reached that point where I am tired of working for other people and giving them the benefit of my experience. I determined last season that before I returned to Chicago, where my home is at present, I would secure a number of properties that I knew to be very good under what we miners call "working bonds."

WHAT A WORKING BOND IS.

For the benefit of those who may not know what a working bond is, I will say that it differs from an option in this regard: If a man takes an option on a piece of property he must make that option good within the time of its life, or forfeit what he has paid to secure the option; whereas, if he secures a working bond he agrees to use diligence in securing capital to prove the property so bonded, but he pays down no money, and if he finds nothing after development work has been carried on to prove the property, he is out nothing except his time, and the actual amount expended for labor.

WHAT I HAVE SECURED.

I have secured five groups of copper mines on Knight's Island, which lies in Prince William Sound in the southern part of Alaska. This is the island where the Hubbard-Elliott people have recently acquired some holdings, and will be the scene of tremendous operations during the coming year. One of our groups of claims lies right between the Hubbard-Elliott and the Hemple holdings, and all of them are on tide water. In addition to these groups I have secured a mine on the main land in Prince William Sound, known as the Ellamar Extension, and a group of claims inland some 120 miles on the Kuskalana River. The Ellamar Extension adjoins the famous Ellamar mine, one of the greatest copper properties in Alaska. Their shipments during the past year were in the neighborhood of 45,000 tons of copper ore, averaging between 10 and 11 per cent in copper.

TIRED OF WORKING ON A SALARY.

I have worked for a number of years in Alaska, and have [illegible] responsible positions at a high salary. I made up my mind a year ago that 1906 would be the last year I would spend in Alaska making money for other people [illegible] and land my [illegible] this country to [illegible] develop these copper mines, which I had [illegible] and was able to bond.

FORMING A MINING COMPANY.

I have organized a company known as the Happy Jack Copper Mining and Development Co., with a capital of $1,500,000, par value of shares $1.00 each, non-forfeitable and non-assessable, and have associated with me as officers and directors a number of successful business men, all of whom have invested in the stock of the company. I spent my own money for legal purposes before coming out of Alaska, paid for my own bonds, and carried on sufficient development on the various claims to assure me that each of them carried good copper values.

On the Happy Jack claim, which lies on Hogan's Bay, Knight Island, one of five claims known as "Golconda," "Porpoise," "Happy Jack," "Gold Fish" and "Ground Hog," we are in far enough on the vein to prove to me that I had a copper mine on this claim. It has everything in its favor, being directly on tidewater, and needs only a wharf 260 feet long to admit of the ore from the tunnel being dumped into the boat.

FINE CLIMATE.

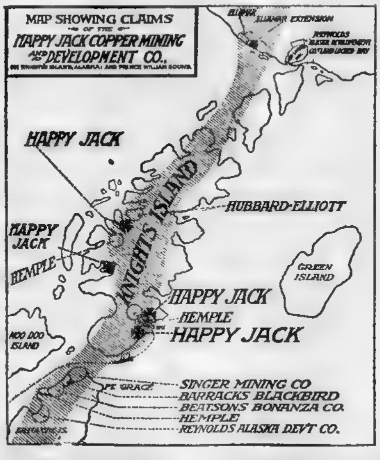
The climate in this vicinity is fine, and admits of the work being pursued every day of the year. There is sufficient water in the bay to give us dockage for a boat drawing 23 feet of water at low tide. Neighboring mines ship every month in the year. I believe that this one claim will make a great mine, but if it should not we have four more chances to make a mine in this same group. If none of these should show mineral values, which is a ridiculous contention, for we have proven that all of them have mineral values, then we have our other groups to work on, the one on Drier Bay consisting of five claims, being just as well located and immediately adjoining the group controlled by the Hubbard-Elliott crowd, which they value very highly. They are offering stock in the Company now at $2.25 per share.

The Hemple property is owned by Mr. Hemple, a banker of Valdez. His stock is now 75c.

In every mining venture there is an element of chance. It is impossible to predict, with any degree of accuracy, what development work will bring forth, but I think I have reduced the element of chance to a minimum in this proposition.

A CLEAN CUT PROPOSITION.

My proposition to the investors of this country is a sensible one. I propose to take sufficient money up to Alaska with me to hire a force of men and be able to pay them when pay day comes around. There is no man in Alaska better able to secure capable miners than I. I know exactly where to go to get men, having been in charge of large bodies of men for several years past, and know how to economize. In other words, what work will be done will be right to the point, no experimenting, but practical mining.



I shall not spend more than is necessary in the preliminary work on any one of these claims. If one of them doesn't produce ore after I have gone in far enough to satisfy me as to whether it carries ore or not, then I shall leave it and go on to the next, and when the copper shows sufficiently strong we can go back to claim No. 1 or 2, as the case may be, and make a further examination of the ore body. It doesn't seem possible that I could help making a mine on one or two of these claims in each group, and we have three groups in all.

Fourteen [illegible] make [illegible] so, for we [illegible] Island. I should [illegible] tests or [illegible] to.

KNIGHT'S ISLAND BOOMING.

There [illegible] spent in [illegible] Knight's Island [illegible] summer [illegible] the first [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] I am giving [illegible] the [illegible] money [illegible] at 10c per share. So [illegible] on record and make a [illegible] he thinks he has. I [illegible] the Happy Jack will [illegible] this company because I [illegible] directly on the [illegible] La Touche on the [illegible] and across to the [illegible] and the Ellamar [illegible] located. We have [illegible] that [illegible] been [illegible] the ore body is [illegible] direction.

ANOTHER GREAT PROPERTY.

Our [illegible] the Ellamar Extension [illegible] William [illegible] will require considerable money for [illegible] It is what we term [illegible] underground [illegible] at depth [illegible] owners [illegible] $8,000.00 to [illegible] this [illegible] what they had [illegible] It is [illegible] Ellamar property from which 45,000 [illegible] better than 10 per cent was [illegible] last year and I have every reason to [illegible] is every bit as good [illegible] will have [illegible] that should pay dividends for general [illegible] I want to make the Happy Jack earn [illegible] pay dividends and provide money enough to develop all the other mines besides.

STILL ANOTHER PROPERTY.

I have [illegible] of claims inland some 120 miles on the [illegible] River. These are near the main [illegible] Bonanza Smelter and [illegible] [illegible] the Hubbard-Elliott properties, and [illegible] quite as good as either the [illegible] Knight group. I shall simply [illegible] without spending any money [illegible] development work [illegible] the necessary [illegible] As soon as freight [illegible] to that district and we have [illegible] our attention to this inland group [illegible] a very valuable property.

THE ELEMENT OF CHANCE.

When I saw [illegible] company and concluded to go to the public with my stock and ask them to [illegible] it [illegible] to [illegible] every dollar that [illegible] man or woman [illegible] he or she [illegible] away for a rainy day. There is enough [illegible] be had without any man or woman [illegible] that on a proposition that has [illegible] of chance that a mining venture has.

[illegible] at the [illegible] price. If I [illegible] I have made a [illegible] two years [illegible]

I FEEL SURE OF SUCCESS.

[illegible] the president of a [illegible] I am a working president [illegible] manager, superintendent [illegible] and I don't know the meaning of [illegible]

DON'T DELAY IF YOU WANT TO BUY

If you are impressed by what I have said and [illegible] this week. I want [illegible] by the first mail and [illegible] I have [illegible] I want to start [illegible] Alaska [illegible] than the 15th of March ready [illegible] get the wharf [illegible]

I WANT TO BEGIN AT ONCE.

ONE WEEK LATER

(This ad appeared for first time last Sunday)

Just as I supposed, this first allotment of shares was over-subscribed. The people believed my story, and have been so generous in their response that I find myself in a peculiar predicament.

At the beginning of the week a number of people came in, or wrote in, to the offices of the company, saying that they wanted to get in on this proposition, but they couldn't do so as they would have no money until the end of last week, and not knowing what the week was going to bring forth, I promised that they should have their shares at the 10c price. I am going to show these people that I am a man of my word, and have arranged with the company for the issue of an additional allotment of shares at the 10c price, so that the man or woman of moderate means can take advantage of this opportunity to lay the foundation of a fortune.

I am now in a position to state that this proposition is a go. The question of whether or not we should be able to raise sufficient funds has been settled in the affirmative. Already we have arranged to send a considerable sum of money to the mines to start operations at once so that when I go up there there will be no delay.

In stretching this time limit and issuing another allotment of stock at the 10c price let me warn those who are thinking about buying that I can't duplicate this proceeding. The next advance will be a substantial one, and I am advising you now to make your reservations of stock at once. The safest way would be to wire either of our offices at our expense, telling us the number of shares to reserve and let your remittance follow the same day.

One other feature about this campaign so far is that a large percentage of the stock has been sold to people who already own stock in the Hubbard-Elliott properties, or in other companies operating on Knight's Island. They know how rich that district is.

I have been criticised for putting this stock out at 10c, but I prefer to scatter the holdings among a number of small investors rather than to have a few rich men hold large blocks. I am a poor man myself, and have worked hard for what little I have, and my sympathy goes out to other poor men who have had no opportunity so far to make a stake.

A maid employed by Reginald rushes in and tells him his wife is dead and he is accused of murder. Reginald confesses a college escapade that resulted in marriage. The maid brings Reginald's wife's locket, which Frank finds contains Vera Saviosky's picture.

She reveals that a physician resembling Mueller attended Reginald's wife and is his accuser. Detectives seek Reginald and Frank conceals him in a secret room behind a painting. They escape by a private door into a system of [illegible] tunnels underneath the city.

Frank battles with Detective Sheehan and binds and gags him. They reach Frank's boat on the Sound and embark in a motor boat when Sheehan appears on the shore with a revolver and demands their surrender. The detectives and Mueller pursuing in automobiles reach the Bracebridge house on the shore just as Frank and Reginald reach the airship stored on the roof.

In the airship they reach Portsmouth and Frank entrusts the diamonds to Reginald concealing the [illegible] the lining of his coat. Reginald goes to France with an old friend of Frank's. Frank returns to Moorcombe, Ohio, where he learns Dr. Mueller is. He reaches Moorcombe at night and his airship becomes unmanageable and crashes to the ground—ruined. Basil Thurston comes to Moorcombe to plead for Sylvia's hand. The two are interrupted in their talk by Dr. Mueller.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Man of Mystery

FOUR months before this September afternoon Dr. Carl Mueller had bought The Hollow. He had been there very infrequently until a fortnight before, when he established his residence at the beautiful old estate.

During the fortnight that followed his few neighbors had seen very little of the newcomer, who seemed to spend the greater part of his time prowling alone amid the solitude of his wooded grounds or lazily sculling a small boat up and down the expanse of lake which lay immediately beneath the romantic and deserted grounds of The Hollow.

Dr. Mueller was evidently a man of mystery, "a man with a past," as Mrs. Prosser, the good minister's wife, whispered into the ears of one or two of her cronies in the neighborhood.

The Rev. Isaac Prosser had been Dr. Mueller's first visitor at The Hollow, and that fat, sleek, blue-eyed, intensely well-regulated preacher had not been very favorable impressed with this distinguished addition to his little flock.

A few days after the Rev. Mr. Prosser's visit Judge Godfrey Thurston had presented his respects at The Hollow, and Mueller had returned this visit in the succeeding week.

Then for the first time Mueller had met Sylvia Thurston, but he had had very little conversation with the girl during that formal call; and during the succeeding days he had, as a matter of fact, set himself to watch the girl's movements, in the hope of surprising her in one of her solitary walks.

A Hunt Rewarded

And at last his hopes were crowned with success—or nearly so—on this September afternoon. From the summit of one of the high cliffs above The Hollow Dr. Mueller had, a quarter of an hour before, caught a glimpse of Sylvia Thurston as the girl reclined all alone in her craggy nook, and he had hailed the sight with an inward thrill that almost surprised himself.

Here was the opportunity he had longed for during the previous four or five days. What circumstances could be more favorable for an uninterrupted meeting.

He hastened across the fields to The Hollow and made a few rapid changes in his toilet, then sallied forth again, steering his course for the sandy beach just below the bluffs whereon he had seen that graceful figure. But as he drew nearer he was disgusted to hear the sound of a man's voice coming, as it seemed, from the very spot where Sylvia Thurston had been.

He paused and listened, and as he did so he plainly heard these words:

"Indeed, it was only this very day that the minister's gossipy wife told Aunt Letty that your father had almost bossed a prize, and that he had set his heart on marrying you to that man who has come to reside at The Hollow lately—Dr. Carl Mueller, or whatever his name is, confound him!"

And then Sylvia Thurston's interruption had come—she had evidently heard the approaching footsteps upon the beach and hesitating no longer, Dr. Mueller advanced from behind the ledge of rock, and was just in time to arrest the girl's startled flight from the spot.

Basil himself broke the embarrassing silence that followed.

"I will bid you goodby now, Sylvia," he said, with dignity, "and I shall see you when you are less engaged."

He strode off haughtily. Dr. Mueller looked after him with the suspicion of a smile upon his lips, but was too wise to make any comment upon the little scene he had interrupted.

"It is growing late, Miss Thurston," he observed in a matter of fact way calculated to put Sylvia at her ease. "May I not escort you home? I am walking that way."

"Thank you, Dr. Mueller," returned Sylvia gratefully. "I shall be charmed, I am sure."

The two walked toward the Thurston home slowly, chatting casually of the beauty of the scenery and other conventional topics.

A Discovery

Half way to the Thurston home Mueller noticed a quaint old building in the woods.

"What is that building?" he asked, little thinking how the answer would affect him.

"Oh, that used to be my brother's painting room, Dr. Mueller," Sylvia said, as she fastened a spray of goldenrod in her belt. "I have a brother who is a professional artist—he is at present in Spain. He almost lived in that painting room during the time he was first practicing his art, but for years the hut has been used only at rare intervals. Perhaps you would like to see it closer? I fear it is locked, though. Ruth Pritchard, one of the girls at Moorcombe, usually keeps the key."

Sylvia moved away from the path as she spoke and directed her steps toward the painting room. She was not looking at Dr. Mueller just now, and consequently she did not observe the odd pallor that had crept into his face—the strange, startled, shrinking expression of his eyes.

For a moment or two he was silent, as he followed the girl beneath the trees in the direction of the wooden building. Then he forced himself at last to speak.

Mueller Startled

"I was not aware, until now, that you had a brother, Miss Thurston," he said. "You have never mentioned him until this instant—but then, of course, this is only our second meeting, and we seem to have had so many other things to talk of."

"Now that I think of it, I really believe I have not mentioned my brother to you, Dr. Mueller. But you may have heard of him," the girl went on, with an unconsciously proud ring in her voice. "He is well known in the art world, and has had pictures hung on the line at the exhibitions during the last two seasons."

"I must have heard of him then, of course. Thurston—Thurston—let me see."

"Raymond Thurston," Sylvia supplied, still with that ring of pride in her low, vibrating tones.

Carl Mueller started, and with an effort he managed to suppress the exclamation that rose to his lips, while the pallor of his face had now taken almost a chalky tint.

He was indeed terribly startled—so startled that an incredulous feeling quickly followed, and he said to himself, in a dazed, helpless sort of way, that there were, of course, two Raymond Thurstons, and that Sylvia's brother was not—could not be—the one that he was thinking of just then.

And all the time he was conscious of a sense of relief that Sylvia Thurston was walking onward ahead of him, and had not looked around at him even once since this agitating subject was mentioned. He picked up his courage at the thought, and endeavored to speak with ease and unconcern.

Hiding Astonishment

"Yes, I've heard the name, to be sure. Raymond Thurston, it sounds quite familiar to me, indeed. But I don't think I've seen any of his pictures."

"Well, I shall be very happy to show you some of them this afternoon at Moorcombe, Dr. Mueller. We have half a dozen gems of his. And I see the door of the painting room is open," she went on, as she drew near to the hut. "Ruth must be there, I suppose. She comes often [illegible] though no one ever [illegible] Will you please wait here for a moment, Dr. Mueller, while I run in and see who is within?"

Sylvia disappeared across the threshold of the hut and Carl Mueller was alone. He lifted his felt hat and ran his fingers through the wavy jet black locks that clustered about his handsome head. His [illegible] clammy, and that startling pallor was still noticeable in his face.

"Raymond Thurston!" he repeated in an [illegible] whisper. "Her brother—Sylvia's brother. I cannot credit it! they are utterly unlike. It cannot be the same Raymond Thurston—it is impossible."

Then a sudden horror swept across his face, and he set his quivering lips together.

"Good God! If it should be the same Raymond Thurston! Why did he, of all men, ever cross my path during this time?"

(TO BE CONTINUED IN TO-MORROW'S BOSTON AMERICAN.)

"Good God! if it should be the same Raymond Thurston," he cried as a sudden horror swept across his face.

SMART SET HAILS BRIDE OF LENT

Matthew Hale to Wed Miss Anne Taggard Piper of Cambridge on February 23.

Among the most important of the few weddings scheduled for Lent is that on February 23 of Miss Anne Taggard Piper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Taggard Piper of Cambridge, to Matthew Hale of Albany, N. Y.

Miss Piper is the second of the handsome Piper girls and has been much in favor in the exclusive circles of the University City since her presentation to society some two or three years ago.

Mr. Hale is the son of the late Hon. Matthew Hale, whose wife was Miss Mary Lee, daughter of the late Colonel Francis L. Lee of this city. He is a Harvard '03 man, also of the Harvard Law School, and has been admitted to the Massachusetts bar.

The ceremony will take place at the First Parish Church in Cambridge, and will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Hall, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Crother.

Miss Elizabeth Piper will be her sister's maid of honor and Roger Ernst will be best man. The eight ushers are all classmates of the groom. A large reception at the Piper residence on Brattle street will follow the ceremony.

Another Lenten wedding which interests society is that in New York, February 27, of Miss Dorothy Lee Higginson to Arthur Delano Weeks, Jr., which will be quietly solemnized in the Chantry of Grace Church, New York. Miss Higginson is closely related to the Higginsons of Boston and is prominently identified with the North Shore Summer colony. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Higginson and was a recent guest of her Boston relatives. She is a niece of Major Henry L. Higginson, Francis L. Higginson and Mrs. S. Parkman Blake, and a cousin of Mrs. Philip Sears.

The Myopia colony is much interested in the announcement that Miss May Tuckerman's wedding to Herman Kinnicut is to be celebrated in June at Sunswick, Ipswich, the country home of the Tuckermans. The prospective bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman and is exceedingly popular in the Myopia set.

SOUTH ATTRACTS HUB FASHIONABLES

Europe, Too, Is Mecca for Many Prominent Leaders in Boston Society.

The Southland as well as Europe is attracting Boston fashionables this season, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Charles Slaz, who are to spend the remainder of the Winter and the early Spring in touring the South.

Mr. and Mrs. George Agassiz sailed Saturday for the Bermudas in Mr. Agassiz's beautifully equipped yacht. This is the first of several years that they have not spent the Lenten period in California. Mrs. Agassiz, who, before her marriage, was Mabel Simpkins, is one of Boston's most charming and popular matrons.

* * *

The John Greenoughs of New York and Tuxedo were among those sailing for the Mediterranean ports and Egypt, Monday, on the Deutschland. Mr. and Mrs. Greenough will remain abroad until the late Spring, when they will return and occupy their cottage at East Gloucester for the Summer. David Greenough of Jamaica Plain went over to New York to bid his brother bon voyage.

* * *

Mrs. John Lee Connable of Mt. Vernon street sailed for the Orient from New York the past week. She will visit Sicily, Italy and Paris, reaching London to spend the season with her daughter, Mrs. J. Walter Bennett (Harriet Connable), whose wedding was an event of last Spring. Mrs. Connable will be accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Joseph F. Lancaster of Worcester and by Mrs. Edward J. Meeks. Miss Helen, the unmarried daughter, will join her mother in London about the middle of May.

* * *

Mrs. Charles F. Wright of Dartmouth street sailed for Egypt from New York last week for an extended visit.

* * *

Mrs. John Caswell of Beacon street is recovering from an attack of nervous prostration, and when able will sail for Europe to remain until she has fully recovered. Mrs. Caswell, who before her marriage was Gertrude Robbins, is a daughter of the late Royal Robbins.

THREE EPOCHS IN A WOMAN'S LIFE

MRS. ELVA BARBER EDWARDS — MRS. GEORGE WALTERS

There are three critical stages in a woman's life which leave their mark in her career. The first of these stages is womanhood, or the change from a care free girl to budding womanhood. The second is motherhood, and the third is Change of Life.

Perils surround each of these stages, and most of the misery that comes to women through ill health dates from one or another of these important crises.

Women should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs has carried thousands of young girls over the critical period of puberty, has prepared mothers for childbirth, and in later years carried them safely through the change of life more successfully than any other remedy in the world. Thousands of testimonials from grateful persons, two of which are here published, substantiate this fact beyond contradiction.

Mrs. George Walters of Woodlawn, Ill. writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I feel it my duty to tell you of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me in preparing for childbirth. After suffering and losing my children a friend advised me to try your valuable medicine, and the result was that I had very little inconvenience, a quick recovery and as healthy a child as can be found anywhere. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a blessing to all expectant mothers."

Mrs. Elva Barber Edwards, of Cathlamet, Wash., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I want to tell you how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carried me through the critical period of the Change of Life without any trouble whatever, also cured me of a very severe female weakness. I cannot say enough in praise of what your medicine has done for me."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Walters and Mrs. Edwards it will do for other women in their condition. Every suffering woman in the United States is asked to accept the following invitation. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of her vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and helpful.

HEARST BILL TO END ALL ELECTION BRIBERY.

Measure Striking Death Blow at Corrupt Practices Introduced by New Yorker.

PROVISIONS INCLUDE MANY NOVEL FEATURES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 8.—Representative William Randolph Hearst today introduced in Congress a bill entitled:

"To prevent corrupt practices at Federal elections, defining and fixing the penalty for the crime of bribery thereat, prohibiting campaign contributions by corporations, and the employment of workers at the polls; and for other purposes."

Mr. Hearst to-day also issued the following signed statement, giving his reasons for urging the enactment of the bill into law:

It seems to me that the root of all corruption in public life is the use of money in elections. The evil is not merely the use of corporations' money in elections, or the use of the money of individuals, but the use of money at all to influence the vote of the citizen on election day. To illustrate what I mean, let me cite the last New York State election. The use of something over a million dollars in the State campaign is admitted by the various committees of the Republican party. In addition to that, there was a great deal of money spent by individuals and by semi-political organizations, which did not come under the restrictions of the election laws.

Too Much Money to Be Spent in Legitimate Manner.

This amount of money cannot be spent properly in merely informing the voters on the issues of the campaign and in guarding the ballot on election day, and therefore the greater part of it must be spent improperly, in directly or indirectly influencing the vote of the citizens.

Mr. Hughes makes an extraordinary recommendation for a corrupt practices act, in which he advises that the amount of money contributed by any individual candidate be limited to a small sum. If there is no provision limiting the total amount of money spent, this suggestion of Mr. Hughes would merely compel all candidates to be under obligations for their campaign funds to the financial interests who deal in politics. If, for example, a million dollars is still permitted to be spent in a State election and the candidate might only contribute $25,000, there would remain $975,000 to be raised for which the candidate must be indebted to those who invest their money in politics, and in candidates.

I would call Mr. Hughes' suggestion a measure to prevent any financial independence on the part of the candidates, and to compel candidates to be under obligations to large financial interests for their campaign funds.

Calls Hughes Plan a Measure to Compel Obligation of Candidates.

The public knows sufficiently well what kind of ser-

"MAKE ROOMS" For Sunday Nights ALL CORNERS," Fair Wellesley GIRLS DEMAND

Not Cosy Nooks Enough in College Parlors When Young Men Call.

WANTED—At Wellesley College, an architect to design parlors which shall be all corners.

The "open Sunday evening" at Wellesley College, which gets its second trial to-day, is bringing the fair Wellesley girl to a sad sense of how few corners there really are in the ordinary room.

As Miss Frances L. Taft, one of the leading members of the sophomore class, wrote yesterday in one of the college publications concerning the "open Sunday evening" proposition:

"We all know the inconvenience of entertaining a man in one corner of a room while couples in the other three corners are apparently enjoying the effects of the conversation."

Visitors have been barred from Wellesley on Sundays heretofore, in deference to the understood wishes of Mrs. Henry Fowle Durant, widow of Wellesley's founder.

But recently the girls, in mass meeting assembled, voted that they would receive visitors Sundays after Vespers. As the girls have some administrative privileges of this nature the new rule went into effect last Sunday being the first trial on the "open" evening.

"Wellesley's Lid Off."

The result was a great success from the visiting standpoint. Scores of young men from "Tech," Harvard and other eligible places speedily heard the glad news. "Wellesley's lid's off Sunday evenings, boys," was the watchword and there was a joyful exodus to the college that Sunday evening. Sunday in the college man's best time for calling, so the rush of visitors was greater than on any weekday evening.

Miss Wellesley, with her admiring caller, sought demure refuge in the parlors. Every corner speedily was filled and girls who didn't have callers frankly strolled about the parlors to gaze on those who did, in the endearing manner that girls have.

Now some of the girls who think that Sunday would be better spent in other ways than in receiving callers say that this "open" evening will lead to the wasting being gradually given over to callers and that the girls will neglect their religious duties.

Makes Pathetic Protest.

There are 1,150 girls at Wellesley and the opponents of the "open Sunday" say that only some 200 of them really want the new arrangement.

In her protest against the new plan Miss Taft says:

"The incoming classes, not accustomed to the college ways and ideals, might think it foolish to restrict the privileges of entertaining men to Sunday evening. If it is right then, why not at other times?"

Miss Taft then puts forward her pathetic protest against a girl having to entertain in one corner with appreciative audience in the other corners. She allows that it is hardly fair to the men, either, saying:

"After vespers one open Sunday a man leaving College Hall was heard to remark, 'I can see now why you Wellesley girls don't have open Sundays—it's so uncomfortable for the men.'"

BOY GROUND TO PIECES AS HE UTTERED JEST

Found for home with his arms filled with bundles of groceries, which his mother had sent him to purchase, nine-year-old Charles F. Sousto, son of John F. Sousto of Beverly, was ground to death by the locomotive of the Boston-bound train at the Elliot street crossing, Beverly, of the Boston & Maine Railroad yesterday.

Merrily trotting homeward, little Charles came to the grade crossing just as the Gloucester train was approaching. He did not see the Boston train coming the other way.

Thinking that he had ample time to clear the track before the Gloucester train would reach the spot, he shouted a jest at the crossing tender who reached out to him to draw the lad back.

The man was too late, for the lad cleared the track at a bound, only to leap directly in front of the Boston bound train which was thundering by. The lad was knocked 61 ft and ground to pieces under the wheels of the locomotive.

BARRYMORE FOUND IN MAINE.

Boston American Reporter Traces Actor to Hotel at Poland Springs.

LEFT BOSTON WHEN HE WAS NAMED IN THAW CASE

Declares He Was Ordered to Sojourn in Pine Tree State for His Health.

JACK BARRYMORE the actor, brother of Ethel Barrymore, whose whereabouts have been a mystery since Thursday last when his name was mentioned in the Thaw trial, was located by the BOSTON SUNDA AMERICAN last night, in seclusion at the Mansion House, Poland Springs, Me.

Over the telephone he declared that he was a very sick man, that he has not been summoned to testify in the Thaw case and that his physical condition is such that he can take no part in the trial in any way.

Ever since Evelyn Thaw said on the witness stand that Barrymore had asked her to marry him, the young actor has absented himself from those places which he most frequented when in Boston. He is on Charles Frohman's payroll, and was supposed to have spent the last week in Boston rehearsing a part he is to play in a forthcoming production in which his sister is to have the principal part. Ethel Barrymore said yesterday that her brother was at the country house of a friend.

Threatened With Sickness.

He cleared up all doubts about his where abouts last night.

"I came up here," he said "to rest. I have a horrible cold and am threatened with pneumonia. I went to a physician in Boston and he advised me to come here. I am in such a state that I could not go to New York even though I were summoned. I have not been asked to go to New York, though I don't even want to go to Boston. I need to stay up here and rest and get well."

When any statements that Mrs. Thaw has made I can say nothing. My head has hurt so much that I have done little reading. Even if I had read everything that has been printed about the trial I could not be expected to discuss anything in connection with it.

"All that I can say is that I am a very sick man, that I have not been supposed to appear in New York and that I shall stay here in quiet as long as I can."

Declines to Talk of Case

Barrymore declined to say anything about his appearance in the courtroom in New York in the company of District Attorney Jerome on one of the first days of the Thaw trial.

Barrymore also declined to discuss the mystery which his sister and others had thrown about his sudden disappearance from his apartments in Boston following the appearance of his name in Mrs. Thaw's testimony.

His sister, who is devoted to him, and Horace McVickar, the manager of his sister's company, who is also a close friend, differed in their opinions as to his disappearance and his whereabouts. Until Barrymore himself spoke last night no one in Boston outside of the circle of his sister's closest friends knew of his whereabouts.

Barrymore is due to go to London as a member of his sister's company when she resumes the season in April or May at the Lyric in London. He refused last night to hazard a guess as to when he expected to leave Poland Springs.

This is the likeness of the artist's model and chorus girl as she appeared when she first met the architect victim of the roof garden tragedy. She was then but 16 years old. Her experience with White, as she has related it on the witness stand, is considered by experts as the coup in the trial that will not only save her husband from the death in the electric chair, but ultimately give him his freedom.

Wife's Pitiful Sacrifice to Be Followed by Her Husband's Story.

EVELYN STILL MUST FACE BITTER ORDEAL

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Harry K. Thaw, racked by shame and grief over the public revelations made by his wife to save his life, believes that her devotion and self-sacrifice has made his acquittal certain. This opinion is shared by his lawyers, but they are now preparing by exhaustive efforts to clinch their victory and leave to the jury no alternative but to render a verdict of "Not guilty!"

To-morrow the battle will be renewed and the coming week will be as sensational as the one which closed to-night and left the defence in coign of vantage.

On Monday, Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will resume the witness stand and continue the story which has stamped the memory of Stanford White with infamy.

When she is passed over to District Attorney Jerome for cross-examination, it is believed that he will make his inquisition without fear or mercy within the narrow, sharply defined lines permissible through the master stroke of Attorney Delphin Michael Delmas in introducing her story in a form which prevented the prosecution from attempting in a broad sense to refute it.

But it is expected that Jerome will make a desperate attempt to break down her terrible tale of her abuse at the hands of White by an assault upon her credibility in general.

Half a dozen of the prettiest girls upon the stage—girls who knew both young Mrs. Thaw and the man who is now called "the Tower monster"—have been closely questioned by the District Attorney and will respond to his summons to the witness chair, if he believes that their statements will convince the jury that the prisoner's wife has testified falsely.

But it is understood that the defence have more astounding evidence at hand—that they have written proof that White pursued Evelyn Nesbit Thaw after she became a wife in the form of a letter he wrote in a vain attempt to once more lure her into his toils.

Try to Introduce Will.

Attorney Delmas will try again to introduce as evidence the extraordinary will which Thaw had drawn up months before the Madison Square Roof tragedy. It shows that Thaw feared that he would almost be murdered and not only provided for the expenditure of $50,000 for the prosecution of the person responsible for his death out $25,000 for the benefit of other girls who had been fooly dealt with by White.

At the district attorney's office it was intimated that no further attempt would be made to introduce the will, but it is the hope is expressed that one of these astute Delmas can be induced to introduce the attempt to get before the jury this document. It is no reminder, and incoherent

Amazing Document Drawn Up On Wedding Day Shows Dread of Assassination By Architect Ever Hovered Over Him.

$50,000 FUND SET ASIDE TO PROSECUTE HIS SLAYER

Bitter Legal Fight Expected Tomorrow When Lawyers Will Try to Introduce Remarkable Testament As Evidence.

BY WILLIAM HOSTER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—General interest in the case today centred in the remarkable will of Harry Thaw.

The astonishing provision for a trust fund of $50,000 to prosecute the man whom he believed was going to kill him, is accepted as indicating that as long ago as the date of his marriage Thaw already entertained the delusion that Stanford White meant to do him bodily harm.

And the other provision establishing a trust fund of $75,000 for the benefit of White's other girl victims shows most clearly that the story Evelyn Nesbit had told the young millionaire was ever before his mind.

That he expected White speedily to encompass his death is indicated in the provisions for the education of Howard Nesbit, who was then verging on early manhood.

Incidentally, the prominence which young Nesbit is giving himself at the trial of his brother-in-law stands out all the more boldly in view of this provision of Thaw's will. Young Nesbit to-day berated the newspapers for telling how he sulked over the story his sister told on the witness stand, and expressed his indignation at the publication of the fact that he had used his influence with court officers to pass into the trial chamber friends who were eager to hear his sister tell the story of her disgrace.

"My sister's statements," said the young man, "don't shake my faith in Stanford White. It had been arranged between Mr. White and myself that all of the money he gave me when he was friendly with my sister was to be regarded as a loan which I was to repay when I was able."

Will Blow at State's Case.

Coming back to the will of Thaw—at present it is one of the most dangerous blows impending against the case of the prosecution. At the District Attorney's office to-day I learned that they quite frankly admit that the will, if admitted in evidence, will have a powerful effect upon the jury, and they admit, likewise, that there is little doubt that Delmas will be able to have it put before the jury.

Delmas has no doubts on this point. He will call F. C. Peck as, a Pittsburg lawyer who assisted Thaw in the preparation of the will, Gleason, of the counsel for Thaw, who has the will in his charge, and Carvalho, the noted handwriting expert, and between them these three are expected to furnish all the evidence needed to make the will and codicile competent evidence.

Laid before the jury, these two documents will show the excess of the delusion that White meant to kill Thaw as long as two years ago, they will show how the story that Evelyn Nesbit told Thaw preyed upon his mind, how he gathered other facts concerning White's acts, and made them the basis of a provision in his will, and how—from the rambling manner in which he wrote the will—his reason was undoubtedly tottering at the time it was drawn up. Supplemented by the letters of Thaw, which have already been read in court the cumulative evidence of Thaw's insanity, aside from the story told by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, would be powerful enough standing alone to carry the conviction of Thaw's madness.

The proof of the will will probably occupy the first attention of the court when the trial is resumed on Monday. After that, the defence may act on the suggestion of Jerome, and present definite evidence of a medical character, and otherwise, of the insanity of the defendant at the time the crime was committed. He may bring out more strongly the story which she already told.

And a few facts concerning the cross-examination are constantly to be borne in mind. He can't contradict for instance young Mrs. Thaw's story of the Hummel incident, for by the records of the court Jerome has already secured the conviction of Hummel on a charge of conspiracy in which the events were precisely similar to those already testified by Thaw's wife. Again, Mrs. Thaw has discounted the value of any testimony which "Jack" Barrymore might give, even if it could be conceived that Barrymore would take the witness stand in the case.

Await Evelyn's Ordeal.

What everyone is looking forward to now is Jerome's cross-examination of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. Opinion differs as to whether it will be severe or light. As matters stand, the District Attorney must confine his cross-examination to two points—did she tell this tremendous story of human passions to Harry Thaw and, is her testimony to be believed?

This leaves him free, however to made a most searching inquiry into every detail of the young wife's career. He can force her to reveal all if, indeed, she has left anything untold. But he is beset by all sorts of dangers. By subjecting her to a too severe gruelling he may create sympathy for her in the jury box.

Finally, even if it were possible for Mr. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw to be the worst woman in the world, he would in submitting that proof merely be strengthening the case of the defence.

May But Strengthen Defence.

The distracted young woman has testified that she told her story to Thaw. That, say the attorneys for the defence, was the basis for the insanity which resulted in the shooting of White. If therefore, Mr. Jerome should try to make the jury believe that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was worse than she appears to be, all the more, Delmas could argue, was Harry Thaw should have gone crazy, and in his insane condition shoot White. White being, according to Mrs. Thaw's story, which Thaw believed, the man who was primarily responsible for his wife's downfall.

As the matter stands, the defence could not be in better position.

Thaw may take the stand and tell of the effect his wife's story had upon him, of his growing conviction that the death of Stanford White was desirable, of the visions which came to him, the voices which rang in his ears commanding him to kill White, and of the irresistible feeling which swept over him on the night of June 25 when he saw White on Madison Square Roof Garden, to shoot the man and rid the world of his presence.

All that would have a powerful effect upon the jury, but the defence, at present, do not believe it will be necessary. These lawyers who, since Delmas took hold, have been working like a piece of well oiled machinery, are confident that they have their case well in hand.

Expect Thaw's Acquittal.

See the unity of belief and the confidence they display:

Delmas said to-day:

"I could not wish for more than we have gained. I am confident that the men of this jury will forever stamp such characters as White with their condemnation, and, in so doing, will exonorate Harry Thaw. He did as any one would have done after hearing that awful story. An acquittal, and a speedy one, is what I look for."

And McPike:

"I do not believe there are twelve men in this whole land of ours that would convict a man who acted as Thaw did. He most assuredly acted as the protector of the woman he loved."

Gleason:

"Everything is fine. We are all pleased and look for an aquittal."

O'Reilly and Peabody join in the same sentiments.

Thaw has been infused with similar confidence, and it is but a simple statement of fact to say that since the publication of the letters of Thaw and the introduction of Mrs. Thaw's pitiful story the production of the will and the damnable news that White pursued Evelyn Nesbit Thaw after her marriage, there has been a marked revulsion of feeling in favor of Thaw.

Mother to Testify.

One of the strong cards which the defence has still to play, after the will has been introduced and Mrs. Harry K. Thaw has finished her story, is the calling of Mrs. William Thaw to the witness stand to give evidence in favor of her son. Mrs. William Thaw will probably be seen on the witness stand before the coming week. She is fully prepared to testify and will give a wealth of stories illustrating her son's eccentricities, as well as tell of the insanity which existed in her family.

The defence bank greatly on Mrs. Thaw. But with the wife and mother both having appeared before the jury the lawyers believe they will have built up an invulnerable case.

From the great mass of rumors which were afloat to-day concerning the case, two of a somewhat more reliable character than the usual rumors afloat. One of these is that the defence has got hold of a note written by White to Mrs. Harry Thaw after her marriage asking her to meet him. The attorneys for the defence will not discuss this.

Will Defend White's Name.

The other rumor was that friends of the late Stanford White have raised a big fund which is to be applied to the collection of evidence to refute the charges against the memory of the dead architect, and assist District Attorney Jerome, through a noted member of the bar, to secure the conviction of Thaw. The prosecution refused to discuss this, though it is to be assumed that Jerome would be highly flattered at the thought of White's friends hiring a lawyer to help him try the case.

Thaw's lawyers, in their search for evidence to assist them in completing their case, to-day made a demand on the police for certain articles which were taken from one of White's studios the morning after he was shot. It is said that these articles will furnish indubitable proof of the truth of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's story of her experience with White.

There is no definite idea yet as to how much more time will be consumed in presenting the case to the jury. But certainly it will not be inside of two weeks. The defence still has to finish with Mrs. Harry Thaw, it has to prove the will, over which there will be considerable argument. It has to examine Mrs. William Thaw, Miss May McKenzie and several other important witnesses not to mention the expert alienists. All of these witnesses will have to be cross-examined by Jerome before he begins to put in evidence in rebuttal. And when he begins to rebut he will have at least twenty witnesses to call, including his own experts.

Experts Favor Defence.

Here again arises a strong point in favor of the defence. In going on the stand to testify against the theory of Thaw's insanity at the time he shot White the State's experts will have to testify without ever having had an opportunity to examine the defendant.

On the day after the shooting, and for several days subsequently Thaw was examined by the experts for the defence, who are fully prepared to testify that at that time he was insane. In refutation of this testimony the experts for the State will only be able to say that, under certain conditions, which will be set forth in the State's hypothetical question, Thaw was not sane at the time. But in doing so they will have to admit that their views are based only on theory, they did not examine the defendant and have absolutely no idea as to what his actual condition was immediately after his arrest. The State, of course, can demand the right to examine him now. But that will avail little. There is no claim that Thaw is insane now.

COLD KILLS CATTLE BY THE THOUSAND

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 9.—Mild weather, has at last come to the great Canadian Northwest, has caused the snow to rapidly disappear on the cattle ranges, revealing, through the bringing to light of carcasses of dead animals, the awful havoc wrought to the stock industry by the terrible cold and unusually severe storms of the present Winter.

From all indications thousands of cattle perished. The danger is far from over as there is a great scarcity of food on the ranges. It is feared thousands of animals that survived the cold will now die of starvation.

FEAR CHILDREN HAVE TRACHOMA

Worcester to Prevent Spread of Disease.

Worcester, Feb. 9.—Trachoma, it is feared, has been discovered in the case of two children who attended the Providence Street School on the east side of this city, in the heart of the tenement house district. The children were sent home the moment the doctors feared that they were victims of the dreaded eye disorder and now the Board of Health and the public school officials here are taking every precaution to prevent the disease if it is trachoma, from spreading.

The public school physicians are closely watching every pupil and James C. Coffey, clerk of the Board of Health, is taking stringent precautions. He says that both of the suspected cases are in the same family and that the disease is spread only by means of actual contact.

in many respects that the defence believe it most convincing evidence that the wrongs suffered by his wife for a time at least wrecked Thaw's reason.

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the prisoner will be a witness in his own behalf. It is claimed that he will be put upon the stand to corroborate his wife's story and confess himself a victim of the hallucination that for months he was haunted by a spectre. It is also stated that his attorneys have decided that he shall remain mute in his courtroom seat while the battle to save his life goes on.

But one of the strongest cards which Delmas holds in reserve is the testimony of Mrs. William Thaw, the unhappy young man's faithful mother. She will be called upon to tell the sad tale of Thaw's boyhood, his escapades and irresponsible conduct which drove his father to limiting him to an income of $2,500 a year in a will which bequeathed $40,000,000. That a mother should be called upon to testify that her beloved child is insane is one of the most poignant features of this woful trial.

Thaw Eager to Testify.

From the beginning Thaw has insisted that he shall be allowed to take the stand in his own behalf. It has been a mania with him that if he could tell the jury why he shot White that no twelve men would do otherwise than applaud and acquit him. He wants to tell of the heartrending agony that numbed his faculties when Evelyn Nesbit confessed to him in Paris that she had been White's victim when a mere child. He wants to tell how he learned that the great architect had made the degradation of young girls his pastime, and how he had brooded over the shame which had befallen the one he loved and wished to marry until he became convinced that he was an instrument of Providence to slay the ruthless destroyer.

He wants to testify he feared for his own life after he learned how White had plotted to injure his reputation and that, sleeping or waking, there was always before his eyes the image of shrieking Evelyn Nesbit in the power of the man she accused of the foulest wrong a woman can suffer. He wants to tell the jury that he was in terror lest the man whom he believes once drugged his wife would try to end her life by subtle poison when he found she had escaped his clutches forever.

After Thaw shot White he took his wife in his arms and said, tenderly: "It is all right, dearie; I have probably saved your life."

Ever Haunted by Spectre.

Thaw, it was claimed, was haunted by a presence. It hovered over the bed in which he tried to sleep and sat beside him when he dined. It was his shadown when he walked the street. It muttered to him that to save his own life, if not to save his wife, he must kill Stanford White.

So profound was the impression made by this figment of a tortured imagination that it is assumed by the defence that he was swayed by uncontrollable madness.

But whether or not the prisoner is a witness, it is believed almost universally that young Mrs. Thaw's story has struck a titanic blow at the shackles welded by the State to bind him to the death chair. Her testimony was the sensation of the second week of the trial of her husband on the charge of premeditated murder.

There are rumors that friends of White propose to raise an immense sum to defend his memory from the damning story of his infamy told by this witness. That he was the kind of a creature she described is vouched for by Anthony Comstock of the Society for the Prevention of Vice.

"I know," he said, while lying ill to-day with pneumonia, "that Stanford White was a monster." When Mrs. Thaw resumes the stand for direct examination she will continue until the last syllable the confession which, when told her husband in Paris, made Thaw sob like a tortured being, gnaw finger tips and pace the floor like a madman.

Then Delmas will say in his winning, benign voice, "Your witness, Mr. District Attorney!" and Jerome will try to make the chair upon which she sits like a rack provided with all the wracking, tormenting verbal devices which his inquisitoral genius can command.

Ordeal Before Child-Wife.

That she has a terrible ordeal before her under cross-examination is more than probable. But those who have heard her story—told with pathos and simplicity beyond assumption—have little fear that the famed interrogative skill of the chief prosecutor can destroy its effect upon the jury, no matter how crafty, aggressive or relentless Jerome may prove to be.

Returning from a visit to her husband in the Tombs to-day, the girl wife said:

"I have no fear of Mr. Jerome—what can he do to me? I have told the truth."

The note of sincerity was in her voice. She appeared neither downcast nor hopeful. She had the eyes of one who had spent countless nights weeping. Her face was lacking in any expression of deep emotion. It was languid as if there had been a relaxation of an overwrought soul. Her face was tired—suggesting the one described by Balzac which "had crossed the arid steppes of despair.

Visits Husband in Tombs.

She looked neither to the left nor right at the crowd which surged about. She led her mother-in-law to the vehicle in which both had ridden to the gloomy prison to see husband and son. She cuddled down into the cushions of the vehicle like one sorely wearied in mind, in heart and body.

To-morrow will be a day of surcease from torture. The next day she must again bare her anguished heart to the world. She must face again the gaping crowd, the peering faces, the cynical smiles and worst of all the relentless, stern-faced prosecutor. She knows that he is watching every glance of her eye, every intonation of her voice and every gesture to store his magazine with the ammunition with which, when his turn to question comes, to try to batter down her story. She will have to go over it again with him—and that will be the cruellest moment of her life since she fell victim to her husband's arch enemy.

After her may come to the witness stand girls who were her intimates in the days when she fluttered like a bewildered butterfly behind the footlights. There may appear in court Mazie Follette, Edna Chase, Hattie Forsythe of Providence, Edna Goodrich, Paume Marr and Paula Desmond. They may all come as witnesses for the prosecution, to aid Jerome.

But they cannot be used to attack the credability of Mrs. Thaw's story in the main. That story is not to be considered by the jury, according to the law, as either false or truthful. It is introduced merely as a statement she made to Thaw before her marriage to him to support the contention of the defence that it unbalanced his mind and made him too irresponsible to permit the State to take his life for murder.

But no matter what the law says, it is the belief of all who heard her story that it will have weight with the jury under "the unwritten law"—the law which no court recognizes, but which so many juries have held to be supreme.

It is a story which the District Attorney is debarred by court rules on evidence to even attempt to refute. He can only attack it indirectly. Getting it introduced in the form he did was a master stroke by Delmas. It left Jerome in the greatest dilemma as to how to introduce in rebuttal any evidence to stamp it as false and as a wife's desperate invention to save the husband who had risked a felon's death to avenge her.

EVELYN THAW'S STORY WILL NOT BE DENIED BY CHORUS GIRLS

Defence's Case Safe, Say Lawyers, from Contradictions Which May Be Made by Actress-Witnesses.

TRUE OR UNTRUE, STANDS IF TOLD TO HER HUSBAND

He Alone, It is Declared, Can Testify As to Whether the Recital Made by Him Drove Him to Slay White.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—When on the night of June 25, of last year Harry K. Thaw shot and killed Stanford White on the roof of Madison Square Garden there came to the front a number of young women, chorus girl friends of Evelyn Nesbit and Stanford White, and of Harry K. Thaw. There were conflicting rumors of what these girls knew and had seen and heard, of the dinners they had attended in White's studios, of what they had been told by Evelyn Nesbit, of this and that and a thousand other things.

To the District Attorney's office they came and their stories were written down. They are all forgotten now except these six girls:

Maxie Follette, Edna Chase, Hattie Forsythe, the Providence, R. I., girl, Edna Goodrich, Pauline Marr and Paula Desmond.

It is known that the District Attorney is counting on the stories of these girls; that he had intended that they should take the stand to disprove, if possible, the truthfulness of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw; to prove that the pitiful story of her ruin and her downfall differs from the actual known facts, backed up by dates, and places, and incidents.

All Knew Stanford White.

All these girls knew Stanford White. New York lawyers to-day in discussing the trial brought out a strong point as affecting the strength of the testimony of these chorus girls or of anyone else brought by the prosecution to discredit the truth fulness of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's story. That point is this:

The defence of Harry K. Thaw will not be weakened one mite by any evidence showing that the story of her ruin which Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told on the stand is untrue in every particular.

She says this is the same story she told her husband. The defence says that this story told him by his wife made him insane. That while insane he killed Stanford White.

The sole point, then, to be proved, if possible by the prosecution is: It is

That this is not the same story Evelyn Nesbit told Harry K. Thaw.

If Harry Thaw goes on the stand as it seems probable he will, and states that his wife did tell him this story, the defence is safe so far as the weight of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's testimony goes.

With this simple clear-cut ruling of the law the chorus girls have little or nothing to do.

What Girls Will Tell.

But what are they ready, what are they waiting to tell?

Maxie Follette, Broadway show girl, will tell that Thaw paid his attentions to Evelyn Nesbit while she was in the Floradora company, before she met White in Evelyn Nesbit Thaw says she met White first.

Maxie Follette says that when Evelyn Nesbit secured a place in the "Wild Rose" company, and it was White, that for the second time a rift began for the affections of two Nesbit girls, and a warfare of costly presents that on Christmas night in 1903, there was a scene in Reisenweber's cafe and Thaw, Evelyn Nesbit went downstairs and talked to some friends at a table near where White was seated. When his future wife came back a stormy scene took place between her and Thaw.

In her original score told the district attorney Miss Follette had this strong point for Thaw's side of incidents:

Whenever White's name was mentioned Thaw would fly into a terrible rage."

Edna Goodrich. Tells is the girl who, it is charged, took Evelyn Nesbit, thirteen years old on her first visit to Stanford White's studio in Twenty-fourth street. She may be called by the prosecution to disprove this detail of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's story.

Hattie Forsythe comes from Providence, R. I. She was long a friend of Evelyn Nesbit, now come to Broadway

Said to Have Left Note.

She is the actress, who it is said, left word at Stanford White's studio that "Mrs. Harry Thaw had called."

The next day White sent a note and basket of roses to Mrs. Thaw. This was on June 23 of last year. That night Harry Thaw killed Stanford White.

This incident had been denied. No mention of it has been made so far in the trial. Whether or not it is brought out Hattie Forsythe knew White and Evelyn Nesbit, and with Edna Chase and Pauline Marr and Paula Desmond, and other chorus girls, who were often guests of White's at dinner in his Madison square Garden tower studio, will be called to show that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has not told the truth on the stand about her relations with White and of conditions which they exchanged with her and with White; of the other side of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's story.

But what if it will were untrue, this child-wife's story? and the lawyers again is it the story she told the man who wanted to marry her? Whether or not these other witnesses the prosecution is marshalling can't answer that question. Harry Thaw alone can answer it.

Charcoal Stops Gas On Your Stomach

Wonderful Absorbing Power of Charcoal When Taken in the Form of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package Free.

Charcoal, pure, simple charcoal, absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas. Where does the gas go? It is just absorbed by the charcoal,—the gas disappears and there is left a pure, fresh, sweet atmosphere, free from all impurities and germs.

That's what happens in your stomach when you take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful purifiers science has yet discovered.

You belch gas in company, sometimes, by accident, greatly to your own humiliation. That is because there is a great amount of gas being formed in your stomach by fermenting food. Your stomach is not digesting your food properly. Gas is inevitable. Whenever this happens, just take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges right after eating, and you will be surprised how quickly they will act. No more belchings; no more sour risings. Eat all you want and what you want, and then if there is any gas going to be formed, one of these wonderful little absorbers, a Stuart Charcoal Lozenge, will take care of all the gas.

And it will do more than that. Every particle of impurity in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away by the charcoal. No one need to know why it does this, but it does, and does it wonderfully. You notice that the difference in your appetite, general good feeling, and in the purity of your blood, right away.

You'll have no more bad taste in your mouth or bad breath, either from drinking, eating or smoking. Other people will notice your bad breath quicker than you will yourself. Make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, so when you talk to others you won't disgust them. Just one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath sweet, and make you feel better all over for it. You can eat all the onions and odorous foods you want, and no one can tell the difference.

Besides, charcoal is the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood,—every particle of poison or impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing,—your clear complexion

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

GRAPHIC PORTRAYAL OF ATTORNEYS IN TRAGEDY BY ALFRED HENRY LEWIS

CLOSER observer of the Thaw trial is Alfred Henry Lewis, one of the fiction masters of America, and as shrewd a reader of men and women as is now putting impressions on paper. He is a Western man, and his views of another man from that section, who has leaped into national prominence through the Thaw trial are most interesting.

The other man is Delphin Michael Delmas of California, famed on the Pacific coast as a jury pleader second to none. Delmas is also praised at home as a trial lawyer of consummate skill. He is being lauded now in New York as a masterful legal tactician who in a moment turned the battlefield in Thaw's favor.

Alfred Henry Lewis has looked him over and studied him in action. The great lawyer's personality has appealed to the great writer. Subtlety, force and eloquence are the lawyer's most easily recognized characteristics. The writer sees a mind but he is very forceful and the owner of a style unique and magnetic to the reader's eye. He not only writes about this Thaw lawyer, but others. He says:

By Alfred Henry Lewis

Lawyer Delmas came to the front and took his seat in the Thaw forecourt.

Somebody jogged my elbow and said that Mr. Delmas looked like Napoleon. I considered Mr. Delmas sharply with reference to that fact. My opinion is that he does not look like Napoleon but tries to, which is more to his credit.

I never saw Napoleon but I take it that the alleged resemblance between that dead gentleman and Mr. Delmas depends upon a wedge-shaped face, on which Mr. Delmas carefully brings into the middle of his forehead, like the fore lock of a horse. Also the Delmas fore lock possesses a suspicion of waviness suggestive of curl papers. However, I shall disbelieve that suspicion until such time as the suggested curl papers, I shall—as I say the moralists—I shall scout it, whatever that may mean.

Says He Looks Like Moran.

Speaking of Napoleon and the alleged Delmas resemblance, far be it from me to discourage inner gentleman, but the truth is, Mr. Delmas looks like the Mr. Moran of Boston who was not elected a Bay State Governor last Fall.

Mr. Girvan's preliminary address to the jury was in its way a model. It was short, even lucid; no flounce, no flourish. Once, long ago, I asked President Roosevelt what he thought of oratory as a force in the world's affairs. He declined to answer in somewhat these words:

"I know nothing of oratory. I have never studied oratory, never tried to be an orator. My only effort when talking has been to say nothing I didn't believe, to say what I did say as briefly, as clearly and as simply as I could. I will do so now."

Mr. Girvan [illegible] closely the Roosevelt rule.

Gleason's Wearisome Speech.

Mr. Gleason, for the defence, made the Thaw "opening" statement. Mr. Gleason is grim, gray, globular, on the sunset side of sixty. It was a mistake to put him forth to open the defendant's case. His voice, not strong, but harsh, is hardly agreeable, his [illegible] is repellant, not persuasive; his emphasis is err tic and misplaced, his gestures y one and repulsive.

He is [illegible] for one hour and a half and accomplished nothing but the weariness of the jury.

It is neither Jerome nor Girvan that Thaw dreads most; it is the cold, scientific glitter in the exhilarating eyes of the three trained alienists whose gaze is directed upon him from time to time, measuring his every look and movement to try to discover the hooks upon which to hang the insanity record, with the prisoner stands even more than the electric chair, for he knows that such would consign him to a living death in a lunatic asylum.

Believes Thaw Sane.

Whatever he may have been when he fired the shot that sent Stanford White to his account, I believe he is now thoroughly sane, and as for physical degeneracy, there is not a trace of it visible [illegible] It is evident that [illegible] suffice and determine the mental solvency [illegible] of an individual case beyond [illegible] Also some of [illegible] "expert" may say [illegible] does; he may [illegible] he does not, but does [illegible] only Jack Is [illegible] belief in that [illegible] expert- [illegible] and which could be distinctly [illegible] over [illegible] knows [illegible] more than [illegible]

You can't get away from your teeth—but they will get away from you if you don't take care of them.

Cleaning your teeth with Sozodont is the very best care you can give your teeth—and the teeth will show their gratitude by staying where they grew and not falling out or crumbling away.

The simple easy, effective way is to use Sozodont and have good teeth.

Sozodont is made in three forms: liquid, powder and paste. Sozodont is sold everywhere.

JURYMEN CHAFE UNDER RIGID PRISON RULE

Men Chosen to Try Thaw Held in More Rigorous Confinement Than the Defendent Himself.

HE ENJOYS PRIVILEGES WHICH THEY ARE DENIED

Must Keep Together, Sleeping or Waking, Refrain From Talking of the Case Until Evidence Is In.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Thirteen men are prisoners tonight because of the Thaw trial. One is Thaw himself and the other twelve are jurors.

Although the latter were picked with extraordinary care to decide the fate of the prisoner, and are men of unblemished character, guilty only of eligibility as judges of a fellow being's dire deed, they are subjected to a commitment al most as rigorous as that imposed upon the accused himself.

They are even more restricted in privilege.

They are living in comfortably furnished rooms in a hotel but cannot leave it unless all go together, and even then are dependent upon the will of the guard.

Cannot Talk of Case.

They cannot say a word to each other about Thaw's guilt or innocence, the evidence they have been hearing or are likely to hear, without violating the instructions of the Judge. They must wait before they can tell impressions or even opinions until all evidence is in, until they have heard the closing arguments, the Judge's charge, and are locked up to debate and vote until they reach a verdict or cannot reach one.

That decision is days off or it may also be weeks away, during that time they are cut off from business, cannot go home or have unrestricted visits from wives or children, cannot read a newspaper or magazine until it has been censored and cannot even talk over a telephone.

When they arise in the morning they eat breakfast and prepare to go to court. They sit in their jury seats until the court adjourns and then are escorted back to their hotel. Nobody can speak to them on the way; they march back to dinner except each other and their guard. After dinner at night they have to put in several hours in each other's society. What do they talk to each other about? They have to put up with each other. They can be more get away from on the companions the law has provided than they can escape from fellow passengers or the crew of a ship in mid ocean.

Must All Walk Together.

They have to agree in many things before they can go to court. If they are to live harmoniously together. If eleven men want to go out for a walk and one man doesn't, the eleven cannot go unless the one man is complaisant enough to go also. All twelve must be together all the time. day and night, until a verdict is reached or a disagreement recorded.

There was talk about the jury going to the theatre tonight, but that had to be vetoed. Something about the show ran tonight he said was the stage; somebody in the audience might shout an opinion.

Some of the jurors are getting restive over this confinement. They have had a little outing four hours. After they left the courtroom Friday they were marched back to the hotel like a file of prisoners, and this morning awoke to a long tedious day with no court proceedings to enliven it. Some of them wanted to go for a walk, others didn't.

All the other actors in the great trial was busy. The Thaw lawyers and the District Attorney and staff were laboring with astonishing industry to prepare the way to score points for or against Thaw on Monday. The Judge had personal affairs to attend to, the Thaw family had plenty to occupy their time, and the prisoner himself had his lawyers to consult, and could read, could see his wife or mother, his sisters and brother if they called at the Tombs

Thaw Could Read Newspapers

Most of all he had every newspaper in New York on hand and all were filled trial reports and articles written about himself that were interesting in every line and word. It is true that his cell is not as comfortable as a hotel room and that he could not go out of doors for a walk, even under guard. But two latter small items were about the only ones under which he fixed worse than jurors.

While the lawyers were at work the jurors lounged, smoked and talked over everything, except the great matter which they had been sworn to consider. Only Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and Miss May McKenzie had a day nearly to themselves. William Thaw, the prisoner's mother and the Countess of Yarmouth, his wife, secluded each other for beautiful apartments in the Hotel Jerome and blocked for the hours the world should bring with the rest. "Thaw mouthed."

Only relief to the world was free except the hapless thirteen one because the law suspects him to be mad and the other twelve because the law says they are good enough to be jurors. Neither the State shall take a man's life, but not quite good enough to be further trusted.

Women Followed by Crowd.

Evelyn Thaw and Thaw's mother had another taste of the length to which curiosity seekers will go this afternoon when they left the Tombs, after spending an hour at Harry's cell door Hundreds who had gathered about the prison door to see them leave, rushed forward as the women tried to enter an automobile. The girl wife of the prisoner was hustled here against the steps of the prison Police were hurriedly summoned and had to use strenuous measures before they could force the crowd back and the women could get into their vehicle.

Thaw's twelve jurors slept late Captain Lynch, who is their personal stage, served without the bell boys had literally to pound their panels before he roused them for breakfast. When he made the rounds of the guarded rooms all the jurors had risen and they felt in splendid health.

They spent the forenoon lounging around the Broadway Central and reading the scattered copies of the morning papers. Then there came up a discussion as to how the rest of the day should be spent and how to night and to morrow should be passed. And right there the jury had its first disagreement. Some of them wanted to go walking, some wanted to stay in the hotel and some favored a carriage ride.

Then they learned that several theatre managers had extended invitations to the performances, accompanying the same with promises that the Thaw case should not be mentioned or suggested. But Judge Fitzgerald had withheld his consent to any theatre going and some of the twelve were disappointed.

MAX NORDAU CURTLY REFUSES TO WRITE UP THE THAW TRIAL

Paris, Feb. 9.—Max Nordau, the famous French criminologist, is one of the many students of crime on the Continent who have refused fabulous sums to go to New York and write up the Thaw case from a scientific standpoint.

"I would not have my name connected with the case for a million dollars," says Nordau.

Several others were as curt in their refusals. The Parisian public is insatiable, however, in its thirst for detailed accounts of the trial. Five columns of cable dispatches from New York are printed daily.

The general belief in this capital is that Thaw will probably be freed, or at least not given more than penalty. Since Mrs. Evelyn Thaw testified the gossip is that a American jury will give the plea of justification more weight.

All the actions of Nesbit and Thaw while residing in Paris are reviewed and discussed at length. Many music hall artists have appeared at newspaper offices with tales of liaisons with Thaw and receiving cruel treatment at his hands. One woman who appears in a pierhouse in the Rue Des Martyrs says that Thaw not only delighted in pistolling his women friends but gave them reminders of delight with magnificent presents, only to seize the gifts and hurl the people and to the devil. "I intend," said this woman, "to go to New York after the trial and sue him for the diamonds and furs he gave me and then stole from me."

EVELYN THAW ONE YEAR YOUNGER THAN SHE SWORE TO?

PITTSBURG, Feb 9 Mrs Evelyn Nesbit Thaw on the witness stand in New York contradicted a statement made when she obtained her license to wed Harry K. Thaw in this city respecting her age.

On the witness stand she declared that she was born on December 25, 1884. The records in the office of the Marriage License Court show that she swore she was born on December 25, 1885, and signed her name as is a statement from her mother, Mrs. Charles J. Holman, that the gift to her on December 26, 1885.

Friends of young Mrs. Thaw cannot understand why she should make a false statement about her age unless it is purely an error.

Does Your Stomach Feel Happy When Meal-Time Comes?

When you sniffle in the air the appetizing aroma of something cooking, do you feel that you could sit down, open your mouth, pin back your ears and eat with a delicious gusto, everything set before you, and not feel any bad effects from it?

In other words, can your poor stomach take care of everything and anything you put into it? There are thousands and thousands of people who do not know what it is to have a good, strong, healthy stomach, nor do they realize what it is to have a good appetite.

You can have an all-powerful stomach and a fetching appetite for every meal, and every day, if you give your stomach a rest, and let something else take hold of your food for you and digest it as it comes into the stomach, something that is harmless but that really does the work of digesting, quickly and thoroughly.

This "something" is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, the most effective little tablets in the world for curing anything that may be wrong with your stomach. One ingredient of these precious little workers digest 3,000 grains of the coarsest or richest food put into the stomach. Think of it, 3,000 grains. They are really an artificial stomach, because they act just like the stomach, they digest your food, just as though you didn't have a stomach at all. It supplies the stomach with the digestive juices which have become weak and scanty.

Then your indigestion, dyspepsia, sour risings, trash, belchings, acidity, fermentation, loss of appetite, aversion to food, bloaty feeling, heartburn and nausea, will be no more. You can then eat anything you want, all you want, whenever you want, and your stomach will feel fine before and after your meals. Your appetite will be a thing of pleasure to have, your meals will be a pleasure to eat and relish, and your digestion will be thorough and soothing to the whole body

You can't do your work well, or be cheerful, or have energy or vim or ambition, when your stomach is bad. Make yourself feel good after a hearty meal, feel good all over, clear your mind and make you enjoy life, by taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

CLARA MORRIS ON THE GUARDING OF JURYMEN

"THE way of the transgressor is hard, but how about the harder way of the present day juryman?

"It is hard in addition to being treated as suspects to be isolated as those with contagious disease.

"To be sure the Judge denied any doubt of their fidelity and honor, yet in the same breath made them absolutely prisoners and cast about them restrictions absolutely unknown to the man in the Tombs. "I KNEW OF WHITE'S DEN," SAYS COMSTOCK, "STORY OF EVELYN THAW IS TRUE"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Feb. 9.—Anthony Comstock, lying dangerously ill of pneumonia at his home in Summit, N. J., this afternoon gave out a statement to interview, which is one of the most important contributions to the history of the Thaw case that has yet been furnished, with the exception of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's own story.

"I know that Stanford White was a human monster," said the invalid head of the anti-vice society. "I know that much of what Mrs. Harry Thaw has stated in a witness is true. I know that Stanford White's den in the tower of Madison Square Garden was as she described it.

"And what I know I learned after I had been given the first clues by Harry Kendall Thaw himself.

"My first knowledge of this case dates from the Summer of 1905—about a year before the sitting. I should say the afternoon of a hot, well dressed well bred young man came to me in my office in the Temple Bar building. He seemed to be laboring under excitement and it was evident that he was desperately in earnest. He opened the conversation by asking me if I were interested in the suppression of vice. Then he wanted to know if my society gave special attention to the arrest and punishment of men who victimized young girls.

"I told him that we did. He jumped up abruptly, said he would see me again and left.

"A few days later he came back. As nearly as I recall, he said:

"'I am Harry Kendall Thaw of Pittsburg. You have heard of me. I want to tell you of a man who is particularly alive to the safety of young girls of the stage. It is a debt which society owes to itself to help him before he can be brings about and sorrow to any more victims.'

"He has come into my own life in such a way that I desire above everything else to see him punished in order that others may be spared the suffering he has brought upon us. His name is Stanford White, he is an architect and he has an infamous den in the tower of the Madison Square Garden."

"That is officer was the statement," continued Mr. Comstock, "although of course I asked him a great deal more of the matter. He left my office after securing my promises to investigate. He agreed to pay the cost of looking into the case. He at once mailed me a check of sufficient size to defray the necessary expenses and subsequently wrote me several times upon the subject of White, asking each time what progress we were making.

Thaw's Story Confirmed.

"Our investigation confirmed to a great degree what Thaw had told me. Our detectives were astounded at what they discovered. We worked hard and I learned a great deal, but of all cases these are the hardest to prove under the rules of evidence."

SEES MIGHTY LESSON IN COURT TRAGEDY

Julian Hawthorne Declares Such a Trial Makes Nation Realize the Hideousness of Vice.

"BRINGS SHADOW OF PERIL CLOSE HOME TO EVERYONE"

More Good Than Harm Will Be Done By Sensational Exposures in Case, Says the Famous Writer.

By Julian Hawthorne.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—In the present somewhat precarious state of our civilization on the social side, such an exhibition of the seamy aspect of it as is afforded by the trial of Harry Thaw and the confessions of his wife in order to save him might be dreaded by anxious and conservative citizens. They would remember that evil may spread contagion merely by becoming known and that the imagination of a community, stimulated by this illustration of vice and depravity on one side, and on the other the taking into a man's own hands of vengeance for intolerable wrong, might open the way to a general outbreak of lawlessness and passion.

There is plausibility in such arguments. Nevertheless, after listening for a week to the unfolding of the tragedy through testimony offered according to the rules of law, I am disposed to think that more of good than of harm will be done by the trial of Harry Thaw.

We need stimulus of the imagination in order to acquire an adequate realization of the true nature of the life we lead and the conditions which surround us. Ordinarily we move through existence blindly, impelled by forces to which we yield without examining them, and drawn on by motives which we accept as part of the inevitable spirit of things.

But imagination, when aroused, gives us intellectual detachment, and by vividly presenting before us the [illegible] and sufferings of others, and awakening sympathy and emotion, renders us at the same time alive to our own characteristics, tendencies and position, and admonishes us of our own perils. We see ourselves for the first time as others see us, and may be taught to counsel ourselves with the prudent counsels that we sometimes hear (and neglect) from others.

Hideousness of Crime.

Again, it is wholesome that we realize, occasionally, the essential hideousness of vice and crime. We read about them in works of fiction; we glance at the head lines that announce them in newspapers we listen, in streets and clubs, to cynical and indifferent allusion to them by our fellows. But all this does not make us realize them; on the contrary, we are thereby prompted to regard them lightly and without responsibility. We instinctively avoid subjecting ourselves to stress of emotion, to concentration of attention, to serious thought, in spite of the seemingly insistent fact that we will often make great effort to put ourselves in the path of such influences.

But when the influence becomes actual and actively operative [illegible] we see before us the victim herself of foul and selfish outrage, and hear the plaintive fall of her tones as she tells her shame before the crowd; when we contemplate the countenance and mark the expressions and movements of the man who has put himself in the shadow of death; when there rushes upon us the conviction that these sins and evils really took place and fatally affected the lives and fortunes of fellow creatures like ourselves; when the concrete scenes which formed the background of the events are portrayed before our eyes in dry and punctual detail—then do we gain impressions of this every-day life that we are living which may well modify our attitude toward the part of life which belongs to ours [illegible].

Others but as Ourselves.

This universe in which we live appears to us at last as a universe and not as a polliverse, and we know that other men and women are but our own selves but little different from those which have occurred to us. By what fortuitous chance was it that you or I are not sitting in yonder prisoners' dock; that your wife or mother or mine is not telling her tale of grief and despair in that witness chair?

These are wholesome, if stern, reflections; they embody the everlasting truth underlying our existence of dextrous compromises and avoidances. And they are brought home to us as nothing else can bring them, by the sight and hearing of such a drama as is revealed by the trial of Harry Thaw and the confessions of his wife.

There is another reason why I hold this trial to be for the benefit of the community. [illegible] ponder [illegible] majesty of justice [illegible] forces of the statute laws, those lawyers, acting well their parts; that judge, grave and [illegible] on the bench [illegible] solemn under their responsibilities [illegible] the clerk of the court, calling the defendant to the bar and administering the oath to the witnesses [illegible] these policemen guarding the doors, the audience [illegible] eyes and ears [illegible] sombre court room, and the pa[illegible] and tortured [illegible] these [illegible] which combine to force upon our comprehension the awful responsibility incurred in the taking of a human life.

No License to Take Life.

A man has been slain, and this court is held to determine whether his slayer must die. The deed was done in the exaltation of passion in the delirium of revenge, in the thought that the wrong thus requited could be punished by no organized legal tribunal; but in the long months that have elapsed since then the passion has become chilled, the revenge seems no longer conclusive.

God sent us here to live and, in our appointed time, to die. He gave us no license to take away another's life. He who is able to create a man is able to handle him with justice. Who are we to step in and snatch that awful function from His hands? When has murder led to good? And when has the execution of the murderer led to eternal justice?

I cannot regret this trial. It helps to show us what we are, and whither we are drifting. We may hope that the help will not be in vain.

Chorus Girl on Whom Jerome May Call to Cast Discredit on Testimony of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. She with Other Actresses, Whom Knew Both White and Beautiful Model, May be Asked to Refute Tale Told In Orgies That Took Place in Rich Studios.

MISS EDNA GOODRICH

WIFE'S PITIFUL STORY IS MIGHTY DEFENCE FOR SLAYER OF WHITE

New York, Feb 9.—The love of a wife for her husband probably never called for a deeper, more bitter, more humiliating sacrifice than that which Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is making before a judge and jury of the Supreme Court to save the young Pittsburger, who married her, from the electric chair as a punishment for slaying Stanford White, the architect, in the roof theatre of Madison Square Garden last June.

For two days this frail child-woman sat in the witness chair facing a court room crowded with morbidly curious, and told how she was trapped at the age of fifteen and a half years by the talented clubman whose life her husband took.

Every line of the story of White's inhumanity and artistically veneered brutishness, every detail of the relentless pursuit of her beauty, a pursuit which continued even after she was the lawful wife of Harry Thaw, came from her trembling, bloodless lips. Time and again the horror of it brought tears [illegible] every eye.

There were [illegible] heard who were not convinced that [illegible] little woman's sacrifice would not be [illegible] and that Harry Thaw would be [illegible] as a direct result of it. The jurors were obviously affected, and it will take the strongest sort of refutation to change the "not guilty" effect she produced.

Starts to Refute Her Story.

This refutation Prosecutor Jerome at once set out to build up. His detectives are searching the [illegible] Broadway for chorus girls, [illegible] actresses who had played [illegible] life of ruinous gaiety [illegible] White led. They have found many [illegible] and will watch them until the [illegible] to strive to put their stories before the jury.

Evelyn Thaw's ordeal is not nearly over. Sometime to-morrow, when certain legal technical snarls have been untangled, she will pass from the hands of Delphin Michael Delmas, the chief of counsel for her husband, to be questioned by District Attorney Jerome, who has never been known to show quarter in cross-examination. It will be characteristic of him to go through her testimony with a fine tooth comb, looking for possible equivocations, and the slightest find would be milled to the utmost.

Evelyn Thaw, the wife, was not the only one who made heroic sacrifice and endured intense suffering these first days of the trial. There was the prisoner's aged mother, once the proudest of Pittsburg's society leaders, and the mistress of millions. She was forced, that nothing might be left undone to save the life of her son, to sit by while able lawyers proved a strain of insanity through both sides of the house of Thaw.

Alice, Countess of Yarmouth, whose titled marriage brought such pride to the family, did not shrink as the proofs of hereditary insanity were brought forward, to be cabled promptly to her newly made English friends. Nor did Thaw's other brothers or sister fall back from the dread unpleasantness of the lines of defence on which Thaw is staking his life.

Agony to White's Slayer.

The young prisoner suffered most acutely. His agony during his wife's recital of that terrible night in White's magnificent "studio" in the tower of Madison Square was evident to all in the court room. He hung his head with the shame of it. He had begged the girl not to take the stand, and to the last moment declared his willingness to risk a death sentence that she might be spared. He went from the court room to spend a sleepless sobbing night in the Tombs.

Howard Nesbit, the girl-wife's brother, is said to have sided with her [illegible] his sister's account of her downfall. Young Nesbit enjoyed many favors at the hands of White and in spite of all that has come out about the dead architect still seems to take his part. He may be a witness for the prosecution.

The telling of Evelyn Thaw's life story has had the effect of forever blackening the reputation of the man whose skill as an architect is [illegible] [illegible] now hang their own heads in silent shame.

Easy Start for Trial.

The [illegible] of Harry Thaw for the murder of White began last Monday, the prosecution leading off easily and content [illegible] [illegible] The people claim it was a deliberate, malicious, premeditated taking of a human life. After proving that fact to you we will ask you to find the defendant guilty of the crime of murder in the first degree."

The nineteen-year-old son of the dead architect, a Harvard senior, was the first witness. He told in a simple, unassuming way of the portions of the last night he spent with his father. Then came the witnesses of the shooting on the roof of the Garden. Their told their several stories without bringing out anything that was not already known.

The opening guns for the defence were fired by John B. Gleason, who was at the time Thaw's personal choice as chief of his counsel.

The outline of the defence he summed as thus:

"We will produce to you direct evidence that there is insanity on both sides of this man's family. We will show that his perverted mental condition existed for two years. The greater part of our evidence will be that the defendant killed Stanford White under the delusion that he was an agent of Providence, without malice and premeditation, and in the belief of self defence."

It was a clever combination of several lines of defence and Mr. Jerome was not [illegible], but failed to frame objections that [illegible] with the judge.

Unwritten Law—Defence.

There was no direct mention of the "Unwritten Law"—the theory that a man has the right to take the life of one who dishonors his home. Yet the "Unwritten Law" was written all through the [illegible] formed its backbone, and was to be [illegible] back to again and again. This was [illegible] demonstrated when Evelyn Nesbit Thaw began the story of her bitter young life.

The insanity plea is important [illegible] necessary, a point to be strongly dwelt upon. It is the bridge across that chasm between the law of the State which says "Thou shalt not kill" and the [illegible] with which the law is avenged.

The defence that Thaw thought he was an agent of Providence is a bolster to the plea of hereditary insanity [illegible] been found for it in evidence already introduced for the defence.

How Thaw hoped to indicate self defence puzzled everyone until the second day of the trial, when a witness was produced who swore that Stanford White had threatened to kill Thaw because of his attentions to Evelyn Nesbit, who was then a chorus girl.

"We will show you that this man's temperament," continued Lawyer Gleason, "in which the seeds of insanity were implanted, was liable to spring up at any time. We will show you that he had what doctors call the psychopathic temperament, that he did not awaken naturally from his sleep as other children did, but with a start; that he suffered from convulsions.

"We will show you that this defendant has for three years been suffering from a disease of the brain which culminated in the killing of Stanford White and which left its effects clearly observable after the homicide."

Family Sacrifice for Son.

In many other paragraphs did he refer to hereditary insanity, and the Thaws sat in the court room and listened. It was a wonderful example of self-immolation of an entire family for a beloved son.

The prosecution was able to cut Attorney Gleason's speech in half by careful objections, many of which Judge Fitzgerald sustained, and when he closed there was a feeling that Thaw's case had not been put before the jury with all possible strength.

This feeling increased the next day, when several witnesses were sent away from the stand without being questioned, [illegible] [illegible] to make points for Thaw.

Dr. [illegible] the [illegible] on cross-examination. He [illegible] his [illegible] and [illegible] wobbled out of the witness [illegible] thoroughly discredited [illegible] [illegible] with Harry Thaw [illegible] Fifth avenue street car a few years ago [illegible] Thaw [illegible] might have had some weight, but Dr. Wa[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] the Thaw camp was in [illegible] [illegible] Delmas, who was brought [illegible] in defending "unwritten law" [illegible] finally sent Thaw an ultimatum. He demanded that the case be taken out of Mr. Gleason's hands and put entirely in his own. Thaw finally weakened, though he [illegible] however [illegible] of [illegible] lawyers [illegible]

Delmas to the Rescue.

CATTLE KILLED BY EATING DYNAMITE

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 9.—Several cattle have been killed by eating dynamite in the Kanogan Valley in British Columbia, and there is a mad lot of settlers there. The chief sufferers have been ranchers of Mabel Lake. They say the dynamite was some that was unused by the government road-makers who worked last Fall on roads in the vicinity.

S[illegible] the carcasses of half a dozen animals have been found and as many more are missing. The residents of the district feel strongly on the matter and intend to ask the government to have it investigated.

Appendicitis Conquered.

Kansas City has a doctor who has found what the medical profession has been seeking to learn for many years, "The Uses of the Appendix Vermiform." This doctor, G. H. Carson, looks upon surgical operations that remove the appendix as a crime against nature. He has cured permanently every case of appendicitis that has been brought to him for treatment at his home, Twelfth and Washington streets, Kansas City, Mo. He publishes a magazine which gives full details of this method of treatment and will send it to all who write for it.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP—RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

La Grippe Is Epidemic Catarrh.

THE disease now known as "grip" used to be called "influenza."

It very closely resembles a cold, but is more tenacious in its hold upon the system and produces more profound disturbances.

Grip is in reality epidemic catarrh. When it once begins it spreads over the country very rapidly.

People do not catch the grip from each other, but each one catches it from the atmosphere.

"Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe."

Robt. L. Madison, A. M., Principal of Cullowhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education.

He is a writer of occasional verse and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines—religious, educational and secular.

In speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says:

"I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe.

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils.

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried."

Healthy Mucous Membranes.

Those who are fortunate enough to have perfectly healthy mucous membranes ordinarily do not catch the grip.

The mucous membranes lining the nose, throat and lungs, when in a normal state, are an effectual barrier against the invasion of grip.

But, if there happens to be the slightest catarrhal derangement of the mucous membranes, then the victim becomes an easier prey to the grip.

This in part explains why some people get the grip, while others do not.

The rational thing to do is to keep the system free from catarrh. In attempting to do this most people have found Peruna to be invaluable.

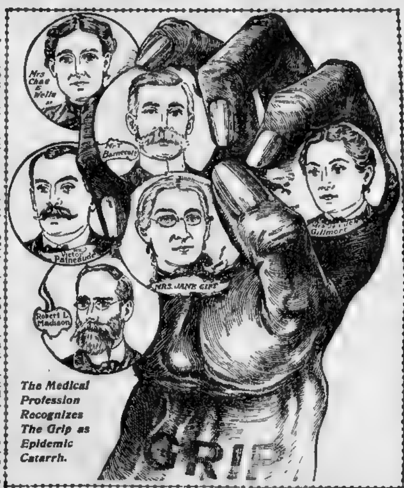
Systemic Catarrh, the Result of La Grippe. Pe-ru-na Receives Credit for Present Good Health.

Mrs. Jennie W. Gilmore, Box 44, White Oak, Ind. Ter., formerly Housekeeper for Indiana Reform School for Boys, writes:

"Six years ago I had la grippe, which was followed by systemic catarrh.

"The only thing I used was Peruna and Manalin, and I have been in better health the last three years than for years before.

"I give Peruna all the credit for my good health."



The Medical Profession Recognizes The Grip as Epidemic Catarrh.

During an epidemic of grip Peruna should be used. The doses recommended on the bottle are sufficient.

After the grip has once been acquired, Dr. Hartman recommends the use of Peruna in teaspoonful doses every hour during the acute stage, after which the directions on the bottle should be followed.

Experience has shown that the people who use Peruna as a remedy for grip generally recover sooner and are less liable to the distressing and long continued after-effects of the grip.

When Peruna has not been used during the course of the grip and the patient finds himself suffering from the after-effects of this disease, a course of Peruna should be resorted to.

Suffered Twelve Years From After-Effects of La Grippe.

Mr. Victor Patneaude, 328 Madison St., Topeka, Kan., member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength—but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again.

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system. My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe.

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time at little expense."

Pe-ru-na—A Tonic After La Grippe.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wells, Sr., Delaware, Ohio, writes: "After a severe attack of la grippe, I took Peruna and found it a very good tonic."

Mrs. Jane Gift, Athens, Ohio, writes: "Six years ago I had la grippe very bad. I read a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of grip by Peruna. My husband bought me a bottle of Peruna. I was soon able to do my work. I continued using it until I was cured."

AMERICANS ARE RAPPED BY BRITISHERS.

King's Poulterers Condemn Our Restaurants; Tim Healy Our Sordid Frivolity.

IMPOSSIBLE TO FIND LIBERTY HERE, HE SAYS

Special Cable from the Hearst News Service.

Copyright, 1907, by W. R. Hearst.

London, Feb. 8.—Unlike the king's friend, Mrs. Hawfa Williams, the king's poulterer, William Bellamy, and the brilliant Irish politician, Timothy Healy, who have just returned from New York, do not find everything in America admirable.

Mr. Bellamy said to-day: "I visited all the smartest restaurants in New York—Sherry's, the Waldorf, Delmonico's, the St. Regis, Martin and others. They serve meals with admirable celerity, but I missed the deft, unobtrusive service which is characteristic of London's best restaurants.

"Apparently the Americans don't want to eat quietly; they prefer noise, rattle and din. One reason why New York restaurants acquire bad habits is because in London is that too much is attempted in the menus. Leading London restaurants rarely have on their menus more than fifty dishes, but each is perfect.

Menus Too Long.

"New York menus are too long. The quality of game and poultry served in the best New York restaurants is far inferior to that served in London. The best New York chickens and turkeys are not comparable with London's prime beef and mutton, beef and fish is infinitely superior to New York's."

Timothy Healy, member of Parliament who is outside the breakwater of the Irish National party, has nothing to say about New York restaurants, but bluntly asserts that he does not like the frivolity and disorderliness of American life. When asked how he found America on his recent trip, he said:

"What I tell Americans when I'm there is: 'I do not like your money making, your frivolities do not interest me and your liberty I don't appreciate. The first time I was ever glad to see the British flag was when my steamer entered a Canadian port after leaving America. There is an air of freedom under the British flag impossible to find in money making America.

"This ought to interest Healy's Irish admirers in America, who emigrated in order to find liberty under the Stars and Stripes denied them under the British flag. Continuing Healy said:

Interested in King's Attitude.

"One thing impressing me most in many interviews I had with Irish leaders in the United States was the extraordinary importance they attach to the attitude of the King towards Ireland. Irishmen of all types and classes everywhere asked me: 'Is it true the King is with us?'

"The feeling of patriotic Irishmen in the United States regarding Edward has greatly changed toward the British monarchy since his accession to the throne. Edward, Rightly or wrongly, they regard him as the friend of Ireland. Would the king now could walk naked through Ireland from north to south, and all the people would offer him welcome. Before he died the King couldn't be safer anywhere than in Ireland."

SOCIALISTS MAKE NEW AFFILIATIONS

Special Cable from the Hearst News Service.

Copyright 1907 by W. R. Hearst

St Petersburg, Feb 9. The result of the elections for the second Douma, thus far, show that of the 2,360 electors chosen 151 Monarchists number 559, Moderates, 414, Left, 870; Nationalists, 117; Independents, 260, and others 140.

The opposition parties have strong further into the lead as a result of the polling of yesterday, which has practically determined the make up of the new hall colleges in six more provinces. Those provinces have fifty-six representatives in Parliament and of this number the opposition has twenty-one seats assured and probably will have twenty-nine.

The Conservatives possibly may get six seats. The province of Tver, the cradle of the Zemstvo, has elected a majority of Liberal electors. Among these are F. I. Rodichieff, the star orator of the last Parliament, who is one of the rare Constitutional Democratic deputies who has not disqualified from this election for having signed the Vyborg manifesto.

The province of Vyatka will send a solid delegation of thirteen Radicals to the next Parliament. The province of Podolia with thirteen members, of Tavrida with six, and the province of Kherson with ten Radicals, probably will belong to the Left party. The province of Simbirsk will send six radicals.

Since the completion of the negotiations with the Constitutional Democrats, the Soviet of Workmen's Delegates of St. Petersburg have joined with the Social Democrats, the Social Revolutionists and the National Socialists, and have thrown the greatest boom to the Constitutional Democrats. The Constitutional Democrats have as a nucleus the electoral colleges and ten labor representatives, and hope to make a good showing in the five wards of St. Petersburg

Bucharest, Feb. 9.—The populace is thoroughly aroused over the insult offered to the Crown Princess Marie last night during a performance in the Lyric Theatre when a well known woman named Simeteresa arose from her seat in the balcony and denounced the Crown Prince Ferdinand and a lady prominent in the highest society who was present. The Crown Prince arose and left the theatre during the great uproar and the Crown Princess remained calmly in her seat.

There are no grounds for the scandalous utterances of Mme. Jarcus, and it is believed that they were inspired by enmity toward the future queen.

Crown Princess Marie is a niece of King Edward of England, a cousin of the Czar of Russia. She was a Princess Marie of Edinburgh and sixteen years ago when Prince Ferdinand fell in love with her, he had been banished from Roumania to prevent his marrying Helen Vacarescu, a beautiful but poor descendant of a noble Roman house, who was a literary companion of all the Roumanian poets.

After Princess Marie married Ferdinand a clique was formed in her adopted country to discourage her and it was asserted by incorrigible scandalmongers that she and her husband were to be parted and divorced. But she bravely faced her enemies and won the love of her future people by her courage and tact. She is devoted to her four children and especially to Prince Nicholas. He is looked upon by Roumanians as a lad with a great future. They think he is the wittiest and brightest of all living princelings, and that if fate parties of "Crown Prince Nicholas" Queen of would lead him safely to the throne he would make Roumania a great and prosperous land.

Prince Nicholas is to be given a thorough military and state craft education by his mother says that her greatest concern is to develop in the manly characteristics from that he will form in the army and navy. London, Feb. 9.—The Association for the Promotion of Flight, which hopes to stimulate interest in aeronautics in England and impress the government with the necessity of keeping abreast of foreign governments in this respect, was recently formed. A strong provisional committee was chosen, consisting of Hon. C. A. Parsons, F. R. S., of steam turbine celebrity; Hon. Arthur Stanley, chairman of the Automobile Club; Major B. F. S. Baden Powell, president Aeronautical Society; Hon. Hiram Maxim, Mr. S. F. Edge, Colonel Capper, R. E., director Military Balloon Department; Colonel Fullerton, R. E., General Aeronautical Society; Mr. Hildage Crookes, F. R. S., Mr. H. Walter Stanger of the Automobile Club, Cesear Hawkins of the Aeronautical Society

Inventors to Co-operate.

One of the foremost aims of the association is to co-ordinate the experiments in aerial navigation of various inventors, and bring them so far as possible under one control. It is decided to recommend those most suitable to conduct experiments with sufficient funds to enable them to bring their experiments to a successful conclusion.

It is proposed that in the event of the success of any invention which the association has founded, the enormously valuable assets of a fully equipped constructing practical flying machines, shall be handed free of cost to the state.

Way to Experiment.

The program states that now concerted effort attempts under one control would do more to advance the science than twenty independent attempts, or that $125,000 expended by the society on the consecutive experiments of $5,000 or $10,000 each than a sum of $5 million spent on the separate independent experiments

Secret Police Visit Every Tailor in St. Petersburg, Searching for Missing Uniform of His Majesty's Own Cossack Escort

St. Petersburg, Feb. 9.—A plot evidently directed against the Emperor came to light to-day through orders issued to the secret police to use every effort to identify the purchaser of a uniform of His Majesty's own Cossack escort, which was captured during a recent raid.

Detectives have been directed to visit every tailor in St Petersburg, and the records have been examined to the provinces.

The use of revolution uniforms is a favorite device of the terrorists. It was employed in the attempt against the life of Premier Stolypin and in the assassination of Military Procurator Pavloff. The Cossack garb is an open sesame to the guards of the palaces at Tsarskoe Selo and Peterhof

HERRINGS SERVED TO KAISER'S GUESTS

Potato Salad and Beer Form the Rest of the Feast at the Royal Card Parties.

Special Cable from the Hearst News Service.

Copyright, 1907, by W. R. Hearst.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—The Kaiser enjoys a game of "skat" as well as any one of his humblest subjects, and he has instituted select card parties at the palace. He invites on these occasions chiefly veteran generals and ministers.

The evening's amusement begins with a repast which can by no means be called royal, consisting of herrings, butter, potato salad and beer. The points played for are not high, but then the Kaiser is universally known for his frugality, and one could not expect him to play for high stakes for his amusement, whatever he may do politically. The points never rise to more than one pfennig.

His Majesty gets very angry when mistakes are made, but he does not mind losing as much as one would think. When he wins His Majesty is always in high good humor. The midnight hour always brings an end to the party, even if the game then in progress is not quite finished.

The Kaiser, who declared in Damascus in 1898 that he was the friend not only of the Sultan, but of the whole 300,000,000 Mohammedans all over the world, has been taken at his word by an aged Turk with a grievance. The Turk, Hussein Aga, came to Berlin some months ago with a petition to the Kaiser. The other day he made an attempt to present it while the Emperor was returning to the palace in his automobile.

Hussein Aga, attired in Turkish costume and turban, stood in the midst of the spectators and as the imperial auto passed leveled through the police and rushed toward the Kaiser, crying out in his own tongue, "Long live the Emperor!" and waving his petition. The automobile, however, passed too quickly for him to put it into the Kaiser's hands.

Hussein Aga was arrested and placed in the prince guard room, but was released as soon as his grievance reached the Kaiser. His grievance is that he has been unlawfully out of large property in one of the Sultan's provinces, which can get no redress in Constantinople. He came to Berlin to seek justice, but all the "friends of the Mohammedans" as he shares the general belief among the less educated classes in Turkey that the Kaiser's words at Damascus nine years ago had a practical meaning.

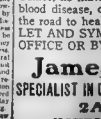
Dr. James M. Solomon,

Boston's Most Successful Specialist in the Treatment of Cancer, Tumor, Chronic and All Blood Diseases.



Disease in any form and at any time should be promptly and vigorously treated until the patient returns to a normal condition and all symptoms have disappeared. Nature has provided us with means of throwing off disease and avoiding sickness when the blood and general system is in a proper condition. Health should be the heritage of all. Disease though sometimes inherited, is more often acquired and is generally the result of carelessness or negligence. This is especially true of Chronic and Blood diseases, Cancer and Tumor. Careful attention to the health should be paid at all times, but there are two seasons in the year when particular attention should be paid to the general health, namely, Spring and Fall. We are now at a time of year when everyone, even those that consider themselves well and in good health should take an ounce of prevention and thereby save a pound of cure.

There is nothing that will eradicate disease if it already exists or prevent an attack of illness like my combination of roots, herbs, gums, barks and berries. I claim that my remedies are due to a change in the blood, caused by a special or specific poison or germ, and by removing the cause and restoring the blood to a normal condition the disease will be conquered.

I have been curing Cancer and Tumor by my ABSORPTION METHOD for 25 years. No knife, no pain, no loss of blood, no confinement. Once a Cancer or Tumor has been destroyed by this method the disease never recurs. I claim that my germs upon which my growth depends have been destroyed absolutely and permanently, therefore the cure is a permanent one. Let me urge you not to delay. If you have the least suspicion that you may be afflicted with Cancer or Tumor, come to me at once and let me examine and advise you free of charge. If you already have Cancer or Tumor, no matter in what form or where located, or any chronic or blood disease, call or write me immediately and I will put you on the road to health. AMERICAN DUCHESS SAVED FROM FIRE

Former May Goelet Carried from Sick Bed Just Before Floor Fell.

London, Feb. 9.—The Duchess of Roxburghe, formerly May Goelet, who has been ill, following a chill due to a long motor drive, sustained a bad shock from an outbreak of fire in unused room under her bedroom. This room, in which some old furniture and pictures were stored, was being aired by means of a fire in the fireplace, and some sparks flew out and set fire to some old oak woodwork around the fireplace. It was not discovered until the Duchess's room overhead was filled with smoke.

The Duchess was removed hastily from her room just before a portion of the floor fell. The shock was so great that next morning her temperature increased and a hospital nurse was summoned from Edinburgh and is still in attendance.

TO REMOVE BODY OF LEO XIII. IN MARCH

Special Cable from the Hearst News Service.

Rome, Feb. 9.—Tadolini, the sculptor of the monument to the late Pope Leo XIII. in the crypt of St. John Lateran, has promised that the work shall be finished by the end of the present month, and it is expected that the body of the pontiff will be transferred from the Vatican to his tomb in that church at the beginning of March.

PURITY OF THE SYSTEM

Is the Secret of COMPLETE HEALTH.

The body of man is the most perfect and delicate mechanism in existence, and the least OBSTRUCTION or accumulation of filth in any part of it, will make it hobble, move IRREGULARLY and SPASMODICALLY, and if not attended to promptly may stop the machine altogether.

Isn't that plain common sense to any person that has had any experience with machinery of human invention, from the sewing machine to the triple-expansion engine? All the parts, joints, connections, gearings, must be kept absolutely pure and clean to get the best results. A careless, untidy engineer is a failure and will lose his job.

Nature has been kind to us by handing over to us to be occupied during our earthly existence, an almost automatic, elastic mechanism, that will run itself if only properly cared for.

All that she asks, is that the body be supplied with "Pure Food" fuel of the right kind, applied in the right way,—that a lubricant be furnished for the joints, muscles, nerves through the marvelous distributing and collecting system of arteries and veins,—and that all parts of the engine be used for the purposes intended without undue strain.

But, when little mistakes are made in eating and drinking, with perhaps excessive exertion, there is a liability of a stoppage in the natural cleansing process, and you are liable to become UNCLEAN INSIDE.

That means obstruction, stoppage of the normal functions, fermentation, poisoning of the blood by the waste matter, and a liability of the development of any of hundreds of serious diseases.

Cascarets Candy Cathartic are fragrant, sweet, mild but effective little tablets that were first compounded from pure, harmless, vegetable substances, under a Pure Drug of their own, in 1896. OVER-KING OF SAMOA KAISER'S NEW TITLE

Idyllic Island of South Seas Bestows Sonorous Names on German Emperor.

Special Cable from the Hearst News Service.

Copyright, 1907, by W. R. Hearst.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—"Great Chief and Over-King of Samoa" is now added to the Kaiser's lengthy list of titles. In that idyllic island of the South Seas the natives have given these sonorous titles to the white Emperor they have never seen and whom they hold in veneration as an almost divine being

The Governor of Samoa, Dr. Solf, always uses in his reports to the Emperor the honorable titles, which are now given in unofficial books of references. Dr. Solf, by the way, has just taken possession of Robert Louis Stevenson's house at Vailima as his official residence.

Is the Kaiser becoming vainer? The Potsdam Court is asking. Wilhelm II. wears more orders and decorations in these days than he has ever affected. He is seldom seen without five orders, at least the Red Eagle, the Iron Cross of Hohenzollern order, a Russian, an Australian and an Italian decoration. These are but a small selection from the Kaiser's seventy decorations.

Even the Kaiser, however, cannot appear in his own chamberlain, Count von Eulenberg in the number of decorations. The count's orders are so numerous that if he wears them all at one time he would be covered with glittering baubles down to his knees

HEARST BILL IS A BLOW AT BRIBERY.

New York Representative Offers Measure to Prevent Corruption at Polls.

Does those large financial interests require from elected officials in return for the campaign contributions that have helped to elect them. Therefore, I maintain that the proper method is to limit strictly the amount of money which may be spent on any election and not to limit merely the amount which a candidate may himself contribute in any effort to be free and independent of corporation control.

My bill is framed to limit strictly the amount of money that can be spent and the use to which it can be put, and my bill defines any other expenditure of money as bribery. It furthermore contains a clause which will be absolutely effective in the detection of this bribery and limit proper use of money. The person guilty of this improper use of money is, under my bill, punishable by a fine of not more than $10,000 and not less than $2,000 half of which amount shall go to the informer who complies with immunity. Thus there will be a constant reward offered of from $5,000 to $1,000 in every case of the improper use of money in elections and, moreover, the man who gives the bribe automatically offers the reward for his own detection. Every time a man offers a bribe or commits one of these acts defined as bribery, he thereby offers to anyone standing in his felonious act a reward of from $1,000 to $5,000 to convict him of this felony.

Punishment for False Registration and Illegal Voting Provided.

There is a further clause in my bill which offers a similar similar punishment for false registration and illegal voting. According to that provision, upon conviction of the accused the informer secures one half of the fine of from $1,000 to $5,000 and immunity. Thus a continual reward of from $500 to $2,500 is offered by the election criminal for his own detection. There are also full penalties for these crimes and I am absolutely positive that if this bill were passed it would prevent the corrupting use of money in elections, which, as I have said and believe, is the most serious menace to our republican form of government.

I say that the use of money by corporations is not the only evil that threatens us; the use of money by any individual, or any collection of individuals, may be as great, as improper and as harmful to our institutions and our political independence.

This morning we all read in the papers that Mr. Rockefeller had given $32,000,000 for public education, a most patriotic and praiseworthy thing for him to do. I cannot commend him too highly for such an act, and yet we cannot help feeling the possibilities of the misuse of such great wealth to control the government under our present lax election laws.

How Fortune Like Rockefeller's Could be Misused.

If Mr. Rockefeller gave thirty-two millions for a certain purpose—no matter how beneficial—he might give one fifth or one tenth of that sum to preserve political conditions that make the accumulation of such great wealth as his possible. Six millions, or even three millions, would go far towards carrying State or even national elections. And if Mr. Rockefeller should be too high-minded to devote any part of his great wealth to such purposes, there are many multi-millionaires in this country, whose wealth has been secured by political favors and special privileges, who would spend millions to continue the opportunities for further political favors and to preserve their special privileges.

We needs not and do not, as American citizens, sell to barter away the right of progress toward an business for industry, enterprise and financial security to another man's or that reward may be, but as American citizens we do wish to prevent the control of our government by powerful financial interests who use it for their selfish ends and personal advantages. We do wish to secure honest, wise and necessary legislation and to limit the power of money in elections, that the people should adopt most definite and drastic measures. I am confident that my bill would stop the corrupt use of money in politics, but I do not think it will be passed for I do not believe that there is any desire on the part of either of the old parties to interfere with the use of money in politics.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

GILLETTE, IN PALE OF DEATH, DESERTED BY MOTHER.

Parent of Slayer of Grace Brown Abandons Attempt to Secure New Trial and Returns Home. Youth Faces Electric Chair

Utica, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Mrs. L. M. Gillette, mother of Chester Gillette, now awaiting death in the electric chair in Auburn for the murder of Grace Brown, has abandoned her son and, leaving him to his fate, will return to her home in Denver.

She called today upon County Judge Ward, who, while District Attorney prosecuted her son, and asked him point blank if he was sincere in his belief that Chester killed Grace Brown. The judge said he was. With tears in her eyes she exclaimed:

"In that case all I can do is to pray for his soul. I will at once return to my home in Denver rather than devote my efforts to securing a new trial for him."

Mrs. Gillette, who has been carrying in order to raise funds for a new trial announced that her efforts had been a failure and that her reference to the alibi given by Mr. Ward told her to leave Grace Brown out of her lectures if she intended to give any more. Mrs. Gillette replied that she had assailed the character of the girl in order to make her son appear in a better light.

CATHOLICS WILL DANCE OUT GAY SEASON.

Most Important Pre-Lenten Function Planned To-morrow Night—The Young Men's Association to Entertain

Everything is in readiness for the reunion of the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston, which is to be held tomorrow evening in Symphony Hall. The ball has been elaborated, and is expected the greatest pre-Lenten social function of Boston Catholics. Interest in this year's reunion is quite marked, and is expected that the affair will be even more successful than any former reunion.

Of the Catholic societies in Greater Boston, the reunion of the Young Men's Catholic Association stands pre-eminent, and the various committees which are responsible for the success of this year's social carnival have been hard at work for weeks.

Supper is to be served continuously at the tables in the floor of the grand march through the foyers of the main auditorium of Symphony Hall and in the balcony.

Many distinguished Catholic guests have been invited and accepted invitations to attend the function to-morrow night. Among the invited guests who have promised to be present are Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, Edward Hanify, Supreme Knight, and James J. Phelan, State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus. Thomas Cummings, National President, and John J. Boyce, State Grand Regent of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Daniel A. Cronin, High Chief Ranger of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, Henry V. Mackey, President of the Massachusetts Union of Boston, Michael A. Leland, President of the Christian Brothers' Union, Thomas Tobin, and James W. Foster, President of the City Point Catholic Association.

Among well-known Catholic women who will help in the grand march are Mrs. Frank J. Burke, Mrs. James F. Gilligan and Mrs. Joseph H. O'Neil.

That the invited guests and members of the association, with their friends, shall feel assured of adequate transportation to and from Symphony Hall, the Huntington Avenue, the committee in charge of this matter have arranged for special cars leading to every point of the Boston Elevated Railroad system and to nearby cities. They will insure the prompt handling of crowds of any dimensions.

JUSTICE MOODY IS HONORED BY THE ESSEX BAR.

Three hundred and fifty members of the Essex County Bar Association gathered in the banquet rooms of the New American House last night and gave an honored member of their association, William Henry Moody, the new Justice of the United States Supreme Court, a royal welcome home. It was a complimentary banquet to one whom Essex County considers its own, but there was no doubt about the most distinct and drastic measures. I am confident that my bill would stop the corrupt use of money in politics, but I do not think it will be passed for I do not believe that there is any desire on the part of either of the old parties to interfere with the use of money in politics.

ALLEN IS AGAIN REPORTED IN CHILI.

Embezzler, Who Got Church Funds, Said to Have Cabled to Family

The earthquake which destruction in Valparaiso, Chile, to have revealed the presence of Willard E. Allen, who fled about the first of August, 1903, having embezzled about $70,000, from the Methodist Preacher's Aid Society. It is rumored among some of the Allens here that, after the upheaval, cablegrams were passed between the Chilian metropolis and members of Allen's family in this city. The latter, however, are silent about the matter, refuse, as hitherto, to discuss his movements.

Since Mr. Allen's sensational confession, mailed to his pastor, Dr. Conrad, the Boston police have made every effort to locate the fugitive, but without success. It has been reported by certain authority that Allen had left Chile and that he had been heard from and even his son in Buenos Ayres but it has never been verified. The latest rumor, however, is direct from Valparaiso, where it is reported that Allen is a resident of the BOSTON OF AMERICA.

I have heard nothing of Mr. Allen's whereabouts since the confession," said Chief Inspector Watts of the Boston police department, "but the latest report I have received is that he was in Valparaiso, Chile. I have also been informed that Allen's son was in Buenos Ayres, but I have never been able to verify the report. I have also been informed that Allen had been located in Chile, but I have never been able to verify the report. I have also been informed that Allen had been located in Chile, but I have never been able to verify the report.

LODGE'S RAP AT GUILD STILL STIRS STATE CHIEFS

Newspaper Man Says Senator's Denial Is Not Taken Seriously.

A. MAURICE LOW, newspaper correspondent—"Lodge did criticise Governor Guild, his denial notwithstanding."

EUGENE N. FOSS—"Lodge is not honest on the tariff question, and never was."

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR DRAPER refuses to sign Governor's tariff petition to President Roosevelt.

The Lodge incident refuses to die out, despite the desperate attempts of the arch Senator from Massachusetts to scare the issue away from it. In the face of his denial of the statement that he had received from Governor Guild an "unmerited" and guilty of interference because he started a petition to the President for an extra session of Congress to revise the tariff, A. Maurice Low, Washington correspondent of a Boston newspaper, reiterates the charge that Lodge did make the statement.

He adds that the Lodge denial amazes the Massachusetts situation and that no one takes it seriously. Lodge has denied that he ever said these very derogatory certain subsidiary remarks that Senator Guild had made to him, insisting that Lodge did criticise Guild, Mr. Low says

"No One to Blame But Himself."

"Unfortunately for Senator Lodge this writer is not in the habit of making assertions that are not based on solid foundation. Doubly unfortunate that Senator Lodge should criticise his friend, our governor, Guild, in the face of men who are under no obligation not to expose what Mr. Lodge said or did. If detectives were working on the case they could not have done more than Lodge himself."

And now comes Eugene N. Foss, leader of the tariff revisionists, and says:

"What do I think of his statement that he has been friendly to tariff revision but that he has been misrepresented and misunderstood? Why he has never been against on the tariff question in his life. Lodge, the villain of a conspiracy to give him an entirely specious standing on the tariff? There's too funny.

"Why, no one could ever place him squarely in favor of any proposition for or against. It is true that he did a few years ago father a bill for free hides but he never called it up in Congress. It was a mere plaything for him at the time with the prevailing sentiment, and was neglected because he did not honestly favor it.

"Lodge does not approve of Governor Guild's tariff action and I know it," emphatically declared Mr. Foss. "And his red-hot protestations of friendship at this time do not impress people with his sincerity.

"In the words of Shakespeare, 'He doth protest too much.' Everybody that knows anything about Lodge or the tariff knows that he is with Gov. Guild, represented by General William F. Draper and William Whitman, that he has always thundered that no tariff must never be destroyed except by its friends. And they are the highly protected industries' friends.

"Draper Won't Sign."

"If the Senator is so anxious to help the Governor on this tariff matter, why does he not suggest to his man, Lieutenant-Governor Draper that he sign the petition? Draper has not signed.

"If Lodge favors the views Draper does not sign. And there you are. What better evidence do you want of Lodge's real attitude. As Lodge is, so is Eben Draper."

SNUB FOR CITY AND TOWN CHIEFS.

Metropolitan Board Ignores Call to Council of Mayors and Selectmen.

The Mayors and chairmen of Boards of Selectmen of all the cities and towns in the Metropolitan Park District were yesterday for the second time snubbed by the Park Commissioners, when William H. de las Casas, head of the commission, curtly refused to hold that year, to attend the conference of mayors at Hotel

"It seems to me a positive act of discourtesy," dewared Mayor Fitzgerald, "for the board not to send a representative to the meeting of the Mayors and chairmen of Selectmen of the cities and towns which meet the expenses incurred by them. A very strong impression prevails in the community that the Metropolitan Park Commissioners are a law unto themselves, and this opinion is certainly strengthened by the action of its members in neglecting to participate in the deliberations of this council."

The meeting was called to consider all bills before the Legislature relating to the Metropolitan district, and to further the aim of creating a metropolitan council to be composed of the Mayors and chairmen of the various cities and towns. Both Chairman de las Casas and Henry H. Sprague, chairman of the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Commission, were invited. The latter was present.

ROOSEVELT WOULD RUN AGAIN.

With Ryan's Aid For President

Traction Magnate Makes Deal to Aid Executive in Seeking Third Term.

SECRET OF MYSTERIOUS WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE

Interview Arranged by Secretary Root, New York Financier's Personal Friend.

MORTON ALSO AIDS IN MAKING MEN FRIENDS

Other Republican Presidential Aspirants Alarmed by Fast-Spreading Reports.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—That Thomas F. Ryan is pledged to the support of Theodore Roosevelt for a third term is generally understood by well informed politicians here.

It is believed that the alliance between the President and the traction-insurance magnate was consummated last week when Ryan and Roosevelt had a long secret conference at the White House.

Ryan, unheralded, slipped into Washington on an early morning train. Immediately on arriving he drove to the White House. Apparently he was expected, for he was at once ushered into the presence of the President. Other visitors were waiting, and others arrived from time to time, but one and all were told that it would be impossible to say how long Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Ryan would be engaged.

When Ryan left the White House he hurried to the depot and took the first train for New York. He absolutely declined to say a word about his visit more than he called to "pay his personal respects to the President."

After Third Term

Roosevelt's intimate friends know that he is anxious for another nomination. Every time that a public man in any section of the country states that the "people will draft Roosevelt," the President's cronies are highly tickled.

At first it was thought that Ryan's visit had some bearing upon the Panama canal contract, but later developments gave the case more of a political than a business aspect.

For one thing it has been ascertained that the White House conference was brought about by Secretary of State Elihu Root, who can justly pose as the mutual friend of the two gentlemen involved.

For several years Messrs. Roosevelt and Ryan have been coming together. The Philippine church affairs furnish the original ground of a common understanding. Secretary Root's good offices brought about an extremely friendly feeling between the other two men. Messrs. Ryan and Roosevelt have been intimate for years, each highly esteeming the other.

Mr. Root was the lawyer whom Mr. Ryan employed to attend to the legal details of the vast combinations Mr. Ryan effected. The Root fees were enormous and Mr. Root is quoted by a lawyer friend as declaring that Mr. Ryan has consistently his lawyer's personal adviser in the matter of investments. In fact he made the Root investments and was for a time and probably is now the custodian of the Root fortune.

Mr. Root went from Mr. Ryan's employ to the cabinet.

Paul Morton, an admitted railroad rebater, and then Secretary of the Navy, left that position to become the head of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, after Mr. Ryan bought the Hyde stock and was in sole control of that company's policies and millions, it is said.

Mr. Morton, a close friend of the President, also helped to cement the Roosevelt-Ryan friendship.

President Roosevelt is making no effort to suppress politicians who "boom" him for a third term. If ever a rattlesnake, Foraker, Taft, Cannon and others who are regarded as prospective candidates for the republican nomination in 1908 are viewing the situation.

They all sat up and paid marked attention to-day when the President's message was received by Governor T. Durbin, of Indiana, who has given out a formal statement that Roosevelt's nomination next year is both necessary and certain.

DIES WHILE CUTTING ICE.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 9.—While superintending the cutting of ice with which to fill the icehouse on his farm, Marbury Beeler was stricken with heart failure at his home, near Sharpsburg, and expired before a physician could be summoned. He was sixty-five years old.

REMARRY AFTER BEING DIVORCED FOR FIVE YEARS

Second Ceremony Unites Lowell Couple Twenty Years After First Wedding.

Lowell, Feb. 9.—George L. Lawson, one of the leading merchants of Lowell, was remarried here to-day to Mrs. Ella Lawson, to whom he was married first twenty years ago, and who five years ago secured a divorce from him.

The marriage to-day followed a second courtship which had lasted for three months.

For four years and nine months after the divorce the Lawsons did not see each other. One afternoon, three months ago, Mr. Lawson and his former wife met in the street. They shook hands. They lunched together. Mr. Lawson asked if he might call. His former wife said yes. He called. Pretty soon he was calling as often as he had twenty years before. A couple o, weeks ago he secured Mrs. Lawson's consent to a remarriage.

The marriage was performed to-day by the Rev. Allen Ferris in the rectory of the High Street Congregational Church. The couple will live in the house they lived in before.

SUNRISE COURT TO FINISH UP DIVORCE DOCKET

Chicago Judge Calls Early Sessions to Please Sportive Lawyers.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Judge McEwan originated to-day a rapid fire divorce schedule and instituted sunrise courts on Saturday in order to clear up his "matrimony docket."

Laura E. Curtis appeared in court at 8 o'clock this morning with testimony to support her charge that her husband, Carlos, had "used her head for a punching bag." She asked that she be freed from her obligations to him, which was granted her in twelve minutes.

Attorneys had objected to opening court at 10 o'clock Saturdays because it interfered with their Saturday afternoons in the golf field or fishing streams. The judge sympathized with them and announced that hereafter court will open at 9 o'clock on Saturday.

BROKE CHILD LABOR LAW TO GIVE BOY A SHOW; FINE, 1 CENT

Kind-Hearted Barber Haled to Court by State Officer on Criminal Charge.

"One cent fine," decided Judge Cutter in the Chelsea Police Court yesterday, when he found Ralph Luprell, a barber, guilty of violation of the child labor law. But there was a note of sympathy in his voice and an approving smile on the faces of those who heard, and Ralph Luprell left the court room a philanthropist rather than a stony-hearted oppressor of the poor.

It was State Officer Malcolm Sillers who hailed Luprell to court, alleging that he employed Alma de Fleyter, seven years old, who was not equipped with the certificate from the school authorities or a certificate from a physician which the law demands if he is over fourteen years and under the age of sixteen.

Luprell acknowledged the charge.

"I let the boy shine shoes nights in my shop," he said. "He needs the money. He has no home, no father and mother, and he asked for work.

"He had no money to buy the certificate. He had to work, or beg, for he had no way of getting his support."

WED AND TWICE SEPARATED IN A SINGLE YEAR

Whitinsville Woman, Recently Reconciled After Seeking Divorce, Leaves Home.

Whitinsville, Feb. 9.—After having married, left her husband, sued him for a divorce, patched up the trouble, and eloped with him to Worcester on a second honeymoon within a year, Mrs. Emory Burroughs has again left her home and departed in the direction of her mother's home at East Upton. Mr. Burroughs was taken entirely by surprise, his wife having promised to go riding with him yesterday just before her departure.

He and his wife were seen walking together on the street yesterday, paying a friendly visit to Attorney A. E. Seagrave, who represented Mrs. Burroughs when she sued for a divorce. They returned home at 6 o'clock. Mr. Burroughs started to harness the horse, but when he returned for his wife she had disappeared. Neighbors saw Mrs. Burroughs leave the house, carrying a handbag, and get into a ride with a ten pedler going towards East Upton.

The couple were married a year ago three months. Late Saturday Mrs. Burroughs sued for divorce in Worcester. On December 31st she drove from her father's home to Upton. On the way she met her husband. Then he says received a letter from his wife asking him to come to Worcester on a second honeymoon.

Mrs. Temple, her mother, who it is said, had opposed a reconciliation, hotly pursued the couple, even applying to Deputy Sheriff Floyd at Northbridge for help at 1 o'clock in the morning. The deputy told her he did not have charge of her daughter and advised her to go home. It is asserted that Mrs. Temple came here and visited Mrs. Burroughs' home, but could not persuade anyone. A few days later Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs returned home, apparently living happily since.

HUB SHARES OIL KING'S BOON?

Part of Rockefeller's $43,000,000 Gift to Education May Come to Boston.

PLAN TO CENTRALIZE IN THREE LARGE CITIES

Women's Colleges Will Come Under the Scope of the Distribution.

WELLESLEY CERTAIN, SAYS REPRESENTATIVE

Barnard Also Named Among Those Which Are Nearly Sure to Get a Slice.

BOSTON is likely to profit through the gift of $43,000,000 which John D. Rockefeller has just made to the educational system of this country.

Through Frederick Gates, his personal representative, Mr. Rockefeller yesterday declared that it is his idea to centralize in three of the principal cities in the United States much of the work that will be made possible through his latest gift.

By some of his friends it is held probable that Boston because of its many educational facilities will be made one of the three points from which the Rockefeller millions will radiate learning.

Mr. Gates said last night:

"We operate sympathetically and helpfully in higher education with the religious denominations.

Wealth and Population, Pivots.

"Our aim is to fix upon the centers of wealth and population to form the permanent pivots of our educational system.

"We mass our funds on endowments, securing in this work the largest possible local co-operation."

The most comprehensive idea ever made public of John D. Rockefeller's purposes in giving his millions for higher education was furnished by Mr. Gates, who is chairman of the General Education Board, as well as personal representative of Mr. Rockefeller in his philanthropies and charities.

Mr. Gates made it very plain that the influence of the oil king's endowments will be exerted in the direction of centralizing education in the great cities.

While the Rockefeller policy as outlined does not foreshadow disaster to the country college, it does distinctly indicate that the bulk of the income of the $43,000,000 which he has given to the general education board will go to supply the need of the great cities, which, it is pointed out, are sorely lacking in facilities for higher education.

Women's Colleges May Share.

"It is altogether likely, yes it is even certain, that the women's colleges, Vassar, Bryn Mawr, Barnard, Wells, Elmira, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe and Wellesley, will come under the scope of Mr. Rockefeller's gift.

"All these institutions are filled to overflowing; they are unable to house and care for the multitudes of young women who are knocking at their doors, and it is a fact that if the gates to entrance to one of these places of learning she has to be entered three or four years in advance of herself, only the other day found it necessary to enter the name of my daughter for 1910 in one of these colleges in order to have the best assurance that she would be admitted, and even then I was obliged to accompany her name with an entrance fee.

"One of the first things that the general education board now will do will be the consolidating of this overcrowded condition by the establishment of new women's colleges and the enlargement of those which now exist.

REBELLION IN VENEZUELA GROWING

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Feb. 9.—Dispatches received here from Venezuela state that the later country is in a state of insurrection, following the effective landing a few days ago of General Antonio Paredes at Fredericksburg, yesterday, putting a force on the coast. Thousands are flocking to General Paredes, and he is on the point of attacking. General Miguel Hernandez Cipriano have already taken place in Guayana and Zulia, two of the most important states of Venezuela.

General Rafael Montilla, a man of great prestige, at the head of 2,000 well armed men, has joined the state of Sucre and is said to have practically annihilated all forces that have been opposed to him. He is now marching toward Maracaibo, the capital of the state and metropolis of the west coast of Venezuela, which Castro favors as his successor, and who commands the bulk of the Venezuelan army. He is in Victoria, a short distance from Caracas, the capital. Should Gomez attempt to resist Paredes he will be an easy victim for Alcantara, who is merely waiting for a favorable opportunity to wrench the government from his hands.

BROKEN-HEARTED MOTHER LABORS UNTIL SHE BRINGS SON'S SLAYER TO JUSTICE

DEVOTES TWO YEARS TO GET THE EVIDENCE

Robert McGraw Must Answer for Death of Benj Farwell.

By Eleanor Ames.

BACK of the indictment by the Suffolk County Grand Jury of Robert McGraw, a negro, for the murder of Benjamin Franklin Farwell on the night of April 25, 1904, lies a marvelous story of a gray-haired mother's tireless determination to bring her son's slayer to justice.

McGraw was night watchman in the factory of the American Gauge and Valve Company, Farwell was employed by the same company as day engineer.

On the night of the killing, after having struck Farwell down and shot him, McGraw dragged the body to a nearby shed, then calmly walked to a Tremont street restaurant, and telephoned the police that he had shot a man in self-defence.

At the hearing, although there were various discrepancies in McGraw's story and motive for jealousy and although the negro had an unenviable reputation, no bill was returned against him and he was discharged.

Police Dropped Case.

So far as police effort was concerned the case was settled. But nothing was further from the mind of a certain broken-hearted, but determined, mother than such settlement.

Mrs. Isabelle Farwell knew her dead son better than anybody else in the world. She knew his character, his associates, the life he lived, the views he had of life and people.

She knew of his relations with McGraw and she was perfectly and thoroughly convinced in her own mind that the killing was deliberate, premeditated and wilful and over her bereaved soul she felt a mutilated love, she vowed, that granted physical strength she would never rest until justice done the boy of whom she had been so cruelly robbed and punishment of McGraw saw the achievement of her determination.

Two Years Sleuthing.

For two years she has devoted her time, energy, money and brains to hunting up witnesses and collecting evidence which would result in bringing McGraw before the bar of justice. She has traveled weary miles; she has traversed long streets at midnight; she has endured toils, and hunger and pain to pursue some fugitive which has proved elusive. Disappointments she has had in Summer has been too hot, in Winter they have been too cold to keep her from her self imposed task.

For more than one night from 5:30 till 11 o'clock she could over the cars from Malden [illegible] Malden, retracing the steps [illegible] took the night that the police [illegible] searching for certain witnesses who might have seen him.

MRS. ISABELLE FARWELL

BENJAMIN F. FARWELL

Dead son, and mother whose two years' search has caused slayer's indictment.

Aided by General Bancroft.

In this she was aided by an order from General Bancroft [illegible] handing that she be given every help.

Her car [illegible] walked from [illegible] and [illegible] her son must be [illegible] hour just as he was [illegible] down.

As she expresses it "It was a labor of love. I don't know what will [illegible] which I had to do, and who came of me, and I don't care. I only knew that my mother should do it but it."

Mrs. Farwell need not understand her and why I did [illegible] No mother would or could brutally [illegible] her son's dead body. Such a [illegible] unpunished [illegible] a crime.

Justice, Not Revenge.

And only the great love which belongs to a mother could have sustained this mother and the strain of those two years.

No it is not revenge that I want. I want justice. I want to enforce the law of God and man. That is all.

I find no fault that it has not been done before.

But I think John B. Moran, Sergeant Bell and all the officers of Station 10 that it is finally done.

It was my brave and splendid son that was [illegible] and who devoted to him and who [illegible] mother and better [illegible] to be [illegible] I used to say to him, 'why, Ben, don't get into any fights? I would be glad to see you come home with a bruise or two, I would say, 'No woman will ever take a blow from you, mother. I hope I will ever outlive you, for I don't know what I could do without you.'

He was always doing something for someone else. If he hadn't been, perhaps he would be alive today.

Gave Slayer Revolver.

He gave McGraw a cartridge belt and a revolver and his father's billy for presents. [illegible] McGraw claimed he was afraid and he had just bought some. It was [illegible] because the [illegible] was ill and he needed the money.

Young had no ill feeling toward him, but after [illegible] took the position of engineer, then McGraw had been [illegible] until competent man could be got, the negro said, 'No man can live and take that position.'

'Don't you think anyone can make me believe that, child [illegible] to me.

Frank had a dream about his dead father and his brother and told it to Polly Ann Grew. Miss Grew asked when he was born, and when Frank told him December 8, Mr. said, 'You've got an awful mix-[illegible] starting to you and you'll meet an awful [illegible] I don't see how you can [illegible] sooner.'

Of course, he didn't see how he could escape. But Frank had no idea of danger.

Laughed at Negro's Words.

'Why, before he went to bed the last night I ever saw him he sat on that piano stool and laughed and told me how McGraw had told him want the dream meant.

'Then he played the piano and sang some songs and went to bed.'

She stopped and sighed and went over to the piano.

'Everything is just as he left it,' she said with a sweep of her hand, 'not a thing has been moved in two long years.

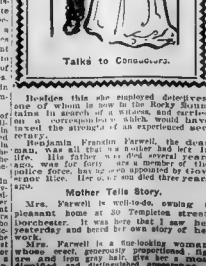
'All I want is justice,' she exclaimed a moment later. 'I want to live to see [illegible] done. Then [illegible] was a chance [illegible] ing and her face illumined with a strange [illegible] 'did you know that knock? That [illegible] He comes to me every day. We talk together hours on end.

It was said so simply there was insult in incredulity.

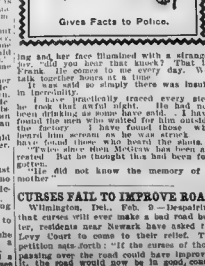
I have practically traced every step [illegible] he took that awful night. He had not been drinking as some have said. I have found the men who waited for him outside the factory. I have found those who heard him scream as he was struck. I have found those who heard the shots.

'Twice since then McGraw has been arrested But he thought he had been forgotten.

'He did not know the memory of a mother'



Talks to Consuelo.



Gives Facts to Police.

Besides this she employed detectives, one of whom is now in the Boston police force in search of a witness, and carried on a correspondence which would involve the attorneys of an experienced secretary.

F. K. FOSTER FEARED TO BE DYING.

Collapses Soon After Making Labor Address in Toledo, O.

HEART AFFECTION SAID TO BE CAUSE OF ILLNESS

Forbidden to Speak by Physician, but Would Not Disappoint Audience.

TAKEN ILL ON PLATFORM, IS TAKEN TO A HOTEL

Then Removed to Hospital, Where Is Under Constant Care of Physician.

DISPATCHES from Toledo, Ohio, to the POSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN say that Frank K. Foster, the Boston labor leader, who addressed a large mass meeting on the labor question there last night, is at the Jefferson Hotel in a serious condition which may possibly be fatal.

Reports given out by Dr. Phil Reig, the attending physician were that while he thought Foster had a chance to recover, he was in bad shape.

It is understood that the trouble is an affection of the heart. Foster had not been feeling well all day and was ordered not to speak last evening, but on account of the fact that there was a big labor fight on and he had been heavily advertised he refused to remain away from the hall.

Several times during his address he showed signs of illness, and it was with difficulty that he finished his speech.

He was hurried to his hotel, where Dr. Reig made an examination. Foster had barely reached his room when he suffered a total collapse, and it was over an hour before consciousness was fully restored.

There is a possibility that the attack may wear off in a short time, but the possibility of its being far more serious seems to be the prominent one at this hour.

SCHWAB TO GIVE SISTER $2,000,000 WEDDING PRESENT

President Steel Trust Settles That Sum on Miss Gertrude, Who Soon Marries.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Pittsburg, Feb. 9.—Two million dollars as a wedding present is what Charles M. Schwab, the millionaire president of the Steel Trust, has settled on his sister, Miss Gertrude Schwab, according to their friends here.

Miss Schwab is in Pittsburg to-day. Her fiance, David Barry, of Johnstown, is also in town. After their marriage, which will occur in the near future, Mrs. Barry will have $2,000,000 upon which to start housekeeping, besides the funds possessed separately by each.

News of this generous present came to Pittsburg last night. A close friend of the Schwab family said to-day that on behalf of the approaching nuptials "Mr. Schwab is very fond of his sister, and as a mark of his esteem for her he has said he will give her $2,000,000 when she marries."

INCENDIARY BLAZE IN BARBER SHOP

A fire, supposed to have been of incendiary origin, in the barber shop of Gudalis Theatre, No. 62 Poplar street, at 2 o'clock this morning, endangered the lives of sleeping tenants on the two upper floors of the building.

When the firemen arrived, they discovered a fire set in each of the three barber chairs. In each of them a pile of newspapers was blazing, and but for the quick response of the department, a serious conflagration might have followed.

The police are investigating. The proprietors of the shop are J. Ruffo and S. Spiegel. So quickly was the fire extinguished that the sleeping tenants were not disturbed.

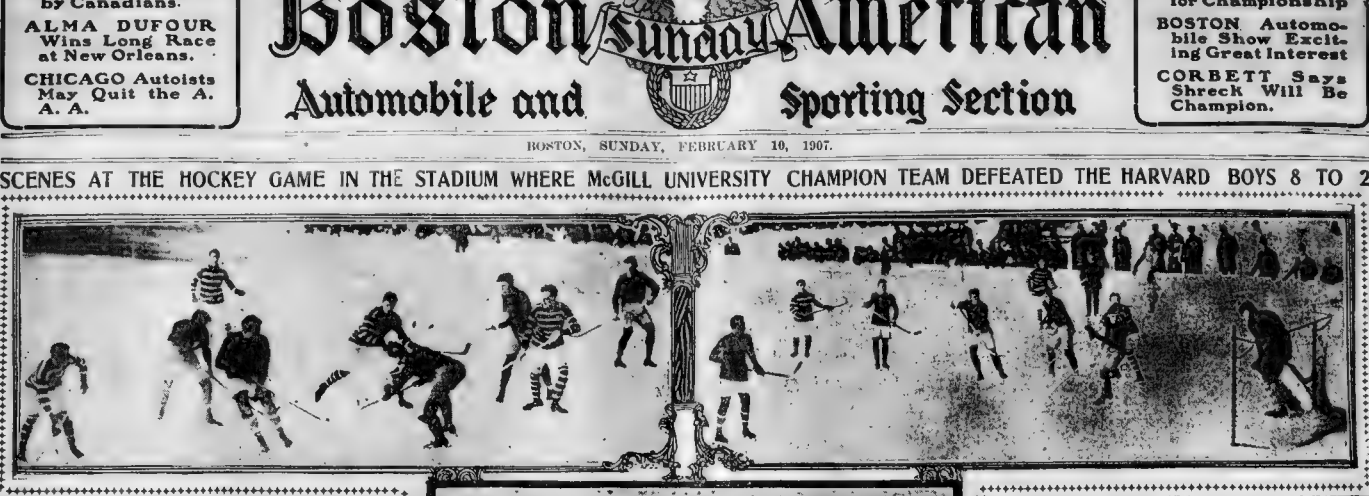
SCENES AT THE HOCKEY GAME IN THE STADIUM WHERE McGILL UNIVERSITY CHAMPION TEAM DEFEATED THE HARVARD BOYS 8 TO 2



CRIMSON HOCKEY TEAM LOSES ROUGH GAME TO CANADIAN CHAMPIONS

Harvard Boys Can't Stand Fierce Attack of McGill and Are Beaten 8 to 2.

Last year's American college hockey champions, the Harvard varsity team, and last year's Canadian college champions, the McGill University team, met in a battle royal at the Soldiers Field rink yesterday afternoon, and the Canadian college boys outplayed Harvard in all points and won by a score of 8 to 2.

The game was replete with slugging and rough play, and in this feature the Canadians excelled. They were wont to use the stick a bit too freely, and often to administer a severe blow to some part of an opponent's anatomy when the referee was not looking, and to hurdle at every available opportunity without regard to consequences.

Harvard, on the other hand, endeavored to play a clean game, free from fouling, but both her defence and offence were too weak to withstand the fierce and warlike onslaught of the Canadians.

Harvard Starts Well.

Harvard started the first half like a whirlwind, and Hussey made two goals before McGill woke up. These were the only goals made by the Crimson during the game.

During the rest of the half McGill kept the puck near Harvard's goal. While Townsend was out of the game for a minute on a forfeit, Patrick, for McGill, ran up and made a good one, which Howell made several neat tries, which were successfully blocked, and McGill followed these up with another goal. Harvard's defence at this point became extremely poor, Foster's playing being the most ragged.

Rowell was disqualified for the second time, but G. Hughes came to the fore with two goals shot in quick succession, while Rowell re-entering the game, finished the half with another goal. The score at the end of the first half was 6 to 2 in favor of McGill.

The Second Half.

In the second half Harvard's defence improved slightly, but not enough to prevent McGill scoring three goals. Townsend missed two easy chances for a goal. Pell seemed to be the only Harvard man playing a consistent game throughout.

G. Hughes, Rowell and Townsend were penalized two and three times each. McGill getting the most penalties. Two severe injuries occurred in this half on account of rough play on the part of both teams. Sampson went for Willett, whose toe was nearly severed by a McGill man's skate. Markhouyll went in for MacCallum, whose hand was badly smashed and whose knee joint was injured. Patrick made two goals in this half, one from centre field, and assisted McCallum to make another.

HARVARD FRESHMEN BEAT YALE BOYS AT HOCKEY.

Crimson Youngsters Score a 3 to 2 Victory at the Stadium Rink.

The Harvard freshman hockey team defeated the Yale freshmen team by a score of 3 to 2 at the Soldiers Field scrub rink yesterday afternoon.

The Eli youngsters displayed good team work, but lacked the grit and dash of the Crimson freshmen. Harvard's forwards did not play well together during the first half, but the defence was excellent. The game was characterized in spots by rough play on the part of Harvard.

Wolfe for Harvard guarded the goal remarkably well and, the the clever stops made by Hicks were also a feature. The Elis were extremely poor at shooting throughout the game, and barely succeeded in struggling out one goal in each half.

Morgan and Dole each made a goal for Harvard in the first half. Morgan ran up his goal and shot it unassisted, while Hicks and Dole, playing in combination, scored the other one. Johnson made the goal for the Yale freshmen in this half in the second half Lanigan and Stone rushed in shield for a goal, while Isels of Yale, with the assistance of Perry, placed a neat goal.

CHENERY RACERS SHOULD GO FAST

Trainer Fowler Says They'll Hold Their Own in the Grand Circuit.

According to Bert Fowler, trainer for the Boston horseman, Horace Chenery, whose stock farm, The Pastures, is located in Belfast, Me., the prospects are particularly bright that the horses they will campaign in the Grand Circuit this year will be able to cope with the best in their classes.

Stiletto C. 2.12¼, is big and fat. He could not be in better shape to begin work on. Last season he paced a mile at Hyannis in 2.05¼, the last quarter in 30¼ seconds. John Ward, the four-year-old pacing stallion which turned a mile in 2.11 last year, is counted a sure 2.08 or 2.07 proposition. A two-year-old filly by Prodigal, 2.10, is the best for her age ever handled by Fowler. Mendolita, 2.04½, is in foal by John Ward, and the produce will be nominated in all of the futurities.

BRAE-BURNS WIN.

The Brae-Burn Hockey Club of Newton defeated the Crescent Hockey Club yesterday afternoon at Brae-Burn by the score of 8 to 2. Foster, the old Harvard hockey player, was the star of the game, shooting 3 of the goals for Brae-Burn, while D. Sheraton and McLeod did good playing for the Crescents.

HARVARD TO RACE ON LAKE CAYUGA

Report That Cornell Crew Will Come Here Is Denied at Cambridge.

The report that Cornell will race Harvard on the Charles on May 30 instead of on Lake Cayuga as originally planned, finds no credence with the rowing authorities of Harvard, as an interview with them yesterday brought out.

Said one of the oarsmen who rowed second in 1906: "We have no definite arrangements to race Cornell on Lake Cayuga, and no notice of a change has as yet been communicated to us. Personally we do not believe the story that the race would be seriously hindered by excursion boats following the crews, or that it will not be held on Lake Cayuga unless arrangements can be made for anchoring these boats. We have never had any trouble before in this respect and do not anticipate any this year.

The fact that Coach Courtney's decision is invariably followed as to where the race will take place makes it certain that the race will be held on Lake Cayuga, since Cornell always forces Harvard to row her on her home course except when the Harvard second crew goes to Cornell to race the Cornell second crew, and then the varsity race is held on the Charles.

Harvard anticipated pitting out this year the strongest crew that has rowed against Cornell for many years.

Corbett Says Schreck Will Be Heavyweight Champion of World

James J. Will Take Westerner Under His Wing and Predicts He Will Beat Big Jeff.

BY BOSTON AMERICAN LEASED WIRE.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—James J. Corbett, ex-champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, has taken up the cudgels on behalf of Mike Schreck, whom he considers the most likely championship material in this country, and will endeavor to show him the way to premier pugilistic honors. Corbett has written for the Hearst News Service his views and his plans for Schreck's future, and why he thinks the Cincinnati fighter is the best man in the world.

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

Mike Schreck is destined to be the next heavyweight champion pugilist of the world.

I have taken the Cincinnati heavyweight under my wing, with the idea of developing him so that he will be fit to fight Jeffries or anyone else for the title, and I am so thoroughly convinced that with the proper training and coaching he can and will whip any fighter in the world, that I will back him for $5,000 against any man living and prepare him myself for the bout.

Schreck has never had a chance. The fighters all fear him. They have got his number. I am in a position to push him with the leading sporting authorities, and can secure him matches before the best clubs. I can force those following as O'Brien, Burns and other would be champions to give him the consideration he is entitled to.

Jeffries does not look any harder to me for Schreck to beat than lots of the other fellows. Jeff when he was rounding into form could have beaten Schreck, overpowering him with his huge bulk and massive strength, but Jeff to-day is not the Jeff of a few years ago.

CLOSE FINISHES IN SNOW RACES AT ROCHESTER.

5,000 Persons See Some Exciting Sport—Accident Mars the Contest.

Special to the Boston American.

Rochester, N. H., Feb. 9.—Nine horses entered over the quarter-mile speedway on North Main street in the opening ribbon race of series under the management of Rochester Driving Club this afternoon, which was witnessed by five thousand people, including several noted horsemen from Boston, Haverhill and other large cities.

Owners drove their horses and the speedway was in good condition. Each which turned out varsity material.

From certain sources it is understood that Dr. Nichols felt his defeat at the hands of Captain Dexter keenly, and it is charged in certain quarters that he brought all his forces together to defeat Pieper's reputation by exploiting his unfitness to coach Dexter at a recent meeting of the Athletic Committee, so it is said, had Pieper appointed with full power, to select both graduate and field coach, instead of just field coach, as in the past. Pieper will be responsible to no one but Captain Dexter. He is to use the best of his ability to pick a victorious team, irrespective of social standing, and it must be recorded that Dr. Nichols has been charged up against Dr. Nichols in the past.

System Works Well at Yale.

The new system has proven very successful at Yale, and has resulted in developing teams which have been able to win baseball title of victorious towards the Eli's in the past two years.

Present indications are that Captain Dexter has entered upon a campaign which he means to be a victorious one. He, like many others, has realized that no stone must be left unturned to place Harvard in its position of yore.

The present graduate coach, Pieper, is a man who played on Harvard's second nine and his Freshman team. He has coached three Freshman baseball teams, and has also coached Rockville and Fitchburg.

Captain Dexter Supported.

Pieper has been installed as being in competent because he never made the varsity team, but it should be remembered that he coached several freshmen teams

Beginning next week an entirely new system will be inaugurated at Harvard similar to that at Yale, when Coach Pieper takes hold of the reins. Captain Dexter came to the conclusion that there was only one way to turn out a victorious team, so he appealed to the Athletic Committee for its support on several occasions.

There have been reports circulated that there was considerable friction caused by Dr. Nichols requesting that a certain player be appointed to the head coach position while Dexter wanted another man; and Dexter finally had his way and selected Pieper.

Assailed Coach Pieper.

Pieper has been assailed as being incompetent because he never made the

HARVARD'S NEW POLICY ENDS REGIME OF NICHOLS

Captain Dexter Wins Out With Athletic Committee Against the Doctor.

BASEBALL POLICY OF YALE FOLLOWED

In the selection of Pieper to coach the Harvard baseball team Captain Dexter has won a complete victory over Dr. E. H. Nichols, who for so many years has guided the policy of the Crimson ball tossers.

Dr. Nichols was generally successful while he had the say in baseball matters, but the failure of the Harvard team to defeat Yale in the last two years has created dissatisfaction in the Harvard camp and it was deemed best to follow Yale's baseball policy in the future.

It is understood that Dr. Nichols opposed Captain Dexter in the selection of a coach, but Dexter won out with the Harvard Athletic Committee and it is now feel that Dr. Nichols's regime at the Cambridge University is ended.

ALICE CARR IS FIRST IN CUP RACE ON THE SPEEDWAY.

Thomas Plant's Speedy Mare Lands Both Heats in Easy Style.

GREAT CROWD ENJOYS THE TROPHY RACES

By far the largest crowd of the season saw the sixth contest of the "Literary Challenge Cup," at Charles River Speedway, decided yesterday afternoon, won by Thomas G. Plant with his trotting mare Alice Carr, 2.09. It was the initial start of the latter in the race for the trophy, and she won both heats, fully waking at the finish.

Other new starters for the event were J. M. E. Morrill with Helvetia, one of the prize winners of the past year in the multiness of the Dorchester Driving Club and Secretary W. D. Hunt, of the "Mets" who his gelding Curtis.

Five Winners to Date.

Of the series of races to date five winners have been returned, as follows: Isaac Sexton with Tom Fosit, Monroe Goldspeed with Zambia, Fred Horton with Miss W., Fred Morrill with Norvest and Alice Carr.

From present indication no trotter owned by a member of the "Mets" will be capable of taking five trials this Winter and thereby either credit for a "leg." The earliest possible opportunity for another try will come next Thursday, as the Concord Club will be visitors of the "Mets" on Tuesday. Fred Horton has decided that he will not start Olga W. again in the cup races, which will necessitate any of the others to take four more heats for their efforts to be of any avail.

Walter J. Bates had Bishists entered to race, but through the executive committee declaring it would be better for him to take part, as three of the best gave for over four being in the field, he remained in the stable, greatly to his disappointment.

Walter J. Corbitt, too, failed to see the justice of the rule compelling any trotter not winning a race in four times starting to be ineligible. It was after strenuous efforts owners were altered up to make the second race in the series, and besides before the rule had been made he had gone to the expense of buying a new sleigh for Wavelite to do battle in.

While I have taken it easy and have not worried about anything I have done regular work and have taken the baths daily.

United States Consul Goldschmidt of Nantes, France, is of the opinion that there should be a good market all over France for American made speedometers, odometers, clocks and annunciators for automobiles and other vehicles. The best way to introduce such goods, he thinks, is through a special representative who should visit the different manufacturers and dealers in vehicles and establish agencies for the sale of these articles.

WALTER E. STONE lives in Brooklyn, writes insurance in Boston, and in his spare time dabbles in dogs. He is one of the big bugs of the Boston Terrier Club, and was formerly secretary of the organization. He is now one of the membership committee, and when any blackleg, cut-throat and otherwise notorious character applies for membership, Mr. Stone's eagle eye, with the four other eagle eyes on the committee, spots him, and promptly turns him down.

Mr. Stone has owned some of the most prominent Boston terriers ever shown in the sawdust ring, and were it not for some inopportune sickness in his kennels, he would exhibit two or three new ones at New York and Boston that he confidently expected would make his confreres sit up and take notice.

When Mr. Stone first got the Boston terrier fever he began a close study of the breed, and is now reckoned one of the best judges of the popular little dog. He has handed out the ribbons at many dog shows, but lately has cut out that part of the game, on the ground that life is too short, owing to the number of enemies one makes in the judging business.

Mr. Stone knows nearly everybody in town, and is one of the most popular of the dog fanciers. An excellent likeness of Mr. Stone goes with this little article.

GANS CALLS OFF BOUT WITH LEWIS

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—Joe Gans, who is appearing at one of the local theatres, announced that his fight with Harry Lewis had been declared off. Gans made a signed statement on the matter and gave as his reasons for calling the fight off the fact that Lewis demanded a 60 and 40 per cent distribution of the gate receipts instead of 75 and 25 per cent, as was originally stipulated. Gans declares that he is unwilling to fight Lewis under any other conditions than those originally named.

MECHANIC ARTS BEAT E. H. TEAM

Mechanic Arts High defeated the English High scrub seven in a hockey match at Franklin Field yesterday by a score of 6 to 4. The winners played a dashing game throughout and had the scrubs on the defensive a greater part of the match. English High's work was not up to the standard which was due to the absence of Shreve the star wing.

FINE DOGS WILL TRY FOR PRIZES AT BOSTON SHOW.

Great Entry List for Exhibition in Mechanics Building Opening Feb. 19

BOSTON TERRIERS LEAD ALL OTHER BREEDS

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

When the popular Boston terriers enter the ring next week at the twenty-third annual dog show of the New England Kennel Club in Mechanics' building there will be a rush of the fanciers for the seats to see how the awards will be given.

Over two hundred dogs have been entered in the Boston terrier class and among them will be present many well known champions from the kennel of Myron W. Robinson of New York, who recently strengthened his big team by the addition of the sensational winning bitch Eve, and another always winning bitch, Nance. He will however meet competitors from hereabouts who have entered the most likely Bostons ever seen at a show.

Are Against Field

What is sure to prove interesting is the bet made some time ago that neither Tom Kelly, Wallis Kimball nor W. L. Davis of Connecticut would get winners' bitches at either New York or Boston. When the bet was made Kimball and Davis thought that Kelly owned Eve, but she passed to the ownership of Myron Robinson some days before that time. As it seems to stand Eve is now in the field against the three, and the man who bet $100 that neither Kelly, Kimball nor Davis would win is all smiles.

As good, however, as Eve is there may be something of a surprise in store for those who bet and many who didn't.

Some two weeks ago Mr. Davis added to his kennels a little dark brindle bitch named Vuelta Glory which has never been shown. Those who have been let into the secret of her being on earth think she will make a clean sweep at the New England Kennel Club show, and that Mr. Davis may be in for a bit of the money put up after all.

Of course, with more than 1,300 entries and 900 actual dogs in the four days' exhibition which opens February 19, there will, too, be widespread interest attached to all the other distinct breeds benched.

Not the least by any means will be the gun dogs. The entries of setters and pointers are a reminder of the long ago days when their presence at the show was one of the chief attractions. Major J. P. Taylor, the judge, will have some grand ones, recently imported, to pass upon, and there are many good American-bred candidates for honors in the field trial classes. Irish setters will be represented by nearly a score of entries, a most encouraging sign as heretofore this very good and hardy gun dog seemed to be losing caste. The cocker entry is one of the largest ever recorded in this city, and so too is the Scottish and Irish terrier entries.

Ackerman's Big Entry.

Irving C. Ackerman, the wealthy young San Franciscan who is at present completing a course at the Harvard Law School, will have an entry of ninety fox terriers, smooth and wire haired, to look over, among them that excellent specimen of the breed, Sabine Roller, bred by F. H. Farwell of Orange, Texas. This dog has been shown throughout the country by George S. Thomas, of Hamilton, the agent of the Sabine Kennels, and now, after all kinds of winnings, he is to go to England. It is like carrying coals to Newcastle to ship dogs from this country to Great Britain but George Rapes, of Gomersal, Eng., an expert on fox terriers and long known as one of the best all 'round judges in the world, got his eye on Roller some time ago and purcased him. After the show in Mechanics Building, Mr. Raper will take Sabine Roller to the other side of the Atlantic.

Mr. Ackerman has never appeared as judge at a large show, but he had had years of experience as a breeder and owner of champion fox terriers. He is the owner of the Humberstone Kennels, is secretary and was one of the founders of the Western Fox Terrier Breeders' Association, is secretary and treasurer of the San Mateo Kennel Club and director in the American Kennel Club. He has owned and bred many of the principal winners of the Pacific coast, among them Champion Humberstone Bristles, Champion Humberstone Meerus, Champion Maggie the Maid, Champion Wandee Cowslip, Wandee Worry, Barkby Boss, Sabine Brightlight, Warren Cortime, Powhattan Queen, H. Rattler, H. Radium, H. Norma, H. Welcome, H. Hope, H. Coaster, Belvidere Badger, Dusky Bob, Endcliffe Daisy, and a host of others which have won hundreds of prizes for their owner.

Should Satisfy Owners.

Last year Mr. Ackerman visited all the principal shows and fox terrier kennels in England, and on the Continent brought home a number of the best breeding stock obtainable. He has made a close study of type, and from his long experience in breeding and exhibiting should not fail to satisfy owners and onlookers alike. Several of his best dogs will be on exhibition at the show.

Fashions in dogs are strange and beyond understanding, but something may be gleaned by the numerous Boston visitors to the show this week in New York. One of the features of the list is the entire absence of mastiffs for the first time in years.

The falling off in popularity is by no means a new thing, for ten years ago only ten entries were made, as against thirty-seven in 1887, and that number of twenty years ago was a good representation, considering the total number of dogs shown then, which was far smaller than it is now.

The St. Bernard, too, was a more popular dog than he is now, for in 1887 there were 98 entries, while in 1897 the total was 140, and this year it has dropped to 63. Newfoundlands have about held their own, averaging between five and ten for the last twenty years.

The Great Dane is the most popular of the big dogs now, the entry list for this year being 102, just twice as many as in 1897, while in 1887 there were only six.

Bulldogs have made good strides. In 1887 there were 22, in 1897 86, while the great number of 193 has been reached to-day. Bull terriers, too, have gained, the showing in 1887 being 29, in 1897 it was 70, and this year it is 114.

Pugs Have Lost Hold.

Pugs have lost their hold to a great extent. In 1880 there were 23, in 1897 22, and this year there are only 5.

Russian wolfhounds have made themselves popular. The first one of the breed was shown at the Westminster Club show in 1889, in a big miscellaneous class, and won first prize as a "Siberian bloodhound." The next year there were three in the same class and were given there right name. Since then they have had regular classification, but did not become popular for several years, the number being only seventeen ten years ago. This year the number has run up to eighty-two.

Boston terriers have had a rapid rise in popularity. There were seven shown at the Garden in 1896, classes having been made for the new breed, and the number has steadily increased with each year until this year they lead all breeds, with the grand total of 251.

KILRAIN WILL REPORT MELLODY-LEWIS FIGHT FOR BOSTON AMERICAN

Great Interest in the Bout Between the Clever Welterweights.

SPECIAL TRAIN WILL BE RUN FROM BOSTON.

JAKE KILRAIN.

Jake Kilrain, from a Photograph Taken in the Boston American Office, Yesterday Afternoon

Jake Kilrain, the old time fighter and rival of John L. Sullivan, will witness the Mellody-Lewis fight to-morrow night and report it for the BOSTON AMERICAN. Kilrain has ideas of his own on the modern style of fighting and it can be promised that his view of the Mellody-Lewis bout will be very interesting. The report will be printed in Tuesday's issues of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

The policy pursued by Honey Mellody, the world's champion in the middle-weight class, of meeting all comers as fast as they come along, is sure to make the Charlestown lad one of the most popular pugilists that ever entered the arena.

This is the policy inaugurated by the grandest of all boxers, John L. Sullivan, and successfully followed by men like Jack Dempsey, Bob Fitzsimmons, George Dixon, Terry McGovern, Kid Lavigne and men of that calibre, who became idols of the fistic world.

Mellody has been champion less than three months, but his meeting with Willie Lewis at Valley Falls, R. I., to-morrow night will be the second in which he has engaged since the coveted championship title fell to his credit.

There are many well informed sporting men who believe that the task Mellody has set himself to-morrow night is one which will test every item of his skill and power, and that he will need every iota of his wonderful strength and hitting power to pull through a winner.

For Lewis will be a revelation to those who cluster around the ringside. For almost four weeks he has been conditioning himself, and under the able hands of Harry Tuthill, who trains the New York Giants, Lewis has rounded into physical perfection.

After Champ Title.

To gain the grand title of champion is an incentive which will cause Lewis to exert all his skill and generalship, and everyone who knows the classic, artistic work of the New Yorker is aware that he is a veritable wonder when he is in physical shape to bear the brunt of a rigorous combat.

The last meeting between Lewis and Mellody, which took place at the Lincoln Club, Chelsea, July 4 last, was the most sensational, spectacular fistic affair ever crowded into a three-round limit. From the very start of that bout, when Lewis started to deal out left hand jabs that rocked Mellody's head, while he cleverly evaded the vicious lunges of the Charlestown boy, the rapid work of the men was a revelation to the audience.

Mellody never received in his life such a grueling as Lewis gave him for two rounds. In fact, to those outside the ring, it appeared as if Lewis was to score an easy victory, and evidently this phase of the situation percolated through Lewis's mind also.

Towards the end of the second round Lewis crossed his right to the jaw, and down went Mellody to the floor like a burnt roof at a conflagration.

Mellody's Great Strength.

But when Lewis went in to finish his man in the third round the wonderful strength and hitting power of Mellody was in evidence. The odds were 100 to 10 that Lewis would win. All the work up to that point had showed plainly that Lewis was the better boxer, the more skilful man.

Lewis figured himself on winding it up quickly in the third round, but he reckoned without his host. In his eagerness to put the Charlestown boy to the boards for the count he left an opening, and quick as a flash of lightning Mellody's right hand went flush against the jaw of the New Yorker and Lewis went to the floor completely knocked out.

Everyone present said it was the fastest bout ever seen in a contest of that duration, and a great majority believed Lewis had lost through overconfidence when victory was within his grasp.

It is the memory of the exciting, speedy bout indulged in by these lads before that is creating so small interest in the contest that takes place at Valley Falls to-morrow night, and fully 300 local sports are to go down on a special train which leaves the South Station at 7 p. m. promptly for the battle field. The train will return to Boston immediately after the contest, and is being handled by Minh Murray, 1156 Washington street, and Billy Pierce, 28 School street.

The arena at Valley Falls is built exactly like that at Chelsea, and there will be plenty of room for all who care to go to the scrap. The Boston party will be landed at the South Station before midnight.

LUSH RETIRES FROM POLO.

Billy Lush has retired as a referee in the Connecticut Polo League and will be succeeded by Michael J. Doherty, manager and captain of the Albany, New York, State League ball team. The fact that the Yale baseball team, of which Lush is coach, will soon open its Spring training work, is the reason given by Lush for quitting the polo work. Lush is still under reserve by the Cleveland Club, but announces that he is through with professional baseball for all time.

FRANKLIN A. A. WINS HOCKEY GAME FROM DORCHESTER.

Superior condition enabled the Franklin A. A. hockey team to defeat the fast Dorchester A. A. team at Franklin field yesterday by a score of 11 to 2.

The game was the roughest played on the field this season, and a few of the players are nursing sore limbs as a result of the strenuous work. Neither side scored in the first half, although the Dorchester boys came dangerously near turning the trick on several occasions. In the second half the athletic forwards came back with a rush and played their opponents to a standstill. The Dorchester goal was peppered all through this half, and some beautiful lifts by the Franklin forwards witnessed. Summary:

SAYS 'LITTLE CY' WILL NOW SIGN WITH HUB TEAM.

President Dovey Doesn't Think National Southpaw Will Refuse Terms.

M'BREEN GOING AFTER PARENT AND CARRIGAN

With players communicating with the managements of both the local teams how to make connections with Southern training quarters the magnates are busy completing their plans, but always keeping an ear to the ground for a chance to figure in deals for any players that are available.

President George Dovey of the Nationals is still confident that "Little Cy" Young will soon come into the fold. In spite of any stories or interviews which leave me out, "Little Cy" is wise enough to know that he could not play anywhere else but in Boston unless Dovey wanted to let him go, and there isn't any question but that Young would rather play right here in this section, where he has won all his diamond career.

Referee John Morrill was a caller at the Nationals' fort yesterday and exchanged greetings with the new president.

Fred Lake was another visitor, who announced that he is to leave for Little Rock shortly and tie up with Mike Finn in running the team. Lake will captain and play first base. It's Lake's first venture in the West, but it's a certainty that he makes good, as he has done in the New England States.

Secretary John Dovey looked over the grounds with an architect and expects specifications of the new changes this week, and the carpenters will be able to tackle the project of remodeling the grand stand and bleachers.

Hugh McBreen has determined to start on his Maine trip this week, no matter what happens and get Parent's and Carrigan's signatures to contracts.

The treasurer says that the club will have a very tasty score card this year, and a novel idea is now being worked up which will be appreciated by the fans.

KNOCKED OUT AT BASKETBALL GAME

During the second half of the basketball game last evening between Winthrop High and Gardner High at Winthrop, H. A. Kendal of the Gardners and Kimball of the home team collided, and the former was thrown heavily against the stage at one end of the hall, knocking him unconscious for ten minutes. He was attended by a physician, who found he had received a severe concussion of the back. Winthrop won, 80 to 13. Summary:

GARDNER — WINTHROP.

NEW MODELS ARRIVE

CHICAGO AUTOISTS MAY WITHDRAW FROM THE A. A. A.

Windy City Members Disgruntled Because They Are Not Represented on the Racing Board.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Chicago, the great city of the West, the home of the recent president and secretary of the American Automobile Association, namely Henry Larson and Sidney Gorham respectively, [illegible] over the fact that she has no representative on the racing board of the A. A. A. for 1907. To be suddenly dropped from the highest pinnacle of motoring fame to obscurity seems to have hurt the feelings of the Chicago motorists. They, according to the very latest of reports, have announced that their city, the Chicago Automobile Club will withdraw from the A. A. A. unless they are given representation on the racing board.

Whatever may be said as regards their pers[illegible] the fact remains that Chicago as the centre of the West, is certainly entitled to some consideration from the present officers of the association. Chicago's interests in all matters automobile are vast, indeed. She is entitled to some consideration. Chicago is [illegible] [illegible] Boston and several other large [illegible] of this country. In this city alone the A. A. A. has no less than a thousand members, that being less than the total membership of the Bay State and Massachusetts Automobile Associations. Boston for the first time in years has been overlooked when it came to making up the racing board. Heretofore both Chicago and Boston have furnished members for the same, and members who were working members in all true sense.

Majority from New York.

The desire to solidify however, has brought about a change in the composition. As the racing board now stands it looks very much as though the solidification gathered around members of the Automobile Club of America. Every member of the racing board as at present constituted is a member of the New York organization, and all but two hail from New York. Those two come from Providence and Cleveland respectively, and outside of those two cities there seems to be nothing to it but New York. There is no question but what the gentlemen selected as the conferees of Chairman Thompson are fully fitted by actual experience and ability to fill the positions, but at the same time the magnitude of the sport extends beyond the Empire State and other cities there are which are entitled to consideration in this matter.

The Chicago Automobile Club says that unless it is given some representation on the racing board it will withdraw from the A. A. A. Such statements emanating from a large organization like that of the Chicago club look decidedly childish. It hurts the organization more than it does anyone else and would indicate that the one desire is to advance the local club in preference to all other things. The statement is hardly in keeping with the previous character of the organization, and comes with decidedly poor taste from an organization which up to a few weeks ago furnished the national organization with a president and a secretary. It looks very much as though Chicago wants everything her own way or else she will not play.

Different in the Hub.

Now there is a different feeling here in Boston. Both of the local organizations have in the past furnished members of the racing board. They were overlooked in the distribution of those honors this year. Instead of crying about the matter they simply smile and say that if that is the desire of the national chairman well and good, we can use good men at home in the club's own work, and are not sorry to have been overlooked. No man will cry over being forgotten in this matter, even though in the past years the local members of the board were men who went down in their pockets and raced their cars at the national events simply for the sport there is in racing.

It is quite likely, however, that within a month or so additions will be made to the racing board, and that both Chicago and Boston will be awarded positions thereon.

Little meantime the wheels of the sport will go round just the same; the local organizations will continue to do business; there will be no retirements so far as Boston is concerned from the ranks of the [illegible] and the Vanderbilt and other events will be run off just the same.

Chicago as representing the West will perhaps be more energetic than ever in the desire to promote a western road event akin unto the Vanderbilt, and this year will undoubtedly endeavor to make some such race, even though the entry of the foreign cars be denied her.

Touring Board's Makeup.

The same plan is not, however, to be followed by Chairman Frank B. Hower in the makeup of his touring board. He has announced that it is his intention to secure on this board one representative from each of the A. A. A. clubs throughout the country, just as was done a year ago.

The board will this season have an extra position, that of the secretary, who will be given charge of all the work of [illegible] the hands of the national secretary, as has been the custom heretofore. Dia Lewis of Buffalo has been selected to fill that position, and other appointments will be announced as soon as made.

It is suggested that the touring board this year go a little further than heretofore, do something besides arranging for the holding of a tour similar to that of the Glidden. Its real work, it is considered, is to make it to the A. A. A. what the touring department is to the Touring Club of France. This latter has given universal satisfaction, to not merely motorists of its own country, but to American motorists abroad holding membership cards in the A. A. A. The Glidden or a similar tour is, of course, of great value to the industry as a whole, and to the organization in particular, but a well-defined and well-maintained touring department, from which a motorist may secure valuable information relative to roads and route in every section of the country, would be vastly more valuable, and would give to the lay members greater incentive to retain his membership in the A. A. A.

All-Year Work.

This, however, is work that lasts the entire twelve months of the year, and, if properly handled, will continue year after year. It is work in which there is no end of detail and which cannot be accomplished in a moment. But still, with the proper head, it could be made more valuable than any other branch of the association's work, not even excepting the so-called racing board.

The committee will unquestionably soon be called upon to determine rules and conditions for the tour of the coming season. Four months ago there was an almost endless amount of kicking against tours. Those who were then the strongest opponents of such a tour as the Glidden are to-day among the loudest clamoring for the same. There is no question but what such an event will be run.

The committee having held no meeting, in fact not really having been completed so far as its personnel is concerned, cannot be quoted at this time. It is, however, possible to make a few conjectures.

Among these is one that the coming tour will be conducted along such lines as to make each car and machine stand on its own footing; to be awarded certificates according to its actual performances, to prevent an inferior performing car securing as good a certificate as a car which has made the entire run without a miss or a skip. Tire troubles may be barred and the car given an award on its actual performance. This can be done by the appointment of observers, no observer to serve on any one car more than four hours of the entire trip. Such an idea could be carried out to a successful conclusion and would be invaluable to the contestant in particular and the industry in general.

RIVAL AUTO AGENTS MAY HAVE LONG ROAD RACE.

Frisco Manager of the Olds Challenges Pope-Hartford to an Endurance Run.

BY STUART GAYNESS.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

San Francisco, Feb. 9.—As a result of the rivalry existing between the agents of the Oldsmobile and Pope-Hartford cars in this city and Los Angeles, E. P. Brinegar, manager of the local agency for the Olds, has issued a challenge to Captain H. D. Ryus, Pope-Hartford representative in the southern metropolis, for an endurance run between Los Angeles and this city. The following telegram was sent last night from the Pioneer Automobile Company:

"H. D. Ryus, Manager of White Garage, Los Angeles:

"Understanding that you and other Pacific agents of Pope-Hartford want to wager that Pope-Hartford can defeat Olds in speed and hill climbing, and believing that the cars should also be tested for reliability to settle the dispute, I challenge you to a road race from Los Angeles to San Francisco, winner to take $3,000 and both cars. Final arrangements to be made by a committee of three, you select one, I select one, those two to select the other member.

(Signed) "E. P. BRINEGAR."

"There has been so much discussion," said Brinegar, "both here and in Los Angeles, about the speed and qualities of both cars that I want to see it settled. The Los Angeles agent for the Pope-Hartford cars has been claiming that he can beat the Oldsmobile in most every sort of running, and I want to see him do it. It is a good opportunity to test the cars out, and I am willing to back my opinion with any amount of money up to $3,000. While I do not believe in doing anything contrary to the principles of the Automobile Club of California, or against the laws governing the use of automobiles in the State, I am willing to stand my share of the expense in securing permits from the county authorities along the line and even paying for the patrol of the route. This would make the matter of the run an easy and satisfactory way of settling once and for all the exact merits of the two cars in question.

"I will let Ryus name the date and any conditions within reason for the contest, and will abide by the decisions of the committee governing the event."

WORCESTER HIGH CREW TO START TRAINING.

Squad of Thirty-five Will Try for Places in the Shell This Year.

Special to the Boston American.

Worcester, Feb. 9.—Work for the candidates for the high school crew will start on Monday night in the tower room of English High School where the Kerns rowing machine is stationed. The coach, whose identity is unknown except to the advisory board, will take charge of the squad of thirty-five. Captain Charles G. Warren, Jr., and Manager Ernest Nylen will be on hand to assist in the preliminary work.

During the Winter Edward Kerns, the inventor of the machine, has put the various parts in good working order and he will be on hand to instruct the newly appointed coach on the inside workings of the "boat."

Three members of last year's crew—Warren, Nylen and McDermott—will form the nucleus for this year's eight. There is material a plenty among the 800 odd boys who attend high school and the outlook is indeed bright. The first part of the training will be devoted to arm, leg and body movements and later the sweeps will be brought into service. The connectors will not be used until well into the Spring.

By the use of the connectors and our "pressure" regulators the coach can establish the rowing time of the crew in any given distance. An indicator on the front end of the connector rod showing the distance covered by the dummy oars.

As soon as the ice leaves the lake outdoor work for the squads will start and the "first boat members will be given seats in the brand new shell. A second-rate boat will be purchased for the second, third and "scrub" crews, and daily races will be held over the regulation three-quarter mile regatta course.

While in training at the lake the boys will be allowed the use of the Wachusett Boat Club house through the kindness of the club directors.

FIGHT PICTURES ON THIS WEEK AT THE HUB.

Reproduction on Canvas of Bout Between O'Brien and Burns at Los Angeles.

Those who have seen the Miles Bros.' moving picture reproduction of Tommy Burns and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien at their play while arguing the point as to which was the better man at Los Angeles, November 28, wondered how so perfect a display of every ring maneuvre could be obtained. The films will be shown at the Hub Theatre for one week, with a matinee each day, and the first performance will be given to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Every motion made by both the pugilists and their seconds, every gesture of the timekeeper, every demonstration of a large number of the spectators within the scope of the camera, is set forth on the canvas as true to life as it would be if the fighters were before you in flesh and blood.

Little is known at best among the masses of the people of the manner in which moving pictures are made, and the process would be hard to describe on paper. A member of the firm of Miles Bros. in a recent interview said that with the up-to-date apparatus in their possession they could take pictures at the rate of sixteen a second, or 960 a minute.

BAY STATE AUTO COMPANY'S BIG SHOP A BUSY PLACE.

Hundreds of Workmen Engaged in Turning Out the Successful "Forty."

Only those who have had an opportunity to visit the workshop of the Bay State Auto Company on Norway street can appreciate the great amount of detail work that is being done to produce the already successful Bay State Forty.

[illegible] educated the greatest of high school horses, hundreds of workmen are busily engaged in constructing what is acknowledged to be a high grade motor vehicle. From horse flesh to explosive gasolene vehicles is a long stride [illegible] and yet it is a matter of pride that [illegible] the best of results have been attained.

In a recent visit there Manager Drisko talked intelligently regarding the constructive work of Boston's own motor car. He piloted one through the different departments, from the lath to the varnishing [illegible] and effective [illegible] as one could desire.

On the floor in the assembling room there were no less than eight chassis being assembled. Each displayed points of excellency of finish that would do credit to the largest and oldest of manufacturing plants, and make the new car one to be admired and desired. Some idea of the interior of the factory where the Bay State Forty is made can be secured from the accompanying photo which was taken early in the week.

AUTO IMPORTERS WIN IN COURT

United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit has rendered a decision favorable in part to automobile importers in the case of J. T. B. Hillhouse vs. the United States.

The test came before the court on appeal from a decision of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, affirming a decision of the Board of General Appraisers, which sustained the collector of customs at New York in assessing duty upon an automobile of foreign manufacture under the tariff act of 1897.

An automobile owned by Mr. Hillhouse was used abroad for more than one year and was subjected to extensive repairs shortly before importation. The court held that so much of the machine as was a new manufacture (new parts, upholstery, etc.) was dutiable, but that the rest, including the cost of overhauling, oiling, cleaning, readjusting and regulating, was free of duty under paragraph 504 as household effects used abroad more than one year.

WINTON CAR IN SNOW.

A. A. Marshall of Fitchburg, Mass., recently drove a Winton, type X-I-V, home from Boston through ten inches of snow, with practically no broken track, in three and one-quarter hours. The car carried three full-grown passengers and made the trip without a stop or adjustment.

WORCESTER'S AUTO SHOW TO OPEN FEBRUARY 18.

The season of local shows throughout New England is close at hand and within the next three or four weeks Worcester, Providence and Portland will all be enjoying their annual display of the very latest there is to be seen or found in the automobile world.

The Worcester show comes first, its opening being February 18, the same as that selected for the Buffalo exhibit. The Worcester exhibit is to be held under the auspices of the Worcester military companies. Many of the Boston dealers are to make exhibits there, including C. F. Whitney, [illegible] Fosdick Co., Prentiss Motor & S[illegible] Co., H. C. Stratton Co., the W[illegible] Kimball Co. and several [illegible]. The demand for space at this ex[illegible] decidedly great, much greater [illegible] anticipated, the result being that many late applicants find themselves out in the cold.

The Portland show comes the following week, and in order to facilitate matters arrangements have been made whereby the exhibits at Worcester can be sent direct to Portland by a special freight train, arriving in the Maine city in season to be placed on exhibition for the opening of the show there.

AEROCAR CARRIES DOCTOR TO MAKE URGENT CALLS.

Dr. Frank L. Burt, of Massachusetts avenue, last Tuesday morning when the storm was at its height was in a quandry upon receiving an urgent call from Allston as to the best method of getting there quickly. He found that the railroads were way behind time and that the electrics were running on slow time. Finally he hit upon the idea of making the trip by automobile and called up his friend, George H. Lowe, the New England agent for the Aerocar, who offered to take him out to Allston in spite of the snow.

The trip was made in far better time than could have been accomplished by either railroad or electrics in spite of the hard going. On the level the snow was up even with the axles while in many places where there were drifts the Aerocar was obliged to plunge through snow that entirely hid the hood.

WINTON DISC CLUTCH.

A license to use the Winton multiple disc clutch has been granted by the Winton company to two American manufacturers of machinery, this being the first automobile invention to be adapted for machinery use. Features of this clutch which particularly commend it are minimized inertia, equalized spring pressure and smooth starting.

VANDERBILT CUP RACE OUT WEST

The Vanderbilt Cup race for Chicago within five years, following the construction of a private automobile roadway from Chicago to Milwaukee, is prophesied by E. R. Thomas, the veteran automobile builder, who is attending the automobile show there. Mr. Thomas declares Chicago will forge to first place in the auto world.

"The auto is going to do wonders for Chicago real estate. It has done so in New York. Suburban property is brought nearer to the heart of the city and the man with an auto gets out in the country faster than he used to go to his city home in a carriage or on the street car. When the man with the auto goes away from the congested districts the man without the auto invariably follows him."

Auto Purchasers Seek Best Value for Money

First cost and last cost, combined with everyday serviceability, constituted the prevailing consideration among intending buyers at the Chicago Automobile Show. These are the watchwords that seem foremost in the minds of prospective purchasers who are not blind to the thrifty American instinct of getting the biggest value obtainable for the money invested. While this is true of buyers of the costlier as well as of the less pretentious, but a[illegible] the less efficient and serviceable cars, the vogue is more strikingly apparent among buyers of the lower-priced high-grade touring cars and runabouts.

Fortunately the connoisseur has an unusually tempting array of this latter class of gasoline cars to select from this season, but among these vehicles there are a good[ly] number of promising candidates who have yet to win their spurs. On the other hand, among those cars that have won their spurs and to-day enjoy widespread popular favor, by reason of having given a very enviable account of themselves during the past two seasons, are the two-cylinder Reo light touring and the 8-10 horsepower four-passenger Reo runabout.

SELDEN PATENT DECISION.

Cause for general thankfulness is to be found in the fact that at last both sides are agreed that a decision in the Selden patent suit will be reached in a few months. Much confusion of the popular mind has been effected as to the status of this matter, because, while the plaintiffs insisted that the suit, after three years of trial, was nearing its close, the independents talked about its "coming to trial" in the future. Now, Henry Ford, the defendant in the test case admits that the testimony is ended and the case in the hands of the court. Whatever the decision, it will be no joke, but a very serious matter for the industry.

Chicago's Big Auto Show Proved a Great Success

The Chicago show, which was held last week in the Coliseum and the First Regiment Armory, was from all accounts the most successful from a selling standpoint of any of the shows held this year. In spite of inclement weather and a heavy snow storm the show was crowded from the time it opened on February 2 to its closing day. The style of decoration was ornate, but its varying colors proved a restful change from the one-tone style of decoration in vogue at the New York shows.

There was a much larger showing of complete motor cars than at any previous show, and the total number of exhibitors exceeded the complete roster for any show ever held. The exhibition was visited by many buyers, and according to trustworthy reports there were many sales at retail closed during the show. Not a few Western agencies were closed, and nearly all of the exhibitors completed their agency lists without difficulty. The show was attended by a much larger contingent from the Eastern States than is usual at Chicago.

THOMAS TO BOX FLYNN.

Cleveland fight fans have an opportunity of witnessing one of the best welterweight matches that have been held in this vicinity for some time, in the near future. Joe Thomas, the Pacific coast welterweight champion, has issued a challenge for a match with "Cy" Flynn, the Buffalo lad, who has come to the front rapidly and has made hosts of friends by his gentlemanly actions.

MOTORCYCLIST WANTS WARNING

That the motorcyclist is often in grave danger when being overhauled by a motor car is well set forth in a letter addressed to W. E. Scarritt, chairman of the committee of public safety of the Automobile Club of America, by R. G. Betts, president of the Federation of American Motorcyclists.

It would seem that the automobile driver considers that the motorcyclist is abundantly able to take care of himself, but several accidents have shown that this is a fallacy. Mr. Betts points out that the cars are now so silent that noise produced by the motorcyclist renders the approach of the motor car inaudible.

"It may surprise you to learn," says Mr. Betts, "that a motorcyclist riding in the same direction as even the big, barking cars used in the Vanderbilt cup races cannot hear them until they are practically upon him."

A plea is therefore made for a distinct warning before any motorcycle is reached by a motor car.

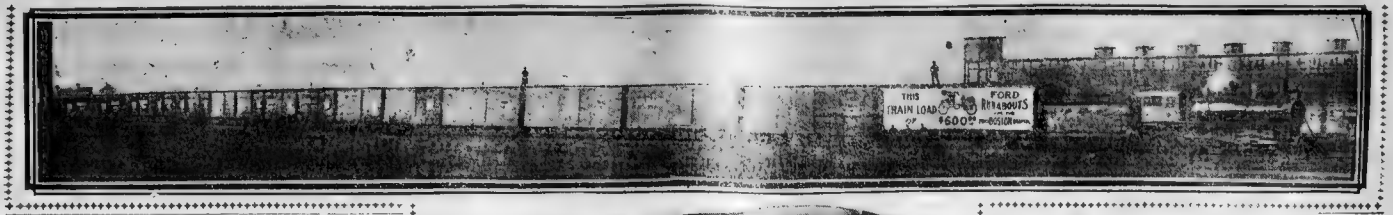
GREAT TRAIN OF EIGHTEEN CARS FILLED WITH FORD RUNABOUTS, WHICH HAVE ALL BEEN SOLD IN NEW ENGLAND, ARRIVED IN BOSTON THIS WEEK.



Motorists Now Await Hub's Great Show Which Opens Here March 9

With both the New York and the Chicago shows over, the eyes of the manufacturers are now directed Bostonward. They fully realize that the excellence of the Boston exhibits of previous years stamps this as the one great local show in America. It shows the ordinary local exhibit and places it on an equality with those of national events. In comparison with the New York exhibit Boston stands out stronger than ever. Here will be found both the licensed and the unlicensed cars, whereas in New York two shows were held in order that on both of these could make a proper exhibit. In Boston, however, one show will do for both, even though it has been found absolutely necessary to secure two buildings to house the same, namely, Mechanics and Horticultural.

Date Helps Local Show.

Another thing which makes Boston more attractive to the knowing one is the fact that its being held in March permits the manufacturers of the country to place their very latest and most approved cars on exhibition.

The previous shows have come at a time when it was impossible for many makers of new and excellent cars to place the same on exhibit, the result being that Boston has always shown something new and rather novel in the way of motor construction. The same holds good this year as in the past. In previous years Boston has been the first to see novel and really successful features. So will it this season.

At least two makers will then place on exhibition for the first time, new machines and new ideas. Of these latter there are at least two which will immediately command the observation of the traveling public and operator, they being so simple that the number of its ilk is far less than they have been thought of before.

The show will be opened on March 9, and will continue to hold forth the following week. This brings it at the very beginning of the retail season, a thought to which the first season is greatly in advance this year over any previous year.

A Retail Show.

Still, it is what might be known as a retail show in every way, shape and manner. The manufacturers of the country will tell you that in point of volume the Boston exhibit is far away ahead of all other shows, and makes a fitting finale to the season of exhibits.

The manufacturers themselves, their salesmanagers and other important members of their staff all come to Boston to look over the field, talk with their agents and incidentally find out just where they have more or less valuable to them. The fact gone about the standing which is given the Boston exhibit by the men most vitally interested in the game and which helps to stamp it as one of the leading shows of the season.

As regards the matter of decorations Boston has always been in the front rank; in fact it was this city which first inaugurated in America the system of uniform decoration, decorations which in no way rather than detract from the general excellency of an exhibit, and proved exceedingly popular with exhibitors and visitors alike. Other cities have since followed Boston's lead in this matter.

Roy McCardell Wins New Cadillac Car for Writing Best Story

Some weeks ago the Cadillac Company, for which Alvin T. Fuller is New England representative offered a Model M 1907 Cadillac to the person writing the best story of the actual performances of a Cadillac car owned by himself. The result was that the company was deluged with something like 10,000 letters, each and every one telling of the remarkable performances of the car. The award was made at the recent Chicago show, the car being won by Roy L. McCardell, whose story was as follows

"The history of my car can only be compared to the story of a fast, faithful and never-failing family horse. From the day it was unloaded from the freight car and delivered to me in New Rochelle, this car, I think, March 7, 1904, there has never been a day it was not ready, with the exception of two or three days of its annual overhauling. There has not been one part replaced, except a pump broken from freezing, spark plugs, and only two of these, and a 25-cent cutter-out screen.

"Early in 1905 the Cadillac company, through Mr. Metzger hearing of the remarkable record of the car, presented me with a Model F hood and radiator. A blacksmith put it on for $5, and, save that my transformed Model A has a rear entrance tonneau, it is as dressy to-day in its appearance as makes more costly by far, and models of this year.

"Early in May, 1906, my daughter, then aged eleven, declared she could run the car. She mastered steering and speeding in one twenty-minute lesson and has run the car every day. She can make every adjustment that has ever occurred to her care, and when last twelve years of age she ran 1,000 miles without a mishap or stoppage some 14,000 out of 15,000 miles made is a month's trip through all the New England States, including the climbing of Mt. Tom in Massachusetts, a feat few automobilists care to attempt.

"I append her account of this trip in particular, and her opinion of the Cadillac in general, written two years ago and that opinion is still to be found. There is nothing I or my son in these facts. The Cadillac is so simple, so fool-proof, that any girl can run it. The fact that a child of much attention in my daughter's case, a large Teddy Bear at the wheel, and sitting beside it operates the Cadillac by the hour gear, it looks as if the Teddy Bear was running the car, and it is nearly simple enough to do so. My car is used to run errands, to do the shopping with, to take me to my office in New York, to haul trunks, boxes, bundles when I am doing amateur housekeeping, let its greatest use as a daily carriage for all the children in the neighborhood. It is nothing for it to bring home eleven or twelve piled in it and heading to it from school. It is always in use by some member of my family. I attribute the remarkable service myself and family have obtained from this old Cadillac of mine to the fact that we look after it careful, see that it is well lubricated at every part, don't abuse it on rough roads and have it looked over attentively every day and very thoroughly every January in every year."

USE DRAGON IN N. Y. AUTO SCHOOL

The Y. M. C. A. Automobile School in New York, noted for its thorough course and competent mechanics, has turned out among its graduates, has purchased a 24-20 horse-power engine of exactly the same model as that used in the Cadillac automobiles. This is to be used for class demonstration and study. The superintendent of the Y. M. C. A. school made a careful search of the entire field of American cars and decided upon the Dragon as being desirable for analytical and demonstrating purposes.

NEW LOGAN CAR CAN DO HARD WORK EASILY.

Ton and a Half Commercial Vehicle Makes Reputation Over Snowy Roads.

In these days of motor vehicles, when the pleasure car has secured a firm hold upon the public in general, the attention of the business man turns towards the motor vehicle for commercial as well as pleasure purposes. The motor vehicle has so far proven itself a most formidable assistant to many business concerns, and its march is yet forward and upward.

A new commercial car which came to Boston during the past week was the one and a half ton Logan, for which E. P. Blake is general New England agent.

This car has a carrying capacity of 3,000 pounds, and since its first arrival in this city, even though the roads are covered with snow, it has made a most excellent reputation. It has proven itself a veritable power and a car which can do the work demanded. It has been demonstrated that this truck can do the work of three two-horse teams when put into actual service, travelling on good roads at a speed of ten to twelve miles an hour.

29,500 MILES WITH NO REPAIRS, TIRES' FINE RECORD.

A somewhat extraordinary record for tire service is reported by Willard Emery, of Alley & Emery, of Boston, in a letter to The Diamond Rubber Company. Mr. Emery has run a Diamond Wrapped Tread tire 29,500 miles with no repairs whatever except once retreading. This tire was seen all the others on the car changed for ones, but has held its own against even the new ones.

The remarkable service this tire has given success a question often asked of tire manufacturers, why is it possible for one tire in a set to be greatly superior in mileage than any of the others? The answer the tiremakers give is that so long as the internal strength is not deteriorated, but as it is impossible to say at what moment the tire will be badly cut or similarly injured, admitting moisture to the fabric, there is no knowing just what the maximum mileage any tire can give may be.

The record Mr. Emery has made is interesting, as showing a tire's possibilities when mishaps are escaped.

ENTIRE TRAIN LOAD OF FORD RUNABOUTS ARRIVES.

Eighteen Cars Filled With Machines Which Had Been Sold to New Englanders at the New York Show

What was unquestionably the largest single shipment of automobiles that has ever arrived in Boston was received last week by Manager Charles E. Fay of the New England branch of the Ford Motor Company. It was nothing more nor less than an eighteen-car train load of the celebrated Ford runabouts. Each car contained four machines, making in all a total of seventy-two runabouts. Each of these cars had been sold at the recent New York show.

The train has been broken up and car loads are being sent direct to the various agents in the New England branch territory, loads being sent to Rutland and Brattleboro, Vt., Bangor, Lewiston and Portland, Me., while in Massachusetts, Springfield, Worcester, Lawrence, Lowell and Haverhill each get a car load and then receives three. The rest of the train load remains in Boston for Manager Fay's retail customers.

The Ford Company started the automobile public upon its way with the announcement that every car would have a four-cylinder motor, which would run at a speed while such an idea was generally considered necessary in order to receive four and eight springs, which are long and flexible. All of the horse-drawn vehicle have been put into the phaeton yet to be considered as not to look "horse wanted" or to take on the machinery look.

The one on exhibition has black running gear and maroon panels picked out with fine gold stripes. It is claimed it is capable of greater mileage than any other similar vehicle. The front axle drop forged, carried on a knuckle, so as to turn with the wheel, preventing the mud from being carried back.

Bailey company of Amesbury, and whose distributing agent is the French Carriage Company of Summer street. Although this phaeton has been on the market out a week it has attracted no end of attention. In appearance it is a handsome vehicle capable and satisfactory.

It has a wheel base of eighty inches, wheel steering and wheel tilting. The tires, mellie those on similar vehicles, are 34x3½ inches. The batteries are carried

The most marked difference between this and other like vehicles is that the frame is much lower and is curved, giving it a very stylish affair. The drop frame is a decided demand in order to receive four semi-elliptic springs, which are long and flexible. All of the horse-drawn vehicle have been put into the phaeton yet to be considered as not to look "horse wanted" or to take on the machinery look.

UNCRATED CARS ON STEAMSHIPS

"I believe that ultimately the fast ocean lines will make provision for carrying uncrated automobiles in order to attract passenger traffic," said a prominent shipper recently. "The automobilist," said he, "who travels with a car can practically take expensive accommodations—not a single berth, but a room or suite of rooms. He is able to pay for good accommodations, as is evidenced by the fact that he takes his machine and his chauffeur with him. Generally the automobilist takes his family with him. In addition, there is, of course, the freight on the machine.

"It is all a question of supply and demand. Steamships, to carry uncrated machines, would have to change their present method of stowing freight and provide a separate compartment for uncrated machines. This would probably charge for in hold arrangements padded pigeonholes or something of the kind and for this space they would probably ask a higher rate. I have no doubt that to-day, if the automobilists of the country would guarantee to fill such a compartment on every trip, the steamship lines would be willing to set aside such space for uncrated machines. But it is not done.

LONG ISLAND PARKWAYS.

To some extent the success of the 1907 Vanderbilt cup race depends upon the completion of the Long Island Motor Parkway by early fall. If this cannot be done it will seriously effect the entry list, as the foreign competitors have said they will not again race with so little protection as can be given them on the highways here. The directors of the motor parkway are keenly alive to this fact, and this is an assurance of the road being completed if it is within the realm of possibility.

KEEP CHAINS CLEAN.

Owners and drivers of chain driven cars will find their machines will run better if every time the car is washed the chains and sprockets are brushed off thoroughly with kerosene and rubbed over with a little coat of graphite and grease. By following out this treatment consistently it is asserted that not simply are better running results obtained, but that the wear will be reduced materially.

Manufacturers Discuss Alcohol as Auto Fuel

The annual meeting of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, necessary branch, was recently held in the directors' room of the Chicago Athletic Club.

The morning session was given over to the discussion of springs, and the report of the test committee's work at the Hartford laboratory for the past month. The report of the committee demonstrated the value of the tests which the association are making, and some interesting features in the treatment of metals along and the phosphates of the automobile was obtained.

Principally the ordinary qualities of metals were discovered, which, combined with the desire of all the parts makers to co-operate with the making of which is particularly signal, and at this state of automobile manufacturing, where the standardization of parts is one of the fundamental principles of the association the committee's reports on the use of alcohol as a fuel is very important, and upon advices from the German, Austrian, French and English users of alcohol as a fuel were read to the engineers and the morning session was devoted to shock absorbers and tube problem to the life of the automobile, followed by very interesting talks on carburetters and clutches.

Owing to the widely opinion of various engineers as to the use of alcohol, the discussion was substantial and the use of various fuels brought out some very radical innovations for the propelling power of the automobile.

At the conclusion of the mechanical session the annual election of officers was held, and it is particularly gratifying that the manufacturing branch re-elected A. L. Riker for its leader. W. S. Clarkson was unanimously elected secretary.

IMPROVEMENTS IN PNEUMATIC TIRES.

It is interesting to note the progress made in the manufacture of automobile tires during the past few years, and as the tire plays no small part in the equipment of the motor car, it is equally interesting to note the improvements in pneumatic tires, and, of no less importance, in detachable rims.

The G. & J. Tire Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, has fully kept pace with the best in the construction. Its oval tread, which, although a couple in base Clincher and Dunlop types, was placed on the market a year ago, and has proved to be a tire of unusual strength and durability. The tires are fitted by the [illegible] process instead of the dry heat radiated through the metal plates of a vulcanizer, and is very tough and at the same time pliable and easy to handle.

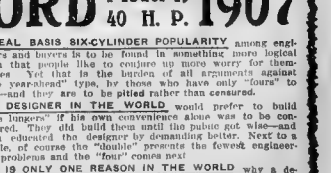
The "Reason Why" of Six Cylinder



FORD Model K 40 H. P. 1907

THE REAL BASIS SIX-CYLINDER POPULARITY among engineers and buyers is to be found in something more logical than that people like to conjure up more words for themselves or for their friends in the line of arguments against "the year-ahead" type, by those who have only "ours" to sell—and they are to be pitied rather than censured.

EVERY DESIGNER IN THE WORLD would prefer to build "one dozen" if his own convenience alone was to be considered. They did build them until the public got wise—and then educated the designer by demanding better. Next to a single, of course the "double" presents the fewest engineering problems and the "four" comes next.

THERE IS ONLY ONE REASON IN THE WORLD why a designer like Mr. Ford has adopted the six-cylinder type. It was because, in his search for the nearest approach to perfection in an explosion motor—in his aim to produce a noiseless, vibrationless motor and one that would furnish ample power at slow as well as at high speeds; one that would almost if not entirely eliminate the gear-changing nuisance; and a motor that would live as long as such a machine should live—he found, as all other engineers who have gone as far have found, that only in the even torque of the six could these qualities be obtained.

MORE PROBLEMS FOR THE DESIGNER—but once these were solved the troubles of the owner are in inverse ratio to the number of cylinders. Idiotic arguments about "more cylinders the more trouble" impress no one—what cylinder or valve or ignition troubles does one have in a well designed motor nowadays? Persons who advance such arguments must be so far behind in their general knowledge of the science as they are in recognizing the inestimable superiority of the six-cylinder car.

WE MAKE SIXES AS WE MAKE OTHER CARS—in larger quantities and more accurately machined—so as to eliminate the guess factor in designing and testing—and so we need a larger market than the others. FORD PRICES create the Ford demand; the answer is—if you want one for early Spring touring, order now or you may be disappointed. Others have been.

STOCKS Drop to Reach of Investors; Speculation Is Checked MONEY

BANKS ABROAD HOARD UP THEIR STOCK OF GOLD

Bank Statement, Showing Big Cut in Reserve, Holds Up Many Deals.

READY CASH IN DEMAND

The best judges of the stock market feel that speculation is likely to be within very narrow limits for the next week or at least. The surprising bank statement of yesterday revealing a reduction in surplus reserve to only a little over $1,000,000 shows that there is not money enough in New York to finance a speculation in stocks.

The payment of $6,000,000 government deposits on the first of the month did not appear in the bank statement of that date and was responsible for half of the loss in cash in yesterday's showing. The other $3,000,000 to be paid will be returned on next Saturday and will show in the bank statement of the following week.

With the surplus reserve at such a low figure it is hard to see how speculation can assume any very large proportions. The demands of the railroad and industrial corporations which are being met by short-term notes have reduced very largely the supply of money in the banks and again comes back to the old statement of fact which has been heard so many times in the past few months, that there is not money enough in the country to finance the requirements of the present season of prosperity and at the same time allow an active speculation in securities.

Remedy in Investors.

The only remedy for the present predicament is the buying by investors. Stocks and bonds are both at a level where they offer very attractive propositions for permanent investment and it is only a question of time when that element will come into the market and buy them. That there is plenty of money for investment is shown by the fact that New England alone has taken over $70,000,000 of the short term railroad and industrial notes which have been floated. When after this demand has been supplied, out of town banks are still reported as looking to the market for the right kind of securities.

There is purely still money for investment but very little for speculation. The New York banks always count on a return of crop-moving money from the West. This year it has not come back, in fact the operations with the interior showed an actual net loss to the New York banks this week.

England Hoards Gold.

This is some hope of relief in the possibility of gold imports immediately. A few small engagements have been made and the rate of sterling exchange continues at a level where gold imports are profitable. The Bank of England did not reduce its rate of discount on Thursday, though from that such action would induce the purchase of gold by American bankers from its store but there will be $3,000,000 there to-morrow from South Africa and it is expected that American bankers will be at least one-half of them.

The market during the past week has at times given evidence of real strength. It was undoubtedly oversold and rallied easily on covering but on several occasions when it was dull, the undertone was very strong and showed that the market is in the hands of strong interests. While the market has been lower in previous years it is to be doubted that stocks with real merit were ever lower when the conditions prevailing throughout the country were as strong as at present. The money question alone is the factor and if this Congress affords relief, the situation will change rapidly.

Money Easy in New York.

Money has been easy through the week in New York up to Friday, when the payment for the New York city bonds and other syndicate arrangements put it up to 6 per cent for a brief time, although the nominal quotation is 3 per cent. Just why money should be so easy is hard to explain. To expect it to continue so during the coming week in the face of the slight supply is unreasonable. Funds are now returning from other centres, because rates

BANK STATEMENT AFFECTS MARKET

The nervous condition in which stocks are at present was well illustrated yesterday when the bank statement actually operated as a reason for selling. This weekly gratuitous insult by the banks is entirely uncalled for. Nobody wants a bank statement, no law compels its publication, and no reason dictates it. As published it is simply a weapon in the hands of a group of bankers to frighten ignorant traders.

The suggestion is made in Wall Street that Congress be asked to pass a law compelling the publication of a bank statement daily, including all operations up to the close of business. Such a statement would be of real value. This, with a law providing for the deposit of public money in the banks and for free retirement of bank notes, would be about all the financial legislation needed.

PRICE OF THIS STOCK ADVANCES TUESDAY

This Copper Mine Should Earn Millions—An Opportunity of a Lifetime Is Here Offered Investors to Share in the Great Copper Boom.

Tom Lawson is not the only copper magnate who predicts that great fortunes will be made in the next few years in this metal. Every newspaper in this country which pays any attention to the mining industry predicts that 1907 will witness a copper boom such as the world has never before known.

In a recent issue of the Boston Commercial, Walker, the famous copper expert, in his daily letter, says:

"There is no surplus of copper in this country, and no effort is being made by any interest to maintain prices artificially around 25c per pound. It is improbable that anyone could be found who is sufficiently short-sighted to undertake so foolhardy a task. If copper is ever cornered again it will be when the selling price is ... or ... cents. ... "Electrical construction ... is ... ing rapidly in all quarters of the globe. ... roads are now converted to electrical traction. Water powers are being ... and small mining plants are converting their power into electricity for more convenient distribution to the various departments. There is rapidly ... electrical development that is sure getting more or less attention to the question of electrical equipment.

"One of the leading copper men in the United States is quoted as predicting that copper will go to 30c per pound. It is known that others expect to see the metal sell above 30c. The consensus of opinion, however, is that the average price throughout the present year will be ... and that several years may elapse ... prices ... 25c. THE DEMAND FOR COPPER WILL INCREASE ... AND THIS WILL HAVE THE EFFECT OF KEEPING PRICES LIKELY TO CONTINUE FOR TEN YEARS TO COME."

A COMPARISON OF PERCENTAGES.

Many mines in British Columbia and in other sections of this country are paying millions in dividends to their stockholders on low grade copper. The famous Granby mine in Phoenix, B. C., in British Columbia, is paying 24 per cent yearly on a capitalization of $15,000,000. The Granby ore body averages less than 2 per cent copper. We have just had some assays made by the well known firm of Crowell & Peck, of Cleveland, and we reproduce one of these assays here to show the copper and gold values on some of these coins of ours. If the Granby can pay 24 per cent on a capitalization of $15,000,000, or less than 2 per cent, what can our company, the British American, pay on a capitalization of $5,000,000 to with 21 per cent copper?

TO BEGIN SHIPPING AT ONCE.

There are no difficulties ahead of this company, and nothing to prevent us beginning the shipment of ore this spring. There are thousands of tons of ore lying in the creek bottoms, a part of a rich slide, which may have occurred centuries ago, that is for immediate shipment. This ore, which runs from $35.00 to $50.00 a ton in value, can ship IT TO THE SMELTERS AT ONCE, for that we can be certain as we write the tunnel work is being carried forward.

$10,000,000 WORTH OF COPPER

WARNING—Price Advances Tuesday.

Contracts have been let and work has been started on the tunnels shown in above illustration. The price of this stock advances to 25c per share on Tuesday, Feb. 12th. All orders for shares in letters postmarked Feb. 12th will be accepted at the 20c price. The safest plan to follow is to wire your reservations at our expense, and let your remittance follow. This stock should be selling at par, $1.00 per share, by August 1st. There is no better or safer investment offered today, and investors are invited to make any investigation of the company and its holdings that they may deem necessary. The entire proposition is an open book. The officers are men of wide experience and high standing in the business world.

IMPROVEMENTS CONTEMPLATED.

It is the company's intention to build a smelter just across the river from our properties on an ideal site for a smelter and other buildings owned by the company, and to connect our shafts with this smelter by aerial tramways, as well as by wagon roads. In this way we can ship the ore from the mines directly into the smelters, roast it there and reduce it to matte, and ship by rail or boat to market. We shall harness the various water powers that are available on every hand, and furnish light and power for all of our needs.

PROPERTIES CONTROLLED.

The properties controlled by the company consist of the following hole claims, namely: "Bellrose," "Mammoth," "Rainbow," "Lakeside," "Wonderful," "Triune," "Golden No. 1," "Golden No. 2," "Cascade No. 1" and "Cascade No. 2," the whole comprising a tract of 640 acres.

RICHEST COPPER DISTRICT IN THE WORLD.

This group is situated in the Golden Division of East Kootenay Mining District, Province of British Columbia. The property lies between Warren and Wells Creeks, tributaries of the middle fork of the Spillimacheen River, a district which contains the most famous copper mines in British Columbia.

The British American Copper Mines & Smelter Co. is capitalized for Five Million Dollars ($5,000,000.00), divided into five million (5,000,000) shares of the par value of One Dollar ($1.00) each, fully paid, non-forfeitable and non-assessable.

IMPORTANT TO STOCKHOLDERS and INVESTORS

The building of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railroad has aroused such widespread interest that its stockholders are now scattred through every State and Territory in the country.

It has therefore seemed expedient to place the sale of stock in the hands of a single brokerage house, having offices in the principal cities of this country and in Europe. This action has been taken solely for the benefit of the stockholders, whose interests may thus be served to better advantage, and especially that the undersigned, who has acted as General Sales Agent, may be able to give his entire time and energy to his duties as treasurer of the construction company, a proper administration of which office is of such vital importance to the stockholders of the railroad.

We desire to announce the appointment of The Hancock Company as exclusive Fiscal Agent for the sale of the capital stock of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railroad Company, that appointment to take effect from this date. The existing agencies will hereafter become branch offices of The Hancock Company. That company is a well established house, having an extensive and efficient organization, maintaining offices in Boston, New York, Chicago, and having correspondents in Montreal and London. It is amply qualified and fully equipped financially and otherwise to render the best service, and its name an reputation merit public confidence.

FREDERICK H. WOOD, Treasurer.

Chicago, February 1, 1907.

THE HANCOCK COMPANY,

TO THE PUBLIC—

Having made a most exhaustive investigation of the plans of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railroad we can unhesitatingly say that our faith in the organizers and their project is implicit and we have accepted the trust placed in us with a full sense of the responsibilities.

We have already acted in the capacity of Fiscal Agent in New England, where over 3,000 stockholders have been enrolled upon the books of the company, and if proportionate success attends our efforts in the broader field given us, the expectations of the organizers and the hopes of the shareholders will soon be realized.

STATE AND CITY AT SHUMAN DANCE.

Annual Fete of Employes to Be Honored by Presence of Dignitaries.

That this year's dancing party held by the employes of A. Shuman & Co. will be the most pleasurable and successful socially of any of the annual affairs ever given under the same auspices, those in charge of the affair confidently predict.

Howe Hall, Huntington avenue, where this year's dance is to be held to-morrow night, has been carefully and tastefully decorated. No pains nor expense have been spared to make the coming social gathering of the employes of the great store and their friends a record breaking success.

The committee in charge of this year's annual dancing party, which includes William F. Maher, J. F. Thompson and Miss Jessie E. Cuna, have for days been hard at work taking care of details for the coming fete. They have been assisted not a little by their employer, A. Shuman, who contributed a check for a substantial amount of money to make easier the financial part of the undertaking.

Governor to Be Guest.

The large number of tickets which have been issued and which have been eagerly sought indicates the social success of the dance. Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., and Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, with A. Shuman, William L. Chandler and Postmaster George A. Hibbard, will be the most prominent guests of the evening.

The large hall has been very attractively decorated and an excellent orchestra has been engaged for the evening. The committee on arrangements has forgot nothing that will in any way contribute to the enjoyment of the employes of the firm or their guests to-morrow night.

Officers of the Dance.

The several committees on dancing are as follows: Floor marshal, Thomas N. Mitchell; assistants, Miss Lillian Kolb, Mrs. Charles Middleton and Albert Parker; reception committee, Miss Katherine L. Curley, Miss Katherine McDonald, Miss Katherine Welch, Miss Katherine White, Charles McClure, Louis Renfre, Thomas McWilliams, William Cole, James Latham and John F. Thompson; entertainment committee, Miss Katherine Collins, Miss Anna Somering, Miss Mary Daley, Frances Sullivan, Charles Engel and Francis Boule.

LEADERS IN SHUMAN FETE.

GIRLS, 16, FACE FORGERY CHARGE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Feb. 9.—Two little girls, both under sixteen years old and attired in short dresses, were arraigned in the West Side Police Court to-day, charged with forgery. Their plight, according to the mother, is due to the love of one for a young man who suddenly disappeared when she was taken in custody for having drawn $1,000 of another's money from the Riverside Bank.

NEW HAVEN R. R. WILL HOLD ALL BOAT LINES.

BITTER STRUGGLE ON FOR SUPREMACY

Heeding the protests of powerful mercantile and industrial capitalists of this city, and believing that the sale of their steamship lines would cause a serious slump in passenger traffic on their railways, the directors of the New Haven & Hartford road have unanimously voted to refuse the offer of $20,000,000 by Charles W. Morse and associates for the sale of the New England Navigation Company and the Maine Steamship Company.

Offer a Liberal One.

"The offer of Mr. Morse and his associates," said President Mellen, after the meeting at the Grand Central Station in New York yesterday, "was a very liberal one, and was declined not [illegible] of appreciation of it, but because it is against the policy of the company to part with any of its property. The directors, however, felt that that if they needed to dispose of their property they would have sold it to Mr. Morse."

Boston capitalists are highly pleased that the sale was not made. Both the Mayor and business men here believe that if the New Haven steamers were sold to Morse, competition would be in part destroyed and that this would react on local business.

Road Is a Gainer.

It is the traditional policy of the New Haven road to give sustaining support and strength to its land lines in territorial developments. The directors consider sound ports highly important as feeders, and it was freely asserted at the meeting yesterday that, no matter what it would cost the system more in the end to refuse the Morse offer and to [illegible] compete with the Steamship King by building larger and faster steamships than even the new Yale and Harvard the ultimate gain to the company would more than compensate for the sacrifice.

The board also considered the possibility of Congressional action compelling the separation of land and water transportation lines under the same management, but it is felt that there can be no serious menace to the continued operation of the New Haven's steamship lines.

Bitter Struggle Expected.

The refusal of the $20,000,000 offer will undoubtedly precipitate a mighty struggle to control the majority of the water passenger traffic of New England, which will be but a climax to the quiet but strenuous contest which has been waged for months between Mellen and Morse for supremacy.

In deciding the sale or refusal of its steamship lines the New Haven company faced one of the most serious problems in years, but it is believed by moneyed interests in this city that Mellen has played his cards with his usual foresight and skill, and knew he was prepared for a victorious fight before the $20,000,000 tender was refused.

Morse has practically secured control of the Ward Steamship line, it is believed, and the sale will probably be consummated this week.

at New York are the lowest in the country and gold imports have had no effect as yet.

The taking out of another $6,000,000 of cash to pay for government deposits on Saturday will not conduce to increased ease this week. The New York banks not only are called upon to return their own deposits on, those of their [illegible] correspondents, as these correspondents will not return the money direct when they can loan it at home at higher rates than their New York reserve agents can do so. This makes a heavy drain on the New York banks.

Scarce in Boston.

Again, there is the uncertainty concerning the calls for the remaining $30,000,000 of government deposits which were to be returned in February and March and which have have not yet been called for, nor has any intimation been given when they will be.

In Boston money is very scarce on account of the large investment in short term loans and banks have little to loan for fixed periods. Money on call rules at five per cent, to six per cent, for the best borrowers, with those who offer only copper shares as collateral paying the higher rate and sometimes as high as seven per cent., according to the nature of the copper stocks.

The feature of the Boston market has been the dividend declarations of Quincy and Calumet & Arizona. [illegible] expectations by declaring $4.50 which resulted in a rise to 140, with a subsequent reaction to around 140. There was some doubt about the permanency of the rate until Director Meserve came out in a statement to say that it was intended to pay this rate throughout the year. Quincy is said to be earning $25 a year and can easily pay $18.

Increase in Dividends.

Calumet & Arizona directors increased their dividend to $5 and the stock responded with a rise to 108 with a subsequent reaction to 101. The dividend has been steadily increased at each quarter for two years, and with earnings at present stated to be over $35 per share there is room for a further increase at the next declaration.

La Salle, a Calumet & Hecla property, [illegible] listed on the Boston exchange. This stock recently sold up to 35 on the curb, but the Calumet & Hecla people were not in sympathy with the advance and on their selling the stock declined to below 20 yesterday.

Calls for Caution.

The Boston market is suffering from a period of overspeculation. There seemed to be no end to the rise, and traders pyramided with the result that many weak accounts were built up in brokers' offices, and what liquidation has been experienced this week was due to this condition. The investment stocks are not high and will continue to be bought by investors.

There are several low priced stocks which really possess merit and excellent prospects [illegible] higher, but the situation [illegible] requires caution [illegible] traders and a [illegible] investigation as to the merits of the properties.

SUES FOR $10,000; HURT ON SCHOONER

A suit was filed yesterday in the clerk's office of the Middlesex County Court, Cambridge, by attorneys for William Garron of Everett against Cassius Hunt of Somerville to recover $10,000 for injuries alleged to have been received while at work on a fishing schooner, the Helen B. Thomas, said to be owned by Hunt. According to Garron a jumbo sail tumbled down on him, flattening him out on the schooner's deck and seriously injuring him.

William G. Nixon Claims He Put Up $32,000 for Aluminum Making Process.

FORMULA, SUPPOSED TO BE IN TRUST VAULT, GONE

The arrest in Philadelphia of John Michael Murphy of Danbury, Ct., who has risen in a meteoric manner from driving a street car at $1.75 a day in Danbury to being a financier, promoter and at times a man of reputed colossal wealth, resulted yesterday in the hasty departure for Philadelphia of William G. Nixon, the Tremont street broker, who says he was one of Murphy's victims.

Mr. Nixon wants Murphy to make good on some $32,000 which Nixon and three other men put into a scheme of Murphy's for making aluminum by a new process. Mr. Nixon says he only had a small amount in the proposition and that $30,000 of the money was furnished by a capitalist of Nazareth, Pa., named William B. Shaffer.

A company was formed, but trouble developed soon, according to a statement made yesterday by Mr. Nixon, who said:

"At a meeting of the company's officers in Philadelphia we made an arrangement with Murphy to have the exclusive rights to his formula in case of his death. He agreed to this and gave us a sealed tin box in which he said he had placed it. This was put in a trust vault. Then Murphy disappeared. We did not suspect anything until then. I was appointed at a meeting of the officers to visit the trust vault and open the tin box for the formula. I did so, but all the box contained was a lot of chemicals in bottles. There was no formula in it."

The private detective who arrested Murphy to-day [illegible] that Murphy said he would never give us the formula. [illegible] that's where our kick comes. [illegible] we paid for. We will push him for the return of our money and if he doesn't come up we will prosecute him."

Murphy was arrested on complaint of a Philadelphia jeweller, who explains that Murphy swindled him.

King-Crowther Corporation 8% Stock--Limited Offer at 70% of Par Value

One month from to-day, at the close of business at my office, the dividend books of the King-Crowther Corporation will close until after the payment of the quarterly dividend of 1½% and the extra dividend of one-half of 1% March 15th.

All subscriptions immediately in hand for the stock of the King-Crowther Corporation will be entitled to the present quotation of $70 a share and to the almost entirely accrued 2% interest payable at that early day.

The board of directors of the King-Crowther Corporation at their meeting last Monday, after establishing a dividend rate of 8% on the par value of the stock, authorized and directed me to offer the stock to the investing public at but two quotations in the future—$70 a share and $100 a share.

The quotation of $70 a share represents the SMALLEST advance that has ever been made in the selling price of the stock, the previous quotation having been $65 a share.

The coming quotation of par, $100 a share, will represent an advance of six times the one established after the close of business last Monday and will be the LARGEST ever made in the history of the corporation.

Under no circumstances can I sell more than a 4,000 share allotment at the present quotation of $70 a share. Under no circumstances can I continue that quotation beyond the close of business March 9th, when the price of the stock, by order of the board of directors, advances unconditionally to its full par value, $100 a share.

In addition to the limitation that has been imposed on this offer by allotment and that has also been imposed by time, I am empowered with the right, which I reserve, to withdraw the present quotation of $70 a share at any time, without notice, and announce that the quotation of par, $100 a share, is in force.

The King-Crowther Corporation is now on an 8 per cent. dividend-paying basis.

Those who bought the stock at $50 a share are now assured a net investment yield of 16 per cent. or better.

Those who bought it at $65 a share are now assured a net investment yield of 12.30 per cent. or better.

Those who buy now at $70 a share are assured a net investment yield of 11.42 per cent. or better.

The capitalization of the King-Crowther Corporation is $3,000,000. The par value of its shares is $100.

Although it has made acquisitions and developments relatively among the greatest of any corporation in the United States since its incorporation, October 10, 1901, its capitalization remains at its original amount.

Its conservatism is shown in the fact that while its main original estate of approximately 70,000 acres in southwest Texas would not be excessively capitalized, in my opinion, at $5,000,000, its Ohio-Indiana acquisitions alone would, upon the most conservative basis, easily justify the entire capitalization of the corporation.

And yet its 6,308 acres of proven oil lands, located in Delaware, Randolph and Wells counties, Indiana, and Van Wert, Allen and Hancock counties, Ohio, and its 486 oil wells (including 24 wells of fresh production that remain to be drilled and delivered to it under its contract without further expense by July 1st next), together with houses, equipments and machinery, such as derricks, tanks, pumping stations, piping, rods, etc., to the estimated valuation as quick assets of not less than a half million dollars, were all acquired without a dollar's increase in its capitalization—without a dollar's assessment on a single stockholder.

This is a record that stands, so far as I know, without a parallel in the corporation history of this country.

As I have said before, I believe I do the average American corporation of similar capitalization no injustice when I say that it would not have undertaken the acquisitions made by the King-Crowther Corporation, under all the circumstances, without first having doubled its capitalization.

From the standpoint of its conservative capitalization; from the standpoint of the vast enrichments it has made; from the standpoint of the development of its large earning capacity; from the standpoint of the high dividend rate is has established, and from the standpoint of its valuable and strategic holdings in Ohio, Indiana and Texas, controlling locations for upwards of 7,000 oil wells, and the vast possibilities of development that it controls along so many lines, the King-Crowther Corporation stands in a class by itself—an example among American corporations.

In Ohio and Indiana its wells are found from Findlay, Ohio, in the extreme North Lima field, to Muncie, Indiana, in the extreme South Lima field. By reason of its great oil territory, its large assemblage of wells and its ideally strategic situation from one end of the Lima-Indiana or "Trenton rock" formation to the other, the King-Crowther Corporation is the dominant factor in the oil production of that field, now the most important in the country.

Millions of dollars are invested in oil producing companies in that 200 miles of fabulously rich territory that comprises the Lima-Indiana oil field and some of the largest capitalists in America have become heavily interested there, but since July 1st last the King-Crowther Corporation has entered that field, forged to the forefront and become the leading corporation among the independent producers of Ohio and Indiana. In the great extent and valuable locations of its holdings, in the extent and condition of its equipments, in its organization and aggressiveness it takes the highest rank among the oil operators of that field.

And yet it must be always borne in mind that its paramount interests lie in southwest Texas—in the great estate of approximately 70,000 acres of rich oil, kaolin, coal, ranching and agricultural lands that formed the foundation of the corporation's beginning.

This immense acreage—among the largest landed holdings under one control in the United States—lies in Atascosa, McMullen and Live Oak counties—a section made famous as the theatre of the war with Mexico—a section as fair in climate and rich in fertility and natural resources as any on the continent. It lies midway between San Antonio and the Gulf, in the heart of a region that is being advertised by railroads and colonization companies as is no other section of the continent, and receiving attention commensurate therewith. Hundreds—I might say, perhaps, without exaggeration, thousands—of immigration agents, in the employ of these large interests, are conducting homeseekers and investors over the entire section between San Antonio and the Gulf. Cheap excursions are run regularly from all the large Western cities carrying prospectors to this land of promise.

The charter of the State of Texas provides that its 265,780 square miles may, if the people of that great commonwealth ever so elect, be divided into five States. State pride may always forbid it, but it is interesting to point out that in the event of such a division the holdings of the King-Crowther Corporation and the town of Crowther, which it has placed on the map there for all time to come, would in all probability be located in the fairest State that would be formed from Texas—a State that would be almost as large as the present State of Oklahoma, comprising what was formerly Oklahoma Territory and Indian Territory—a State that would be almost as large as the six New England States combined. That State would doubtless include San Antonio, the oldest and largest city in Texas; the most beautiful and cosmopolitan city in America; the educational center of a State with the largest public school fund in the Union; the largest railroad center in the Southwest and the gateway to the Gulf; the home of the Alamo; rich in the most cherished history, and one of the most celebrated health resorts in the world.

That splendid city—than which there is none more American on this continent—is but 63 miles distant from the King-Crowther estate, a less distance than that between the residences and offices of thousands of people who do business daily in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago.

In ten years I expect to see Crowther the most important town between San Antonio and the Gulf and within an hour by rail of either. Oil production and development will contribute to that end. Kaolin mining and manufacturing will contribute to that end. Coal mining will contribute to that end. Railroad building will contribute to that end.

The railroad interests are the most active in calling attention to the advantages of that great southwestern territory lying between San Antonio and the Gulf. They are the most active in the vast colonization enterprises on foot there. And with the rapid influx of homeseekers—farmers, ranchers, etc.—a condition which the railroads have created and are still creating with all their might and main—there must be greater railroad facilities, following as the night follows the day. And I wish to have my words marked that the next railroad built in Southwestern Texas will connect Crowther with San Antonio and the Gulf.

I expect to visit the Texas estate of the King-Crowther Corporation at once and there inspect and direct the work of development under way. New wells are to be brought in in blocks of ten and attention is to be given to the prosecution of development work along all lines, especially to that of the provision of early transportation facilities.

I invite subscriptions to the stock of the King-Crowther Corporation at $70 a share, carrying accrued dividends of $2 a share payable March 15th. I can give no assurance of the continuance of this offer; which is subject to withdrawal at any time without notice, after which the greatest advance that has ever been made in the stock of the King-Crowther Corporation will take place, when the quotation goes to par, $100 a share, as fixed by the board of directors at their last meeting.

I rejoice in the fact that my office is now a disbursing agency through which my clients receive dividend or interest checks on their investments every month in the year. Beginning with the present year and keeping company with the calendar throughout there is no month that is not fruitful of profit-sharing for my customers. It is a proud and happy thought to me that there are so many of my clients whose investments through my office have placed them on Easy Street and who can calculate upon their certain returns month by month with which to meet their living expenses. I rejoice that I have been to thousands of satisfied clients a business benefactor—one who has helped them in the best possible manner by helping them to help themselves. I am glad to have diverted millions of dollars from investment channels that were almost barren of returns to those that offered them incomes in keeping with the country's prosperity. To know that in the ordinary course of my business I have helped so many in their lives and thus won a place in their hearts—it is to me a far greater honor than to occupy a niche, however enduring, in the Hall of Fame. —C. F. KING

My office now makes dividend and interest payments to its clients every month in the year, and the large proportion of them who have from time to time made investments in all the securities recommended by me are now in receipt of regular monthly incomes that cover in many instances living expenses—incomes from two to four times and upwards of what they might be receiving from deposits in banks and trust companies or with their capital tied up in bonds or stocks making a like small return. The addition of the dividend payments of the King-Crowther Corporation, which will be made every March, June, September and December at the annual rate of 8% or better, is a welcome one to the list and one that will add to the reputation of my office and of the line of corporations with which I am identified for increasing the incomes of the investing public.

Again I urge an immediate investment in King-Crowther stock. All subscriptions are to be made subject to withdrawal of the present concession of $70 a share without notice.

The price NOW is $70 a share. The NEXT price will be $100 a share. The advanced quotation may go into effect at any time.

Address all communications to me personally, and make all remittances payable to my order

In my opinion he will stop advertising it after it reaches the price he says it is worth, and will go first to 75, then to 100 and over. CRAWL MILES IN FREEZING BLIZZARD.

Two Men Lost in Storm Are Found Half Frozen by Rescue Party.

WALK 68 MILES IN WOODS ON SNOWSHOES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Stockton, Feb. 9.—Suffering from exposure and cold and thoroughly exhausted because of their long journey through a blinding blizzard in their efforts to get away from Camp Relief, in the extreme northern part of Tuolumne County, where the Union Construction Company is constructing a power dam, seven men crawled upon their hands and knees into Brightman's Flat.

Nine began the journey. Two of them lost their way in the blizzard, and but for relief sent on the next day would have perished.

Overtaken by Blizzard.

In the party were William Jones, George Scherrer, George Brown and John Tezzle, Ed Richmond, Joe Miller, J. Mora and Telenick. Some of them were provided with snowshoes, mere makeshifts, such as barrel staves, and progress was slow. On the Patterson grade, which is five miles long, they were overtaken by a blizzard. Tezzle and Telenick did not get in that night at all, and the next day a relief party found them. Tezzle had built a nest under a tree. When found he was almost frozen and his legs were in such a condition that he was unable to walk. He was taken to Vallecito, where he was still in bed at last accounts.

He managed to find a small tree where he stood with his face hid in the branches waiting to die. His feet are frozen and some of his toes will probably have to be amputated. His hands were also badly frozen.

A. C. Salisbury, one of the workmen who came out with a party of four a few days later, arrived in Stockton yesterday. With him were Frank Manus and Louis Dale of Stockton, and John Ulvitch of Oakdale. Dale, who is still in a bad way, being confined to his bed at the United States Hotel in this city, started in advance of Salisbury and Ulvitch, accompanied by Manus. They were overtaken by Salisbury and Ulvitch.

60 Miles on Snowshoes.

The four made a trip of sixty miles on snowshoes, traveling night and day for four days, stopping only to get a little rest and such refreshment as was afforded at the mail carriers' camp along the route. Most of the way the snow was seven feet deep on the level.

The cold was intense and they all still feel the effects of the terrible experience. Dale, who is nearly fifty years of age, suffered greatly from exhaustion. During the trip he threw away everything possible, even his hat, to lighten his load. At Confidence he could walk no further, and was put on a stage and taken to where he could get a train for Stockton.

"KID TEAM" WINS SIX DAY RACE ON ROLLERS.

Williams and MacDougal Take the Final Honors of Skating Contest at Park Sq. Rink.

FINAL STANDING.

	Miles	Laps
MacDougal and Williams	292	3
Hamilton and Brennan	292	2
Gendron and Boyle	292	1
Walsh and Holden	291	1
Merritt and Barrett	291	1
Norton and Bearson	291	.
Rollins and Russell	287	.
McArdle and Hamilton	286	.
Acheson and Hagerty	286	1

Three thousand wildly excited spectators witnessed the finish of the six day skating race at the Park Square rink last night, when young Williams dashed across the finish line, winning first position for his team, a lap ahead of the second team composed of Hamilton and Brennan.

Gendron and Boyle, the Irish combination, got third money and three other teams tied for fourth place.

Walsh got across the line in front and won the fourth money with Merritt next and Norton trailing.

The last night of the race was devoid of any sensational racing. At the announcement of the last few minutes of time word Williams lead the spurt, which he kept up till the final bell.

On the last turn into the stretch Hamilton, who would have probably finished second to him, was forced against the rail and his teammate, Brennan, had to pump in and go to the finish line.

The Merritt-Barrett team put in a protest, claiming that a foul had been committed and spoiled their chances of getting a higher place.

The judges failed to act favorably on their claim.

The skaters were pretty well plugged out and had little speed left for the final night and were content to hold their own and stick it out.

LAST CHESS MATCH ENDS IN DRAW

Lasker and Marshall Finish Series with Former Three Games to the Good.

New York, Feb. 9.—Contrary to general expectation, the New York series of the world's chess championship match between Dr. Emanuel Lasker and Frank J. Marshall was concluded at the Everett House today without the former adding another win to his score of three points, which the champion has to show as the result of victories in the first three games contested.

Marshall, again resorting to the French defence, played with brilliant abandon, and eventually brought about a position of so delicate a nature that the champion was obliged to content himself with a draw by perpetual check in order to avoid worse consequences. The game was the shortest thus far contested, lasting only twenty-one moves. All the others had averaged over forty. The Metropolitan series thus ended with Dr. Lasker leading by 3 to 0, with three games drawn. The masters plan to open the series of three games in Philadelphia next Saturday afternoon.

HUB SOCIETY READY FOR HARVARD'S 'JUNIOR PROM'

New York and Philadelphia Society Leaders Will Attend Cambridge Event.

Cambridge and Boston exclusive social circles are prepared to make the "Junior Prom" to-morrow night, the third event of the kind in Harvard circles, an event long to be remembered. This, one of the greatest in Harvard social events, is to be given in Harvard Union, beginning at 8.30 o'clock.

Invitations a plenty have been issued to the "400" of Cambridge and Boston, and the now popular social event will be more largely attended this year than ever before.

Members of the class of 1908 have arranged to have some of the most prominent New York and Philadelphia social [illegible] attendance. Several of the [illegible] and Wellesley girls have been invited to be present, so there is bound to be no lack of brilliancy and beauty to grace the occasion.

Gorgeous Gowns.

The gorgeousness of the gowns of the women and girls will further enhance the splendor of this great social event. Many expensive toilets, running up into the thousands of dollars, have been ordered expressly for the occasion.

This third "Junior Prom" will undoubtedly surpass all others. The committees on arrangements are gleefully expectant of a grand social triumph, and every Harvard man who is to attend has invited the most lovely or most intellectual girl of his acquaintance.

Harvard Union to-morrow night is to be closed to all except those who are armed with the precious invitations to attend the function. Boxes have been arranged in the Game room, Periodical room, Writing room, Lobby and Dining room. They have been exquisitely decorated with great masses of ferns, palms and holly. The boxes have been furnished by their occupants with great harmony in color and design. They have been numbered alphabetically and distributed among the various members of the class.

The "Junior Prom" is to begin at 8.30 o'clock and the thirteenth dance is to be the grand march immediately before supper. All of the other numbers on the programme are to be waltzes and two-steps.

"Prom" Patronesses.

The patronesses for the occasion are Mrs. Charles Almy, Mrs. J. Barnes, Mrs. F. S. Armory, Mrs. Robert Armory, Mrs. Charles S. Bird, Mrs. Alfred Bowditch, Mrs. LeBarron R. Briggs, Mrs. S. Tucker Burr, Mrs. Hugh Cotton, Mrs. Joseph Dorr, Mrs. Charles W. Eliot, Mrs. H. H. Fay, Mrs. Robert Grant, Mrs. Morris Gray, Mrs. D. L. Pickman, Mrs. William T. Piper, Mrs. H. P. HAVERHILL SHOE STRIKE TANGLE

Haverhill, Feb. 9.—When all of the striking workmen, excepting about sixty stitchers and half a dozen packers, of the Chesley & Rugg factory voted to-day to return to work on Monday and were then met by Mr. Chesley, who refused point blank to arbitrate any of their differences, the situation here became exceedingly complicated.

In the ranks of the independent union to which the majority of the workmen had deserted from the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the fiat of their employer was puzzling.

BOSTON PEOPLE TRULY LOYAL

The phenomenal sale of Hyman's Natural Toffee in Boston shows the true heart and Bostonian spirit in patronizing a really meritorious home product. Everybody likes it. Everybody asks for it. Not entirely because it is a Boston product, but because it is a most delicious and pure confection that any one can put into his or her mouth. Why, it just simply makes children grow strong and fat and the ladies, God bless them, they love it, because it has such a pleasant, soothing effect on their system, and makes them feel so cheerful. 5 cents at all dealers. E. H. S., CLASS '70, HOLDS REUNION

Old schoolmates and chums of the classes of 1870-73 of the English High School, together with many of the present and past masters and teachers of the school, gathered together in the spacious banquet hall at Young's Hotel last evening and observed a "Grandfathers' Night," in honor of six of their members who had become graduated to that station.

The centre of the head table was taken up by an old-fashioned cradle made up of flowers, and suspended from the centre of the ceiling was a stork carrying a baby in a handkerchief, grasped in its bill.

Souvenirs were much in evidence, and unique among these were bon-bon boxes in the shape of lobsters.

The officers for the ensuing year that were elected were: Charles M. Baker president, Frederick T. Manson vice-president, and J. B. Clapp secretary.

SHEA LEAVES TO FACE SECOND TRIAL

Confident of clearing himself of the charge of conspiracy against Montgomery Ward Company in injuring their business through the recent teamsters' strike in Chicago, Cornelius P. Shea, international president of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, returned to Chicago yesterday to face a new trial. To the large delegation of officials of local teamsters' unions who accompanied him to the South Station, President Shea said that he felt sure of being acquitted. The first trial resulted in a disagreement. Mr. Shea has been spending the past week with his family, who reside in Cambridge.

Dispatches from Chicago before Mr. Shea started stated that the jury for the trial had been selected and testimony will begin to-morrow. The examination of talesmen lasted but one week, a startling comparison with the ten weeks required to secure the first jury.

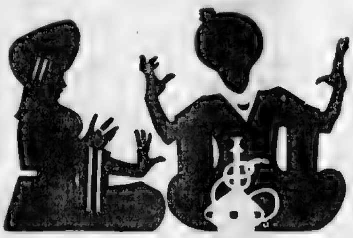
Washington, Feb. 9.—Shot through the right leg and beaten over the head with a blackjack or cane, Dallas R. Bowman is in the Emergency Hospital. Charged with assault Arthur J. Russell, manager of the University Club, is locked in a cell at the second police precinct. He says he acted in self defence.



IN the time of the Arabian Nights the chief form of amusement was telling stories. They had no books. Professional story-tellers went around and amused everybody who was able to pay. This idea of being amused is as old as the human race. "Give us something to entertain us" has been the constant cry. The answer in this day and age is the Edison Phonograph.

Every one can have his own story-teller, his own songster, his own bandmaster, right in his own home. The man who "kept a poet" is not in it with the man who keeps an Edison Phonograph. Hear it at the nearest dealer's.

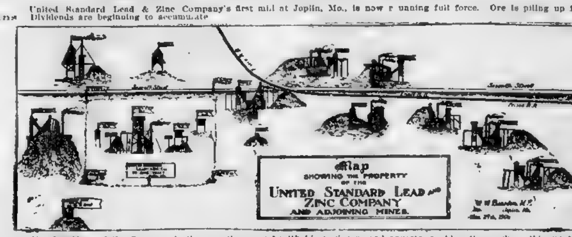
Millions of Dollars' Worth of Ore to Be Mined

FIRST MILL NOW GRINDING ORE

Plans and Specifications Prepared—Contract for Mill No. 2 Already Let and the Work of Construction Begun.

United Standard Lead & Zinc Company Stock Has Already Increased 200 Per Cent—It Will Be 500 Per Cent Before the Snow Is Off the Ground—Buy Now at 15 Cents and Earn Your Great Profits.

United Standard Lead & Zinc Company's first mill at Joplin, Mo., is now running full force. Ore is piling up in the bins. Dividends are beginning to accumulate.



The President of the Company is there on the ground with his engineers and experts, pushing the work on this great enterprise as rapidly as possible. This company means business and is going to do business. Bear that in mind. Just as soon as the present properties of the company are fully equipped with mills and machinery, new properties will be added. There will be no let-up in this great work. The management of the United Standard Lead & Zinc Co. will never be satisfied, even though the company is making a million dollars a year. They will keep trying to make more—to increase the dividends—to make the stock worth more.

STOCK NOW 15c—PAR VALUE $1.00

Don't wait or delay about buying stock in the United Standard Lead & Zinc Co. We can see no reason on earth why this stock should not be worth 100 cents on the dollar before the first of next January, and many times par later on. It is only a question of pushing the work, and men of push are certainly behind the work. They are going to deliver the goods and no mistake.

SURE WEALTH NOW AWAITS STOCKHOLDERS

On the properties which the United Standard Lead & Zinc Co. already has, there is no doubt that there are millions of dollars' worth of ore to be mined. Add to this the other properties which the company expects to acquire as rapidly as possible and you can readily see that the supply of wealth awaiting the stockholders of this company is inexhaustible. There is practically no limit to it.

It is the opinion of those best informed that the mining industry in the great Joplin District is only in its infancy. New strikes are being made and new camps are being opened up all the time.

Property Endorsed by State Mine Inspector Under Three Governors

Read the report of Hon. Geo. E. Quinby, Mine Inspector of the State of Missouri under three Governors. According to Mr. Quinby's report one mill should give an output of 50 to 70 tons of zinc ore per week. In dollars and cents this would be from $2,250 to $3,150 per week. Deduct $800 for operating expenses and you have left $1,450 to $2,350 week clear net profit. As the mine occupies only about eight acres, or less than one-seventh of the entire tract, it stands to reason that there should be at least seven mills running on this property. Figured on the same basis, seven mills would yield a weekly profit of from $10,150 to $16,450. This would mean a yearly net profit of from $527,800 to $855,400 clear and clean above all expenses, or from 10 per cent to 28 per cent on the entire capitalization of the company, which is $3,000,000.

Such a remarkable record as this would make you rich, would make your stock worth par. Yes, far more than par.

A New Rich Lead Strike

About three weeks ago a new very rich strike of both lead and zinc was made northeast of shaft No. 2. The following letter from the mining engineer explains itself. This strike alone is sufficient to warrant an increase of 50 per cent in the price of stock.

W. W. BEARDEN,
MINING ENGINEER,
Miners' Bank Bldg.

Joplin, Mo., Jan. 12, 1907.

United Standard Lead & Zinc Company, Joplin, Mo.—

Gentlemen: I have just returned from your tract of land, and beg to report regarding the drill hole which is being put down about two hundred and fifty feet northeast of shaft No. 2. I consider the showing very good indeed, and it gives evidence of a continuous body of both lead and zinc ore, leading from shafts No. 1 and No. 2, and confirms opinion stated in my report.

They struck good lead at 57 feet to 63 feet.
63 feet to 71 feet, zinc and some lead.
71 feet to 80 feet, zinc.
80 feet to 85 feet, blue flint.
85 feet to 96 feet, zinc, and still in ore.

I will report to you as they progress with the drilling, and desire to congratulate you on the showing.

Yours very truly,
W. W. BEARDEN.

FRAUD IN BIG INSURANCE COMPANY?

Examiner Charles W. Fletcher Finds American Company Is Insolvent.

SAYS DISBURSEMENTS WERE EXTRAVAGANT

Commissioner Cutting Reports Officials Countenanced Wrong Statements.

FUNDS DEPLETED IN FRISCO SETTLEMENTS

Officials of Organization Are Prominent Men in Boston.

CHARGES of double dealing, misrepresentation of its real financial condition, extravagant disbursement of funds, the bribing of a newspaper proprietor in San Francisco to conceal the facts, and an attempt to influence the Insurance Department of this State through pressure upon Governor Guild, are contained in the lengthy report made by Insurance Commissioner Frederick L. Cutting on his investigation into the affairs of the American Insurance Company of this State, following allegations regarding the unsatisfactory settlement of claims growing out of the San Francisco earthquake and fire.

In an appended report, the company is declared insolvent by Insurance Commissioner Charles W. Fletcher.

The company has been enjoined by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts from doing business in this State, pending decision by a master regarding its solvency.

Officials Prominent Men.

Francis Peabody is president of the company which has a suite of offices at No. 89 Kilby street. Henry S. Bean is secretary and treasurer. Among the directors are E. Rollins Morse, Gorham Rogers, A. M. Bullard, S. E. Peabody and Endicott. The company has written millions of dollars worth of insurance since its incorporation in 1818.

In his report Commissioner Cutting openly declares that the company's representatives to the insurance department of this State have not been in accordance with facts, and that the accredited representatives of the company have made material misrepresentation to the claimants to settle the company's affairs in San Francisco.

"Certain misrepresentations were known to the company," adds the report "which accumulated in the hands of its representatives and that it deputed its funds by settling its claims at such rates and conditions in which the business of the American company was subsequently shown that the American's probable liability on account of the San Francisco losses."

"Reached Through Guild."

General Arent R. W. Hosmer of Chicago, who was the company's representative in adjusting and settling the claims at San Francisco, comes in for an exoriation. His letters to Secretary Bean form the gist of the voluminous report in which the company is alleged to have forced policyholders to accept forty cents on the dollar when considerably more could have been paid.

In his report, Commissioner Cutting maintains that Hosmer's misrepresentations were repeated in his general report and that upon the strength of them, the Insurance Commissioner permitted the American Insurance Company to reinsure its outstanding business. Subsequent investigation showed that at that time the company was insolvent.

Hosmer in his letters further suggests that "Cutting might be reached through Governor Guild and only a perfunctory report or affirmation needed," and that he had had to settle with an Oakland, Cal., party not on a similar basis in order to prevent him divulging information to the public regarding the company's actual condition.

Liabilities Differ.

Commissioner Cutting shows that on April 27 President Peabody, Secretary-Treasurer Bean and Francis Peabody, Jr., a director, reported that the company's San Francisco losses would not exceed $400,000, whereas E. G. Pieper, who accompanied General Agent Hosmer to San Francisco, wrote eight days later that the liabilities were $714,000. In view of the fact that on April 27 the total assets of the company had risen to Commissioner Cutting says that the company's losses would amount to $800,000, it is pointed to as significant that in the report signed by the three officials later it was reduced to $400,000, and the assets being given as $5,000,000, as many premiums for reinsurance were readily received from the Insurance Commissioner.

Comparison is made by the Commissioner of statements regarding the company's condition, made by Hosmer, and made by officials of the company to the department, as follows:

	By Company.	By Hosmer.
Total assets	$4,605,504	$4,605,504
Gross losses to San Francisco	1,121,093	1,221,203
Less reinsurance	521,093	242,016
Net San Francisco losses	600,000	979,187
Losses outside San Francisco
Net gain		40,000
Total liability		1,619,187

"False Representations."

"These statements," states the Insurance Commissioner, "show that Hosmer was using, in order to force settlement, a false representation of the company's condition, unless we assume that the secretary made a false statement to this department."

Hosmer is quoted as saying in another communication, "I think it most important that no one should know the absolute status of the company except yourself and Mr. Peabody."

"What good reason was there for this if the company was disposed to pay its liabilities in full?" asked the Commissioner.

"Something must be done to shut off that man Hatchman," Commissioner Cutting's assistant, who is doing us great harm." Hosmer further quoted in a letter by him to Bean.

Sewall Dolliver is the name of the Oakland, Cal., man, with whom Hosmer wrote. He had settled on the ninety per cent. basis to avoid publicity.

Calls It Infernal Lie.

"It's an infernal lot of lies from beginning to end," is the manner in which Francis Peabody, a director of the directors of the American Insurance Company characterized the findings of Insurance Examiner Fletcher in a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter.

"The case is now pending in the Supreme Court," added Mr. Peabody, "on a quarrel as to what we are solvent in, but I prefer to let it rest with the courts."

After listening to a synopsis of the findings contained in Insurance Commissioner Cutting's report, Edmund K. Arnold, senior counsel for the American Insurance Company seemed very much surprised that the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN had obtained a copy of the report.

"The charges are not in accordance with the facts," said Mr. Arnold. "The case is now before the Supreme Court, and we intend to fight our battle in the courts and not in the newspapers."

DAUGHTER OF MAYOR OF MELROSE, NAMED AS HIS PRIVATE SECRETAR

MRS. IRMA A. GURNEY.

MELROSE MAYOR NAMES DAUGHTER AS HIS SECRETARY

Mrs. Irma A. Gurney, First Woman to Get Such Appointment in New England.

The first appointment of a woman as private secretary to the Mayor of a city in New England was made yesterday when Mayor Eugene Moore of Melrose gave the portfolio of private secretary to his daughter, Mrs. Irma A. Gurney.

A few minutes after Mrs. Gurney was appointed she said:

"I think that my knowledge of stenography, coupled with the exercise of a little common sense, will make my services satisfactory to papa.

"I know nothing about politics until the last campaign. Then I picked up a little knowledge because of my interest in papa's success. I think I shall be able to do the work all right."

Mayor Moore has never had a woman as private secretary in his business. His daughter helped him during his campaign, and her friends urged him to make her his private secretary. Having no prejudice against the employment of women, and knowing that his daughter had mastered stenography, he gave her the job without hesitation.

LONG LOST NAHUM WING'S MEMORY A BLANK FOR MONTHS

Regains Mental Composure in New Orleans After Life as Another Man.

Auburn, Me., Feb. 9.—Nahum Wing, a prominent official of the Southern Pacific railroad, who disappeared from his home in Denver, Col., four months ago, and who since that time has not been seen by his wife, wife or any of his friends, presented himself to-day. He recovered consciousness of his own identity while walking in a street in New Orleans.

His first act was to telegraph his father, Judge George C. Wing, who lives here. Judge Wing at once notified his son's wife. She had given her husband up as dead, and since his mysterious disappearance had removed from Denver to Bangor. The disappearance of Wing and his life for the past four months furnish problems in the study of psychology and double personality as interesting to say that have been heard of in some time.

According to information received here by Judge Wing to-day, no man has to recollection of having left his home in Denver. The past four months are a blank to him. Why he went away and how he came back to self-consciousness are also unknown.

His wife will come to Auburn at once to await her husband, who has started from New Orleans.

SHOT SELF BITTER WAR WHILE IN FOXBORO.

Suicide Was Patient, and Not a Visitor, Testifies Dr. L. E. Coffin.

DEFENCE WITNESSES' TESTIMONY DENIED

State Health Inspector Morse Declares Smallpox Cases Were Unrecognized.

FOUND FIVE WERE VICTIMS OF DISEASE

Young Surgeon Practiced Before Legal Right Had Been Granted Him.

THAT one of the medical attendants had practiced in the institution before he had legal right, that an inspector for the State Board of Health had found five patients suffering with smallpox, and that one patient had committed suicide with a gun which was in the corner of a room to which he had access, were among the sensational facts adduced yesterday at the continued inquiry by Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper and a committee of the Governor's council into the conduct of the State Institution for Dipsomaniacs and Inebriates at Foxboro.

Statements made by witnesses who testified in behalf of the management of the institution at previous sessions of the committee of inquiry were flatly contradicted and one witness brought by the defence created consternation among the hospital officials when he gave testimony strikingly against the conduct of that concern.

Didn't Recognize Smallpox

Dr. Leslie E. Coffin, second assistant physician at the Foxboro institution, under cross-examination, admitted that for two years prior to his going the examination by the State Board of Registration he had treated patients.

Dr. Coffin was forced to admit that at one time, immediately following his appointment, he was in charge of the patients and that he only conferred with Superintendent Woodbury when he deemed it necessary.

Dr. Francis E. Woodbury testified that he went to Foxboro in 1902, when he was acting as inspector for the State Board of Health, he was asked to visit Patient Ireland, a patient there who were suffering from an ailment that the hospital staff physician did not recognize.

"When I got there," the doctor stated, "I found Mr. Ireland suffering from smallpox. I instructed the physicians and attendants how to treat the patients. On a second visit, about one month later, I learned that two other patients had been affected with the same disease, but that they were better and were then eating with the other patients in the institution in the general dining room."

Suicide Was a Patient.

Under cross-examination, Dr. Morse declared that the signs of smallpox were very pronounced in the cases he had examined, and that in his opinion they should have been recognized by the physicians at the Foxboro institution.

It was young Dr. Coffin who admitted that Witherell, who committed suicide in the hospital with a shotgun belonging to the institution, was an inmate and not a visitor as had been previously stated by witnesses for the defence. The doctor admitted that the gun was in a corner of the office attached to the laboratory, and that Witherell had a right to be in that room as he was employed in the boiler building.

John F. Ireland, one of the attendants at Foxboro, testified that he was given charge of a ward and was allowed to train other attendants within four months after he entered the hospital. He admitted that he had given hypodermic injections to patients without any entrance from the physicians at the institution. This disputed testimony was given by witnesses for the defence that the hypodermic injections were always administered by the physicians in person.

Dr. Coffin's testimony he said that he was graduated from Harvard Medical School in the June class of 1906, and that he was appointed second assistant physician at Foxboro in August of that year. He said that at the time of his appointment Dr. Bell, the first assistant, was absent, and that for two weeks he had full charge of the patients, referring to Dr. Woodbury only in serious cases. Dr. Coffin stated that he was admitted to practice in 1904. Before graduating he had a done wrong, saying that he was only allowed to assist Dr. Bell.

Denies Hicks' Bed Filthy.

He denied that story of Hicks that the latter's bed was filthy and said Hicks had occupied it the previous night and nobody else had been in it. The final discharges were made by the trustees on recommendation of Dr. Woodbury.

When attendant Ireland was testifying, Councillor Pratt asked him about the difference in quality of food at the "ward" table at which the attendants ate and that served the patients. Ireland declared that they were almost the same except that at the "ward" table they might get a little more

SHOT SELF BITTER WAR WHILE IN MAY RENO CHURCH.

Leaders in Dorchester Temple Baptist May Follow Ex pelled Deacon

DISMISSED AFTER TRIAL BY RELIGIOUS COURT

Society Shaken by Storm; Broad; Now Pastor, Too, May Withdraw.

PREACHER IN CLASH WITH DEPOSED MEMBER

Trouble That Started Over Running Expenses Leads to Hopeless Wrangle.

FOLLOWING the expulsion of Deacon Orin I Beverage from membership in the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church it was rumored in Dorchester last night that the Rev. Tillman B Johnson, pastor of the Church from which the deacon was expelled, had decided to resign his pastorate.

Ruth Johnson, daughter of the clergyman, refused last night to deny or affirm the truth of the report Mr. Johnson could not be seen.

The rumored resignation of the pastor was only one of several sensational developments of the day.

May Sue the Church.

It was also reported last night that as another result of the expulsion of Deacon Beverage from the church on charges which had been brought against him and tried in the church during the past week, that over one hundred of the most fashionable and wealthy members of the congregation are to leave that society in a body and that Attorney Charles E. Allen, Professor Beverage's lawyer, is arranging to bring suit against the church.

According to Deacon Beverage the whole affair arose over charges which, he declares, were brought up, and even mentioned in the church when he was opposed to the proposition now loud in their denunciation of the extent to which his pastor intimate has been carried.

In Hopeless Tangle.

Some members of the church who refuse to be personally quoted declare that the whole trouble is the outgrowth of a misunderstanding between the clergyman and Mr. Beverage. It is said that even a majority of the congregation upholds Professor Beverage in his charges. Tillman B. Johnson, the pastor

It is claimed by these that the pastor has caused slanting on the part of the witnesses and the discipline has resulted in the expulsion from which it is charged that absolute untruths have been told.

Rev. Mr. Johnson, himself, yesterday acknowledged that the action of SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter that the matter was in a hopeless tangle. He insisted that the church was not his own and God's.

He said, "This unfortunate affair is no one's business but mine, the church's and God's. I am all that I know. I know the truth and I do. I am God's representative here and in the church and his opinion is my opinion

Trouble Long Brewing.

"All members of my congregation and the public who do not take my view of this matter are in error in true to their Lord."

The trouble, those on the inside declare, has been brewing since 1903, when Deacon Beverage was preparing his annual budget for the expenses of running the church and was ready for submission to the usual congregational meeting.

It is asserted that a secret caucus was then held and at which the pastor, Mr. Johnson was present, by a certain faction in the congregation and that none others were admitted. At this caucus, it is said, it was decided to reduce the cost of the church for the year by $800, the pastor's salary $100 and the janitor's pay by $1 a week.

Quarrel Over Music.

One of the parishioners who attended this caucus reported to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter:

"When this proposition was made Deacon Rehbaum said that the pastor's salary would go back to its original basis in three years. He said that in the same time he would go good for the loss to the pastor. This was a scheme to make the congregation believe the parish was being run in debt by Deacon Beverage, while in reality it was to change the music from the quartette back to a congregational singing. Deacon Beverage submitted his budget but it was not accepted. The arrangements for the ensuing year were then all went through and the quartette was discharged. Deacon Beverage, being of the opinion that the congregation was being deceived, started an investigation of his own, with the result that he was convinced the deception was practiced. The church records, it is alleged, show that the pastor's salary for the year 1903 was $800 weeks, but that he was reimbursed for the amount lost, and Deacon Rehbaum, but the church itself, and his salary put back on the old basis.

Charge of Deception.

Deacon Beverage openly accused the other deacons of the church with deception, the result being that charges were formulated against him by Rev. Mr. Johnson, Deacons Pitts, Laughbar, Rehbaum, Curtis and Dewar. In an open meeting, Deacon Beverage was expelled from the church.

Attorney Tuttle, a member of the congregation, jumped up from his seat and declined this proceeding illegal and demanded an open trial for the deacon.

The church council Attorney Anderson, Deacon Beverage engaged Attorney Charles E. Allen. Rev. Mr. Johnson was modern tor. This was protested against, but the pastor overruled it.

Charges were preferred against Mr. Beverage. Who made the charges at this later meeting no one knew. In the evidence it developed they were made out in Attorney Anderson's office. Everyone refused to own the charges, except Deacon Lowell, who took the responsibility for a few words of unimportance in one charge.

Accused of "Loud Talk."

The court convened and the deacon was arraigned on the following charges:

Charge 1—In that Deacon O. L. Beverage did not contribute his usual amount of money to the church and had advised his friends not to contribute.

It was found on examination, it is said that Deacon Beverage usually had given about $200 or one tenth of his income to the support of the church, but he and the nine his friends not to hold themselves to the same, declaring that the church was in no such destitution as had been practiced.

Said Pastor Insincere.

Charge 3—In that Deacon O. L. Beverage had said that the Rev. Tillman B. Johnson, pastor of the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church, was insincere.

To this charge Mr. Beverage pleaded guilty and said he did not believe the pastor sincere, because he allowed a deduction in his salary to occur.

Charge 4—In that Deacon O. L. Beverage had refused communion from the Rev. Tillman B. Johnson, pastor of the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church.

No direct evidence was obtained on this charge, it being boiled down to mere hearsay.

Charge 5—In that Deacon O. L. Beverage refused to perform the offices as deacon of the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church

Mr. Beverage did not perform these duties because he said he had been told by the pastor that it was distasteful for him. Deacon Beverage, to serve in this capacity

Driven From Church.

Charge 6—In that Deacon O. L. Beverage was opposed to the policy of the church as carried out by the majority.

Mr. Beverage acknowledged that he did not agree with some of the deacons. The charge was not directly proved.

Charge 7—Conduct unbecoming a deacon of the church.

No evidence.

Charge 8—In that deacon O. L. Beverage had been detrimental to the spiritual good of the church and distracted the work of Christ.

No evidence.

In behalf of the defendant it was contended that the overwhelming majority of the congregation were in favor of Mr. Beverage, but when it came to his attention until it had been the custom of the church who refused to own the charges, except Deacon Lowell, who took the responsibility for a few words of unimportance in one charge.

"BILL CLARKE," OLD HARVARD ATHLETE, IS SECRETLY WED

WM. W. CLARKE.

Old Harvard athlete, and bride secretly wed by the now popular leader of Ward 19 Democracy.

Friends Keep Phone Bell Tinkling When It Is Learned That Ward 19 Leader Wins Cambridge Belle.

Secretly married on Thursday to one of the most beautiful girls in Cambridge, senator William W. Clarke, former Harvard athlete, attorney and leader of the Ward 19 Democracy, was yesterday besieged with the felicitations of his bachelor friends when he has formation, when the news of the wedding "leaked" upon the filing of the returns at the office of the Cambridge registrar.

Senator Clarke's bride was Miss Alice A. Boyle, daughter of Thomas Boyle of Berkeley street, and one of the most popular belles in the University City. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John A. Crowe, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Sacrament, at the parochial residence, No. 150 Pearl street, Cambridge.

Surprise for Friends.

The senator's friends were taken completely by surprise by the news, and his telephone was kept jingling all day yesterday by those tendering congratulations.

Mr. Clarke graduated from the law firm of Banks & Clarke. He has a seat in No. 101 Cambridge street, Boston. He graduated from Harvard in 1901, and from the Law School one year later. While in college he played both baseball and football, and was familiarly hailed as "Bill" Clarke in both sports. He is a member of the Spanish War, serving with the Ninth Massachusetts until the regiment was mustered out of service. Mr Clarke was a member of the House of Representatives in 1903, and was elected to the Senate last Fall.

In Sensational Campaign.

His campaign was sensational in that he charged his opponent, Representative John J. Butler, with being in the employ of the Elevated Railway Company Mr Clarke spoke to about 3,000 people every night, calling himself the original Moran man in his district and standing on a municipal ownership platform. He charged Representative Butler with being counsel guilty in favor of all bills which favored the elevated's cause, and with voting three consecutive years against a bill that required cars to be equipped with lifting jacks.

In 1902 Mr. Clarke ran against Perlin for a year for the Senate, but was defeated. Just before election day a criminal prosecution was begun against him for having issued an unsigned circular criticising his opponent's record. He was found guilty and appealed to the Superior Court, where his case was placed on file on the recommendation of the District Attorney

Mr Clarke showed that he had arranged to have his signature printed, but that the sudden death of a member of the printing firm resulted in the circular being issued unsigned, which fact did not come to his attention until it had been circulated.

RESIDED IN HIS HEN COOP; CHARGED WITH SPOON THEFT

Meriden, Ct., Feb. 9.—Peter St Martin was arrested in his chicken coop to-day charged with stealing silver spoons from his father-in-law. In making his defence to the charge of larceny he disclosed the fact that he has lived in a chicken coop for weeks because his wife wearied of letting him live at her father's house for free. He said that his food has been supplied by the neighbors and has consisted of whatever they had left over.

Pending the outcome of the case against St Martin he was permitted to go back and dwell among the Cochin Chinas and the Black Spanishes.

MAYOR'S "KICK" MADE BIG IMPRESSION

Forthwith Said Mayor's Paper Is Given a Half-Page Advertisement.

NO OTHERS NEED APPLY, SAYS AGENT

Is First and Only Step to Mollify Indignant Citizens.

THE New ork Central lines, the foster parent of the Boston & Albany, yesterday poured a tin cupful o foil upon the ocean of discontent, which has been raging in Boston against the Boston & Albany since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and which for some time past has been so acute as to closely resemble a first class storm.

The form in which the mollifying oil was applied yesterday was a half page advertisement which appeared in the Republic, the weekly paper, of the borough of which are "stage managed" by that able editor and business manager, Mayor Fitzgerald.

In a great deal of the advertisement which the New York Central or the Boston & Albany printed in the Mayor's paper there appeared a well written and well typed eulogy of the New oYrk Central railroad.

The appearance of the advertisement overwhelmed the first symptoms of the pessimism of the New York Central of any interest in the welfare of Boston.

Followed Mayor's "Kick"

It appeared close upon the heels of Mayor Fitzgerald's diplomatic pronunciamento, uttered on Thursday last while he was in conference with Vice President Brown of the New York Central.

During that conference, which was made imperative by the New York Central's fixed determination to move Boston as a small and unimportant tuft of a large and splendid kite, Mayor Fitzgerald spoke in part as follows:

"The New York Central and other roads are spending large sums of money on their New York terminal and I should like to see Boston get the benefit of some of these expenditures."

"I am no seaport and then now."

Having heard from the Mayor, the members of the Vanderbilt-Depew-Newton-Brown entourage got busy in a hurry. Immediately the boom was started which has lived to her exploited a compulsion piece of the first order of full dorsal proportion. The picture made by Newman, Van Etten et al, as in high and secret conclave assembled they organized that half page ad, is said to be huge.

Might Be Improved.

That half page, which paints the benefits which accrue to him who travels over the Berkshire Hills route of the No wYork Central, has the honor of representing in itself all the attributes that the New York Central has paid so dear to the demands Boston reformers have made for fair treatment.

Still—and this with no desire at all to discharge the work of those railroad artists who put the ads in the papers—it that advertisement has been modelled along different—it would be presumptious to say better lines.

For instance

"Try our Ked Kttes—fresh every hour."

Or: "Those who use our freight embargoes never have freight enough left to use any others." Or even

"Use a Pyramus, we offer to any resident of Boston who will tell what he really thinks of the Boston & Albany railroad, express opinion without violating the lawsuits the employment of improper language, one of the cakes of Mr. Sapolio's famous Jew, bound in half calf and half brose."

For the Republic Only.

By the time people quit asking C. L. Atlas, the road's local advertising man, questions about the ad. yesterday he was willing to admit that its plans or specifications had started wrong or had miscarried en route. Atlas said that the ad. was prepared for the pages of the Republic

"To tell you the truth" he said, "I had orders to give that ad only to the Republic. It was prepared by Mr. Fitzgerald, Why this fuss?"

Thomas J. Horan, general passenger agent of the Boston & Albany, was all out of explanations. He said:

"I don't think," he said, "that I have anything to say. The ad having reached publication Mr. Hanson refused to be moved from it.

The appearance of the half page catalogue of the beauties of the Berkshire Hills and the continued Mr. Fitzgerald's faith in his belief that there are worse men in the world than Vice President Brown of the New York Central.

It's Mr Brown and Mr. Van Etten's and Mr. Newman's misfortune rather than their fault, perhaps, that those citizens of Boston who do not own weekly papers and who have not received half page advertisements, for those papers still believe to the opinion that all the models for good conduct do not belong to the New York Central or to its farcicrighle child—the B & A.

PLAN BENEFIT FOR DOROTHEA DIX LITTLE ONES.

Footlight Favorites to Aid Dramatic Club in Entertainment for Furnishing New Quarters and Meeting Debt

Just to help little actors in furnishing their new home and to make life easier and brighter, grown up actors and actresses are to give a first-class vaudeville performance at the Huntington Chambers Hall Tuesday night.

One of the youngest professional dramatic clubs in the United States, the Dorothea Dix Hall Senior Dramatic Club, composed of graduates from the orphan's Home, this city, is sponsor for the coming entertainment, which, those who take part in it say, is to be just as fine as they can make it.

Funds to Cancel Mortgage.

And all for the benefit of the Dorothea Dix Home is the performance to be given. The Dorothea Dix Home is to move into new quarters on the first of March or thereabouts. This move will cost the managers of the home money, lots of it, and then they will need to add new furnishings, and besides all this they have to pay off a mortgage.

And so the grown-up actors are to give a fine big performance, the like of which Boston doesn't often see. The Dorothea Dix Home cares for and educates stage children and the children of actors. It's an institution dear to all actors, especially to those who have been there and are among its "graduates."

Dorothy Dix Hall Seniors.

The Dorothea Dix Senior Dramatic Club is composed of those who once appeared as little tots in the theatres of Boston when they were being trained, and cared for at the Home but who now have grown up and are in the profession. They all still retain their love and sympathy for the Dorothea Dix Home, which was their "home" in the happy childhood days and the Senior Dorothea Dix Dramatic Club was the result. Anyone who ever was in the Dorothea Dix Home and who is over sixteen years of age is eligible to this Senior Dorothea Dix Club.

Of course in such a club there are good vaudeville performers galore. Well, these actors and actresses have decided to help their old home by giving this benefit performance to raise money for the cost of this undertaking. Hundreds of persons who will not appear on the stage that night, but who are equally interested have bought tickets.

Two Hours of Acting.

There will be two good long hours of acting, and there will be dancing until midnight.

Doris Bramson Whitehouse is to do a monologue sketch, and Miss Pearl Tupper, who has played soubrette parts in light opera, is to do a song and dance specialty. Peter Conlin, monologue and buck and wing dancer, is on the program.

Misses Casson and Williams are down for some fine specialty dancing. Messrs. Root and Williams will do a dance skit which is declared to be very clever; Miss Myrtle Spaulding is to have a funny sketch, and Miss Maud Atherton and Wilbur Longfellow are to appear in a great sketch.

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES WHO ARE TO HELP CHILDREN OF THE STAGE

HAD MEDAL OF HONOR, DEAD.

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 9.—Henry F. W. Little, lieutenant in the Seventh New Hampshire volunteers in the Civil War and who was granted a medal of honor, dropped dead while at work yesterday.

2,000 FIGHT POLICE IN SUBWAY RIOT

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—More than 2,000 persons engaged in a riot to-day when the subway station at One Hundred and Forty-ninth street and Third avenue became congested. There had been a block on the "L," and when it was raised, train after train drew into the station, transferring its passengers to the tube.

Here there was only one ticket chopper and only one man to exchange the transfer slips. When the mob saw nothing was being done to remedy the condition they brushed aside the roads employes and made their way pell-mell to the cars. Many were thrown down and crushed in the fight to reach the trains.

SEEK LIGHT ON CUBA IN THE SENATE.

"Soon We'll Be Told It's None of Our Business," Sharply Retorts Tillman.

BACON LEADS MOVE TO LEARN CONDITIONS

Washington, Feb. 9.—The question of what the United States proposes to do with Cuba was brought up in the Senate to-day by Mr Bacon of the committee on foreign relations. He inquired of Chairman Warren, of the committee on military matters, who had charge of the army bill, whether his committee had received any word from the war department as to increased expenditures made necessary by the Cuban campaign. He was informed that no such information had been received by the committee or expected by it, as that was a matter to be dealt with later.

"I merely wished to know how far the executive was taking the legislative branch into its confidence," continued Mr. Bacon. He declared that he was far from satisfied with the present situation.

Tillman Queries Cullom.

He said it appeared to him that the United States was setting up a government of unlimited power in Cuba and he thought it would be unfortunate if Congress expired without anyone calling attention to its rights in the matter.

Mr. Tillman tried to get some information on the subject from Mr. Cullom, chairman of the committee on foreign relations.

"Has that committee ever received any information to indicate when, if ever, this government is to get out of Cuba?" he inquired.

"None, whatever," said Mr. Cullom.

"I'd like to know why our engineering officers are surveying a foreign country," Mr. Tillman exclaimed. "Has there been any communication to the committee on that subject," he continued.

"There has been no communication from that branch of the government or any other," laconically replied Mr. Cullom.

"I'd like to know when there is going to be an election or when we are ever going to leave the island," exclaimed Mr. Tillman.

"Overlord at White House."

"I guess the Senator will know in due time," replied Mr. Cullom.

"When the overlord at the White House gets ready, I suppose," retorted the South Carolinian. "After a while we'll be told that its none of our business."

MILL OPERATIVE OF 22 WHO TODAY WEDS FOREMAN, AGED 62

MISS MARGARET F LYNCH

EXPLOSION KILLS 2 MEN ON DREDGER

New York, Feb. 9.—Two men were killed and three others seriously injured by an explosion in the boiler room of the McClellan, a dredger at work in Sheepshead Bay, to-day. The dead men are the fireman and engineer. Three others of the crew were badly injured and were with difficulty rescued.

YOUNG MILL GIRL QUITS HOME TO WED AGED MAN.

Pretty Margaret Lynch of Lowell Braves Relatives' Wrath to Become Bride of Her Twice Widowed Foreman

Because she loves Frank C. Adams, sixty-two years old and twice a widower, pretty Margaret Lynch, twenty-two years old, is to be married to him this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the rectory of St Patrick's Roman Catholic, Lowell.

Turning her back upon mother and sisters and other relatives, who have opposed the match because they don't think that December and May should wed, this plucky girl left her home in Centralville last November and now lives in a room in Cabot street, this city, where she has been completing her wedding trousseau.

The wedding to-day is the result of a most unusual romance which began twelve years ago when Margaret was a little girl.

Frank C. Adams, then a half-century old, came to Lowell from Lewiston, Me., to assume a responsible position in the Lawrence mills. Years before, when but a young man, he married a girl in Maine, but she soon died. Years later he married again, and with his second wife removed to Lowell.

Every day at this period little Margaret Lynch carried a lunch to her aunt, who was an operative in the mill. Mr Adams saw her, and soon began to like her very much. He would often stop her and chat with the demure, blue-eyed maiden.

Sympathized with Him.

Margaret, at last, got a place in the mill as a carder. She was surprised when she found that she was to work in the department of which Mr. Adams had charge. He was quite a good friend and saw to it that her faithful work was appreciated for he liked the girl.

The years dragged on and then one day Mr. Adams's wife died and he was again alone in th world. Of all the hundreds of friends he had, no words of sympathy and condolence were so acceptable as were the few shy words of comfort which Margaret spoke to him.

How the words of love were first spoken is best told by Miss Lynch herself, in her own way.

"About six months ago a woman who works upstairs got angry with me about something. She struck me," said Margaret.

Said He Always Loved Her.

"Mr. Adams saw her do it. He was furious. I did not think he could get so angry. He rushed up to the woman and gave her a sound calling down. That same day he came to me and told me he loved me and asked me to become his wife."

6 PER CENT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

IF you are willing to do your part to put the criminal Oil trust out of business in seven Central Western States and enable this giant independent company to put forth a winning fight in a score of the largest trade centres in the entire nation and do it with profit to yourself, send in your remittance for fifteen thousand dollars necessary to pay for enough of these bonds to build just one (1) fifty-five thousand barrel storage tank. Special effort will be made to find one hundred and ten individuals in the United States who will take fifteen thousand dollars of these bonds each at par during the next few weeks, which will erect that many silent but most effective monuments against Oil trust oppression and to commercial freedom in the oil industry on Western soil. This will enable Uncle Sam Company to keep continually in storage at least a four years' supply for all three refineries at increased capacities.

BY the most cruel discrimination of the well known commercial oil pirates the price of crude oil in the Kansas-Territory oil fields has been forced to a ridiculously low price, while the trust is yearly storing millions of barrels—practically stealing a supply which in a year or so it expects to use to hamper the independent refineries. Producers all over the field have continually offered to deliver their oil to The Uncle Sam Company, so their production, which they are compelled to let go to protect their wells, can at least be used as a weapon against their oil trust oppressor instead of a fostering asset. Uncle Sam Company now has three refineries completed and advantageously located within striking distance of every important trade centre west of the Mississippi river and with very little cost can manufacture and market at a good profit at least one and a half million barrels of oil yearly.

THE people everywhere are tired and disgusted with the trust's un-American methods. The most effectual way to fight any trust is to refuse to buy their goods wrongfully acquired. Uncle Sam Oil Company entered the arena of the fight at almost exactly the right hour. It has met with astonishingly rapid success from the word go. It has an army of over nine thousand loyal stockholders representing every part of the American continent. All this company has to do is to install its distributing stations all over the country and manufacture its oils and make sure of a certain continual supply of crude product for the future. To complete the balance of four hundred main distributing stations, to enlarge capacity of all three refineries to five thousand barrels per day or better; to finish main trunk pipe line to navigation and equip river transportation this company will sell five millions in bonds at par, which will also put in

STORAGE SIX (6) MILLION BARRELS OF 39 CENT KANSAS-TERRITORY OIL

TO INVESTORS

The Uncle Sam Oil Company has reached the stage of its career where it is no longer a small local concern, but it is assuming the proportions of a great national enterprise. It has three great refineries completed and miles of main trunk pipe line and laterals, scores of distributing stations and a great enterprise three-fourths completed, easily large enough to market and manufacture at the very least five thousand barrels of oil per day. At the present time crude oil is selling at the ridiculously low price of 39 cents per barrel for the highest grade, while the plans of the criminal oil trust are to run it still lower. The Uncle Sam Oil Company has been considering this situation in all of its bearings for months, and there is practically but one sane thing to do, and that is to build storage tanks and store at least enough of this cheap oil to operate all three of the Uncle Sam refineries for four years and to keep the storage built up so that a four years' supply will always be on hand. Every barrel of this oil placed in storage with the pipe line and distributing stations and equipment completed will bring this company at least $3 per barrel. This will enable the company to bring its oil sales up to four and one-half million dollars per year and will enable it to buy an additional million and a half barrels of oil each year to take the place of the amount manufactured and sold and to retire one million and a half dollars of bonds yearly. For these purposes five million dollars of twenty-year first mortgage 6 per cent. bonds will be sold.

The production of crude petroleum in the Pennsylvania, California and Texas oil fields is rapidly decreasing, and the only great oil fields in the world to which the people must look for a supply of crude oil are the Kansas-Oklahoma fields. This oil is bound to increase in price and will be worth at least one dollar and a half a barrel in a very short time. The railroads and great manufacturing enterprises in Texas which have been using and are using oil for fuel are already making purchases in the Kansas-Oklahoma fields. Barring all this, crude oil would never have sold in those Western fields for less than one dollar a barrel were it not for the monopolistic grip held by the criminal trust, and, as the Uncle Sam Company has always claimed, just as quickly as this grip can be broken the price of crude oil is certain to greatly advance. While, on the other hand, the trust has always played the same cut-throat methods, viz: They let independent refineries come into an oil field and, of course, it takes considerable time to build up and equip an independent plant for business.

While the independent plants are building the trust runs the price of oil down and stores millions of barrels at a price which is little less than stealing it. At present there is a production in the Kansas-Territory oil fields of close to eighty thousand barrels a day. There is a movement on foot to build an independent pipe line to the Gulf of Mexico, and there are a number of other conditions which are sure to cause a rapid rise in the price of crude oil during the next two years. The Uncle Sam Oil Company is not going to be caught in any such trap, and it's only good generalship and a determination to protect this company and put it where no power on earth can interfere with its onward successful march that bonds will be offered and sold and [illegible] tanks built forthwith and at least six million barrels of oil placed in storage.

Oil Trust Power Is Rapidly Waning.

Public sentiment in this country is in a state of determination that will secure results from one side of this nation to the other. The oil trust and their subsidiary hirelings are secretly scared to death right now. They are trying all kinds of maneuvers to check the oncoming storm of righteous indignation and certain retribution for the crimes they have committed, the men and enterprises they have unjustly attacked and ruined and the same blacking methods they will continue if they can. But the conservative, well-to-do middle class of the nation is after them and they will be stopped. It is [illegible] the demagogue which is going to halt this brigade of millionaire anarchists, but it is the thousands of men of means who do not believe in abusing the power of wealth and the broad American spirit of justice which, like a giant battering ram, is smashing down their illegal bulwarks and hypocritical defences. Any man who knows anything at all needs only to place his ear to the ground and see and hear what is coming. Read the report of the interstate commerce commission made just a week ago by seven of the ablest and most incorruptible statesmen in America. Read the warning given by the President of the United States in person to two of these millionaire brigands at a dinner in Washington last week. Read the proceedings of the United States court in St. Louis where the government is applying for the dissolution of the trust and for receivers for its properties. Look at Missouri, which is passing an anti-discrimination law to draw the claws of the trust, and look at Oklahoma, the newest state in the Union, reading opposition to the trust into her constitution. Look at the conference of the governors of the seven Western states which will probably be in session at Topeka, Kas., while you are reading this advertisement to agree on uniform laws to curb the rapacity of the trust and protect and foster independent competition. The fact is the oil trust of to-day is very similarly constituted to the Russian government for any man who is familiar with conditions, especially in the Central West, knows that fully 50 per cent. of their employes despise their methods and would leave their criminal masters to-morrow if they could earn a decent living in their chosen avocation elsewhere. Say what you please, the Uncle Sam Oil Company holds the key to the situation. It has an opportunity which never was and never will be up to another organization like it again probably in the world. The trust is going down hill, and if you have good, red blood in your veins and really want to do something practical to help a good, faithful, hard-working young army of Uncle Sam stockholders at this very opportune time, strike sledge hammer blows for success and keep this trust outfit on the toboggan slide, put your shoulder to the wheel, send your check or draft by return mail for a block of these bonds, ask your neighbor to do the same, and if you live anywhere in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois or Oklahoma form an independent oil organization in your locality and subscribe for enough of these bonds to secure the establishment of an independent distributing station in your town, demand that your merchants handle independent oil and see that they do it, and solicit your neighbors to use none other. No one can deny but that the Uncle Sam organization is a movement backed solely by the people. It's your fight as well as ours. Be practical and do your part to help out and even if these trust criminals should be able to evade some of the laws of the land, they will find out that they are up against the real thing—trade competition—on Western soil and be shown that they are not the only pebble on the beach after all. Remember, while you are doing this thousands of others will be doing the same thing. Hence great results, and the oil trust will slip a few more cogs toward deserved punishment for their misdeeds.

Where Tank Farms Will Be Built.

From the sale of these bonds the Uncle Sam Company will be enabled to complete pipe lines, enlarge all three refineries, build the balance of four hundred main distributing stations, also build large paraffine plant at Atchison by the river refinery, and lubricating works at the Tulsa Uncle Sam refinery, and build one hundred and ten (110) fifty-five thousand barrel steel storage tanks and secure necessary tank farm locations. One of these tank farms will be near the Tulsa Uncle Sam refinery, accessible to the very highest grades of oil containing valuable lubricants, and within a very few miles of the Glenn oil pool, which is now producing over twenty-five thousand barrels of oil per day. Another of the Uncle Sam tank farms will be near one of the large producing properties of the company, viz.: Eleven hundred acre lot 43, Osage, near Bartlesville, I. T. Another of these tank farms will be at the Uncle Sam Cherryvale refinery; another one on the main trunk Uncle Sam pipe line near the Piqua pumping station, accessible to the Chanute and Humboldt oil fields, and a very large Uncle Sam tank farm will be established on the main trunk pipe line just south of the Kaw river, in Shawnee county, Kansas, within eyesight of the dome of the capitol building of Kansas, where the worldwide oil fight was successfully inaugurated over two years ago. This tank farm will be used to store Kansas oil principally, where it will be accessible for distribution for fuel purposes to all of northern, western and central Kansas as Uncle Sam oil burners are installed and the demand increases. Also by laying a pipe line less than ten miles the company will be in reach of the great fuel markets of the two Kansas Citys by a light barge line down the Kaw river from Lawrence. In the event this company was ever hard pressed for funds it could very easily unload a half million barrels of crude oil for fuel purposes to the big packers and other heavy fuel users in the two Kansas Citys on very short notice. So when you buy these bonds you will know that this company will not only keep a large cash surplus on hand to meet interest promptly and create a sinking fund, but it will also have several millions dollars' worth of absolutely marketable and merchantable property almost within a stone's throw of a ready market all the time. Another one of the tank farms will be established close to the Atchison Uncle Sam refinery on the banks of the Missouri river. Likewise this oil in storage will be accessible to the great fuel using manufacturers that for thousands of miles line the banks of the Missouri and Mississippi rivers. Oil is just like so much cash when in storage and accessible to such outlets as these, for it will cost but very little to barge oil up and down the Missouri and into the Mississippi and its tributaries. Bonds backed by such property mean that the interest will not only be paid promptly, but that the principal will be met. Times may get hard and money markets close, but oil is a necessity. People will buy it to furnish light for their firesides as long as they will spend a penny to buy anything. At the present ridiculously low prices every barrel of this six million barrels of crude oil which this company will be able to place in storage through the sale of these bonds can be sold most any time for fuel purposes up and down the two big rivers, as before stated, at prices practically three times the cost of the crude oil in the oil fields. As the work on these tank farms progresses and as the millions of barrels of this oil are placed in storage, the bonds which are offered to you now at par, together with a bonus of one-half share of par stock, will not only be worth their full face value, but the stock will be worth at least $2 per share.

Cost of a Single Fifty-five Thousand Barrel Tank.

It is very hard to carry through any large moneyed transaction in the United States without running up against some dummy tool director of the trust or one of its subsidiary corporations. One of the reasons why the trust has maintained the monopoly it has enjoyed is that capital has been afraid to enter into competition with it. In fact, we think there are very few men of large means who would individually care to call down on their heads the ridicule, abuse, annoyance and blackmailing methods of the trust and its hirelings. But by appealing to the general public, as the Uncle Sam Oil Company has done from its beginning, and banding together nearly ten thousand loyal shareholders from every part of the country, it has been able thus far to raise the necessary funds to build up this enterprise to its present height of success. In other words, by combining the thousands of free and independent citizens who believe in a free market and fair play and who consider the boast brazenly made by the oil trust gang that they are even bigger than the government as a personal affront, this company can, by securing a thousand dollars here and another thousand somewhere else, very easily raise all of the money needed to build up a giant independent enterprise capable of securing and maintaining the oil trade of the Central West, and under present conditions and the feeling of the people can practically drive the trust out of the home Western Central States. Uncle Sam Company should have at least a four years' supply of crude oil ahead all the time. It is only good, practical business sense to build these storage tanks, which will last a lifetime and will be worth more in fifteen years from now than it costs to-day to build them. There are tens of thousands of individuals in the United States who can very easily mail their checks or draft for fifteen thousand dollars and secure fifteen thousand dollars' worth of bonds at par. And in so doing enable the Uncle Sam Company to erect one fifty-five thousand barrel steel storage tank for every such remittance that arrives. Why not send in your draft for fifteen thousand dollars and secure these gilt-edged bonds and the bonus in the stock and help push this good work along? If this company was one of the subsidiaries of the trust or was managed by men or backed by stockholders who were not fighting the unfair methods of the trust we would not offer these bonds to the general public in this way. The company reserves the right to reject any remittance by returning the same to the sender. We do not want anybody either as a stockholder or a bondholder who is not an independent citizen heart and soul. The company is in touch with over twenty thousand investors by special letter reports, while there will be a large majority of nine thousand stockholders working to place these bonds long before you read this announcement, and the chances are that more than half of these bonds will be taken by this band of loyal stockholders, a large majority of whom joined this company as much out of principle as they did for financial gain. This announcement will appear in nearly two hundred of the principal newspapers of the United States and Canada and will be read by over twenty million people. The rate of interest on these bonds is high. But the company can use the money where it can make from three to five hundred per cent. If you buy the bonds you will not only get your interest promptly, but you will get your money back for the entire principal probably within four years, and the stock which you will have left by that time will not be worth less than two dollars per share, or double your original investment after you receive your money back with interest. Can you afford to turn down such an investment? While you are hesitating what to do hundreds of investors will be telegraphing their reservations for bonds, while remittances by mail will run into the thousands of dollars every day. And every dollar will be honestly invested immediately in steel equipment and for oil to make the company just that much stronger. If you cannot spare the funds to subscribe enough money to build one of these big storage tanks, why not raise a club among your friends and a number of you subscribe together for such an amount? Or you can send in your check or draft for from fifty to one thousand dollars and together with the hundreds of others which will be coming in, added together, will answer the same purpose.

1,100-acre lot 43, oil rights	250,000,000
171 miles main trunk pipe line and laterals	365,000.00
All other oil holdings and leases	165,000.00
Sixty-eight distributing stations and equipment thus far completed	135,000.00
Manufactured and crude oil storage and transit	120,000.00
Thirty two tank cars	30,000.00
Forty seven acres land, Wyandotte County Kansas	6,000.00
Money subscribed on contract stock already allotted from treasury, approximately	35,000.00
Office furniture and fixtures at Tulsa, Bartlesville, Cherryvale, Kansas City, Atchison	6,000.00
Cash on hand	12,000.00
Total	$1,469,000.00

Of the above properties, with the exception of approximately $18,000, including pipe line notes and temporary loans and other items not due, these bonds are a first lien. Out of the first fifty thousand dollars received for these bonds pipe line notes and all other claims will be paid promptly. The fifty-seven acres of land mentioned in the above statement is excepted in the mortgage for the reason that the company is offering this land for sale at six thousand dollars. It was purchased for $4,000 to build refinery No. 2, but the plant was afterward built at Atchison, where a location was secured for the building of the plant. The company has no use for this land in its operating business, hence it will sell the same and turn the proceeds into the treasury, and it is excepted from the mortgage backing the bonds for that reason. Eleven hundred acre lot 43 is also excepted in the mortgage for the reason that these oil rights are under the supervision of the Interior Department of the United States, and when certain restrictions, which are sure to be removed within the next few years, are removed this property will also be a pledge for the payment of the bonds. Even under the present restriction all oil from this property when it gets into the pipe lines of the company, as soon as the royalty due the Indians is paid, is covered by the bonds. The mortgage covers all property hereafter to be acquired by the company.

Everything in this transaction is being done legally and right and for the full and perfect protection of every bondholder and stockholder in the company. Statements will be issued regularly showing the money received and where it is placed, as there is no speculation about buying pipe lines and building steel storage tanks and purchasing oil.

What Will Be Back of Bonds and Stock When Bonds Are Sold.

A mortgage on any property for 40 per cent. of its value is considered good. As a rule such loans are made from 4 to 5 per cent. These bonds bear 6 per cent., and when they are sold and the property which they will enable this company to own and operate and which will be pledged as a first lien to pay off these bonds and pay dividends on the stock based on a conservative estimated value will be as follows:

Pipe lines, lateral pipe lines, all three refineries increased in capacities, paraffine plant, lubricating works, 400 distributing stations, 150 tank cars, river boats and barge equipment, oil wells, leases and all oil and gas rights, office fixtures and all properties, excepting storage tanks and oil	$3,500,000.00
Tank farms and connections and (110) one hundred and ten 55,000-barrel steel storage tanks	2,000,000.00
Six million barrels of oil, with the company in a position and with facilities to manufacture and market the same	18,000,000.00
Cash reserve which will soon be built up and always maintained after all bonds are sold	300,000.00
Total	$23,800,000.00

By the time these properties are all completed and the oil storage built up to six million barrels and the whole properties of the Uncle Sam Oil Company up to the estimated value as above set out, nearly TWENTY-FOUR MILLION DOLLARS, there will not be more than from six to eight million shares of Uncle Sam stock outstanding, but even if there were ten million shares of stock outstanding, and the values as above set out were cut just half in two, the stock would then be worth more than one dollar per share, while the chances are a thousand to one that there will not be a share of this stock on the market under two dollars and a half per share by the time the properties are completed as before explained.

Denomination of Bonds.

These bonds are of the denominations of $50, $100, $200, $500 and $1,000, with interest at 6 per cent., payable annually. You are especially requested to positively bear in mind that these denominations can not be cut up, and in sending in your remittance remit for one of the exact denominations specified above.

Price of Bonds.

You can secure these bonds by sending in your check or draft for the par value of the bond, and for each thousand dollar bond purchased you will secure stock of the par value of $500. For a larger or a smaller amount of bonds the same proportion will prevail. Make check or draft or money order payable to THE UNCLE SAM OIL COMPANY and the bonds will be sent to you after they are properly signed and the seal of the company attached and registered with the trustee and will be sent to you by registered mail, as quickly as the clerks can reach your turn. Make remittance as per following schedule:

100 bond	100
200 bond	200
500 bond	500
1,000 bond	1,000
2,000 bond	2,000
5,000 bond	5,000
10,000 bond	10,000
15,000 bond	15,000
20,000 bond	20,000

Monthly Payment Offer.

The company, in maintaining its former record in making it possible for investors of limited means to join our company, offers these bonds in monthly payments as designated below. In sending in remittances to secure these bonds on monthly payments the company will send you receipt for the payments as you send them in. These payments must be met promptly, as the bonds reserved for you are bearing interest continually, and on receipt of last payment bonds will be promptly sent you. Remit on following schedule:

Bond	First payment	Four monthly payments each.
$ 50.00	$ 11.00	$ 11.00
100.00	22.00	22.00
200.00	44.00	44.00
500.00	110.00	110.00
1,000.00	220.00	220.00

In Conclusion.

This company is under the same management to-day that it was at the beginning, nearly two years ago. Practical men are at the head of every department, and everything is on systematic, economical basis. The refineries are in operation, the oil wells are being pumped, the pipe lines are delivering oil for the refineries, and the scores of distributors are delivering oil daily to thousands of customers. The company is putting up a winning fight and growing stronger every hour. The men who subscribed the first money to start the Uncle Sam Oil Company were native Kansans and pioneer developers in the Kansas oil field, who, when the oil trust boycotted the Kansas oil fields two years ago, either had to sit idly down and see their properties confiscated and their little savings practically stolen or make a fight. Like the majority of people, they accepted the latter, and have been putting up the best they have had in store since they commenced. This effort is being carried forward in the best of faith, and in selling these bonds they will be sold at par, and every dollar received will go to build up this company and to place it where it can handle its great enterprise and secure and maintain an independent outlet for Kansas-Territory oil and place it on the market by honorable methods, satisfactory to both producer and consumer, and make good returns for every stockholder and in time pay off the bondholders and at the same time respect and obey the laws of the land. If you want to help a worthy cause and encourage an honorable effort help us now, not next month or next year, but to-day, so this company can rush to completion those big storage tanks and other construction and make it possible for Uncle Sam Company to place in storage these six million barrels of oil which will be like powder in the dry to protect the interests of the stockholders in the future. The quicker these bonds are sold the quicker this great work will be completed, and the quicker an aggressive fight can be carried on in every state in the Central West against the trust. The company solicits the most searching investigation either by visiting the properties or calling at the main offices where all the personal information available the officers of the company will be glad to furnish to every investor who seeks the same in good faith. You can mail remittance at once or write for further particulars.

PRACTICAL TEACHING KEYNOTE AT BOSTON EVENING SCHOOLS

Pupils in Nurses' Garb Learn How to Bandage Wounds and Care for Sick; Young Mechanics Ply the Trades

Bookkeepers Taught So That at Graduation They May Take Up Commercial Pursuits Fully Equipped for Work

Practical studies, the kind that men, women, girls and boys can use at once in their everyday life, are now being pursued in Boston night schools, thereby distinguishing from the night schools in every other town and city in the United States.

(Photographs by Boston American Staff Photographer)

Two Classes in the Boston Evening Schools, Showing Practical Methods of Teaching Used.

The regular course of forty-seven studies is still followed, but now the pupils are learning physics, physiology and hygiene.

Director of Evening Schools Charles M. Lamprey is so pleased with the interest shown in this departure among his pupils and the practical good, the results of which are already apparent, that he has determined to extend the courses in both evening and vacation schools.

Experiment Work Utilized.

Illustrative experiment work has been substituted for dry and uninteresting plodding, where nothing but the abstract is conned from the school books, and a sight of the classes at work in the Central Evening High School in Montgomery street, where the new methods are now pursued, is strikingly convincing of the rapid advance that is being made over the ordinary methods in teaching.

There young women and girls in the garb of nurses are making a practical study of physiology and hygiene, and so many of them attend that the school room at times resembles a ward in a hospital minus the patients.

These classes are instructed by a practicing physician, who is also an instructor in Harvard Medical School and a trained hospital nurse, who assists in the class room demonstrations.

The classes are shown how to bandage wounds and to apply first aid in the event no surgeon is at hand. Demonstrations are given to show how to care for patients, to take temperatures, pulse and respiration, and the application of poultices. The dressing of wounds and the ministering of medicines are all demonstrated right before the eyes of the pupils.

Taught How to "Do Things."

In the class rooms where physics are taught, books are much to the rear. There, as in the rooms where nursing and physiology and hygiene are taught, the pupils learn how to do things themselves. They are taught the theory, it is true, but right alongside the practice. They will remember why things are thus and so when they see them done and are made to do them themselves.

Here in the physics classes are students from stores, offices, factories, counting rooms and workshops. They do their own work. They string their own electric light wires, make their own batteries and make their own telegraphic apparatus.

One student has become so proficient that he has made a complete set of wireless telegraphic instruments that do the work just as well as the apparatus turned out by the professional manufacturers.

Practical instruction is being given nightly to large classes of young men and women who are anxious to learn typewriting. Here in these classes, which are constantly growing larger, are scores of young men and young women from the stores and workshops of Boston. They want to improve their condition in the world, and they want to be experts in some useful and promising vocation.

Practical bookkeeping, commonsense bookkeeping, the kind that one can take right out with him from the school and use the next day to the satisfaction of the employer, is being taught to large classes by men who have grown gray as bookkeepers.

All this is just part of the good that Boston's advanced evening schools are doing for its citizens. More and better things are to follow.

MME. SAMAROFF WINS OVATION AT SYMPHONY.

Plays Tchaikowsky Piano Concerto with Inspiring Abandon and Brilliancy

FIRST HUB HEARING OF TINEL TONE PICTURES

By Kent Perkins.

Barring the short opening number, Dukas's scherzo, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," a fetching bit of grotesquerie based on Goethe's ballad of that name, the fourteenth symphony concert of the season last night was a full feast of glowing melody and full-voiced harmony, modern in spirit and form, yet unspotted by the straining after novelty for novelty's sake that some "modern" composers use to cloak poverty of imagination and paucity in inspiration.

There were only two pieces besides that of Dukas, but they were both long and full of varied musical meat, so that neither quantity nor quality was lacking.

Mme. Olga Samaroff, whose presence has come to be exceedingly welcome to Boston audiences, played Tschaikowsky's piano concerto No. 1 in B flat minor. She was a bit nervous, but this showed only trifling'y in her manner and did not in the least mar the beauty, poesy and brilliance of her work. She played with an abandon that was inspiriting and she overcame the terrific difficulties of the piece with an ease that was astonishing.

In passages whose swiftness was that of lightning her music was like sparks of living fire, shining, clear, seemingly a continuous gleaming tone. Yet it was composed of separate notes, struck by fingers ... not once missing their mark. ... she was greeted with hearty and ... applause, both from audience and orchestra, and was thus called forth several times.

Edgar Tinel's three symphonic pictures, Op. 21, from Corneille's tragedy "Polyeucte," performed for the first time in Boston, formed the last part of the programme. The three pictures are overture, Pauline's dream, festival in the temple of Jupiter.

The music is a pictorial, grand ... tinged with tragedy, and probably affected by the Roman theme and its classic handling by Corneille, yet it is strongly human and rich in emotional appeal. There are moments of graceful beauty in the two dances in the temple. There are also intervals of considerable dullness, in which the convulsive shivers and manufactured thrills remind one too forcibly and vividly of the Bowery and its melodrama. The orchestra and Dr. Muck gave the work the benefit of a performance that was magnificent in force and finish.

COMING MUSICAL EVENTS OF INTEREST TO ALL BOSTONIANS

The next Symphony Concerts on Friday and Saturday bring the most important novelty that Boston has had in several years, Richard Strauss's "Sinfonia Domestica," on which the orchestra has been at work for several weeks. Until his opera "Salome" was given to the public Strauss had never written any work which caused so much controversy as this "Sinfonia Domestica." Its purport is to illustrate certain phases of the composer's home life and deals with himself, his wife and his baby, as well as certain female relatives.

The patrons of the Symphony concerts are most urgently requested to be in their seats promptly at the beginning of the public rehearsal on Friday and of the concert on Saturday evening. The "Sinfonia Domestica" lasts in the neighborhood of fifty minutes and is played without a pause, so that those who come late will not be admitted to the hall until the intermission. Ossip Gabrilowitsch, a favorite pianist here, will be the soloist. He will play Brahms's Concerto No. 2 in B flat major, opus 83.

C. A. Ellis, Madame Melba's manager, is in negotiations, the result of which promises for Madame Melba's appearance in Symphony Hall on Saturday afternoon, March 9, the most interesting concert of a special nature that has been given in Boston in many years. Madame Melba will be the principal attraction, but it is Mr. Ellis's purpose to have other features, which would be most acceptable to the public in any event.

The Kneisel String Quartet gives the fourth of its season's concerts at Chickering Hall on the evening of Tuesday, February 19. An unusually brilliant audience is expected.

For the fourth concert of the Boston Symphony Quartet in Chickering Hall on Monday evening, February 25, Professor Willy Hess has arranged a more than usually interesting programme. The assisting artist will be Ossip Gabrilowitsch.

Felix Fox will have the assistance of Professor Willy Hess at his third chamber recital of the season in Steinert Hall. It is to be on Wednesday evening, March 6.

The action of the Handel and Haydn Society in giving a miscellaneous programme at the mid-Winter concert has attracted unusual attention. The society will have the assistance of Mme. Schumann-Heink, Emilio de Gogorza and Edward Johnson. There will be a large orchestra, and H. G. Tucker will be at the organ. All will be under the direction of Emil Mollenhauer.

Gertrude Peppercorn, the English pianist, reached this country last week, and makes her first appearance at the beginning of her second American tour, at Jordan Hall next Tuesday evening, under Manager Mudgett's direction.

Charles S. Johnson will give a piano recital in Steinert Hall on Wednesday evening, February 27.

John F. Braun, tenor, of Philadelphia, who gained favor here last season as a soloist with the Handel and Haydn Society, will give a song recital at Potter Hall on the afternoon of Saturday the 23d inst.

Stephen Townsend's song recital will take place Thursday evening, February 28, in Steinert Hall. Max Heinrich will play the accompaniments.

A festival mandolin concert is to be given in Jordan Hall Tuesday evening, March 12, under the direction of G. L. Lansing and H. F. Odell. Among those who will appear at the concert are the Boston Operatic Society of sixty voices, the Boston Ideal Club, Lansing's Mandolin Orchestra of thirty-five members, and an orchestra of 200 mandolins, guitars and banjos.

FRISCO READY TO YIELD ALL ON JAPANESE ISSUE

Mayor Schmitz Calls on President Alone and Negotiates Surrender.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The San Francisco authorities now here are prepared to surrender everything on the Japanese school question. They will do whatever the President wants.

Mayor Schmitz negotiated the surrender himself, when, leaving the rest of the delegation behind, he went to the White House and saw the President.

Mayor Schmitz, now under indictment in San Francisco for grafting, evidently assumes that if he does what the President wants he will in a sense have the Presidential support, or at least will enjoy the prestige of one who has, with the President, helped bring about a settlement of the question, no matter how. He expects political rehabilitation as a result, and to be buttressed by public sentiment when his trial occurs.

Pretended Mystery.

This afternoon the entire delegation called at the White House. Much mystery was thrown about the conference and a pretence was made that no agreement was reached. It may be stated that this was done merely to give the impression that the President and the San Francisco champions are negotiating.

Mayor Schmitz, after his private morning talk gave an interview to the Evening Star of this city. He there disclosed what had been in the substance agreed upon. The San Francisco authorities will abolish the Oriental school and when that is done he said, the Japanese would be entitled to admission to the white schools.

The effort is making to convince California that in return for this ... the President will make a treaty with Japan which will provide for the exclusion of the Japanese laborers. As explained in last night's dispatch, the school question is not related diplomatically to the exclusion question.

Japan has already conceded her willingness to make a treaty providing for Japanese coolie exclusion, and, furthermore, it is understood is willing to have the treaty ... that government enactment shall be made to carry out the provisions of the treaty. The forcing of San Francisco to her knees on the school matter is purely due to the administration's determination to have the President's policy in this matter accepted and indorsed by California.

President Roosevelt had two executive conferences on the Japanese question today. This morning Mayor Schmitz went alone to the White House and talked with the President, and this afternoon the Mayor and the entire school board of San Francisco were in conference an hour and a half with the President and Secretary of State Root. None of the California Senators or Representatives were present at the conference.

It was announced that no agreement between the San Francisco officials and the President was reached, the only information made public being that the Japanese exclusion question and the admission of Japanese pupils to the San Francisco schools were discussed at length. Mayor Schmitz and his school board will meet the President again Monday afternoon and after that conference it is extremely probable that the understanding will be announced.

Board in Secret Session.

Immediately after leaving the White House the San Franciscans went into executive session at their hotel to discuss among themselves the proposition which they admit the President has offered to California.

"Did the President propose anything that is impossible of acceptance by the school board?" Mayor Schmitz and the school directors were asked.

"No," the Mayor responded, speaking officially for himself and his subordinates. "We talked the whole Japanese question over and listened to the President and Secretary Root. We will take to-morrow to talk the situation over between ourselves and on Monday, when we meet the President again, an official statement will be issued, I presume. We are bound by the President not to disclose the details of the conference nor can we make public just what the President proposes."

REAL ESTATE MARKET HAS BOOM DESPITE STORM

Transfer of Land at Corner of Washington and State Streets for New Ten-Story Building.

The stormy weather of the past week had little effect upon the real estate market, and the number of transactions was up to the average of any week since the first of the year. Sales of vacant land and farm property were in the majority. In most cases purchasers of vacant land bought for improvement.

An important event of the week was the transfer of a plot of land at the corner of Washington and State streets, on which the purchasers will erect a modern ten-story steel and stone office building.

The property includes the premises Nos. 212 to 226 Washington street, inclusive, and extends down State street to the structure on the corner of Devonshire.

The assessed value of the land and buildings now in this area is $90,000. The trustees now taking full control are Walter Hunnewell, Henry S. Howe and Charles Head.

Brighton Sales.

In suburban property, one of the most interesting transactions of the week was the sale of nineteen lots of land in Brighton, containing 113,000 square feet, assessed for $8,500, effected through the Edward T. Harrington Company. The purchasers are F. R. and G. M. Vail, builders, who have built extensively in Brookline and Arlington. They will erect a score of two-family houses on the property. The grantor is George S. Burton.

Through the same office, deed has gone to record conveying the well-known Dwight estate, 11 Circuit street, Roxbury, to Marks Harris. The property consists of a large twelve-room house and 9,600 feet of land, all assessed for $6,700. A three family house will be erected on the corner lot in a short time.

In Winthrop Highlands, this company have sold for Henry F. Woods of Boston a lot of land on Grover avenue, containing 7,108 feet, assessed for $1,800, to Fred A. Warren of Leominster; and for Louis Minks of West Somerville, 12,500 feet of land on Quincy avenue, to Frank D. Warren of Boston. Both purchasers buy for immediate improvement.

Elmhurst Farm Sold.

"Elmhurst Farm," formerly the Batchelder and De Bussigny farm, by agreements signed through the Edward T. Harrington Company, has been sold, together with all the farm machinery, buildings and household effects, to a New York agriculturist who will use the property for the production of milk along modern lines. The place is situated on Haverhill street, North Reading, nine miles from Salem, and contains 204 acres.

Routine Sales.

Other sales reported by this company are as follows:

An estate on Dent street, near the West Roxbury station, including a modern 10-room dwelling and 4,000 feet of land, assessed for $3,300, by K. H. Rooney to C. M. Dall; three very desirable building lots, containing 20,000 square feet, on Maple street, Walpole, to M. L. Schirmer, who will erect a bungalow in the Spring; the W. H. Varrell farm on Main street, Scituate Centre, containing fifty-four acres and several structures, to one who buys for occupancy; Nos. 20 and 22 Webster place, West Newton, including a modern two-family house and 6,600 feet of land, assessed for $4,200, to Samuel Dale, who buys for occupancy, and the well known Read estate on North street, Medfield, containing thirty-two acres, and including an old colonial ten-room house, and other structures.

The company has also leased for Fred F. Squires, executor of the estate of Nancie B. Kimball, the residence and stable No. 13 Winter street, Arlington, to Mrs. Bernard Bize, who takes an option on the property to purchase at expiration of lease.

Jackson A. Hall of Cambridge has taken title to a twenty-acre farm in Foxboro, with the usual set of farm buildings, stock and tools, formerly owned by Michael Stanolones.

The above sale was negotiated through Breck's Real Estate Agency, as was also the signing of agreements for the sale of the Henry Tornock estate in Holliston. As in the other case, the purchaser will occupy for a home. His name is withheld.

South End Deals.

During the week just ended Clarence W. Rowley, trustee, conveyed to John Beck, title to Nos. 203-209 Shawmut avenue, corner of Dover street, assessed for $16,800, Percival A. Evans being the broker.

The property No. 8 Oxford street, near Essex street, has been transferred by William A. Rich to Robert E. Goodwin. The whole property is assessed for $9,500.

Isaac Cohen has bought from Maria C. McKey the brick building, No. 38 Dover street, near Emerald street, assessed for $6,800. Other sales reported are No. 26 Aldworth street, Boston, No. 47 Clifton street, Roslindale, No. 47 Walker street, West Roxbury, all through the office of R. S. Barrows; Nos. 10 and 12 Rogers Park, Dorchester, and No. 85 Elmo street, Dorchester, the latter through the office of Charles Addison Malley.

P. F. Leland reports the sale of the E. Booth farm in Chester, Vt., and the farm of Olive D. Kelley on Grove street, Putnam, Ct.

MacCorry & Burns have sold for Frank H. Grant the nine-acre poultry farm in Reading to a Boston business man, and the E. M. Horan estate, No. 302 Folsom avenue, Melrose, to J. Warren Sidmore.

TWO MEN KILLED BY FAMISHED WOLVES

Spirit Lake, Ia., Feb. 9.—Word is received that W. H. Crabtree of Montgomery, Ia., with O. R. Cures Drunkards

Mary's Miracle.

The day of working miracles
I'm sure is far from past,
And now to show you what I mean
I'll tell you of the last.
A cure that happened right to me,
For I was part of it, you see.

You see, my husband used to lead
A lost life, a living death,
A ... of the hopeless kind—
... scarce a sober breath
I ever drew, and hope and pride
Were lost to me and nearly all beside.

One friend alone was left—my wife,
God bless her ev'ry hour!
She saved me from a drunkard's grave,
And whiskey's wicked power.
Just how she saved me you shall see—
This is the way she told it me.

When one was almost dead within
My faithful, constant breast,
She read of Dr. Haines' Cure,
Then without stay or rest,
She sent for one Trial Sample free,
And gave it unbeknown to me!

I drank of it at ev'ry meal—
I ... it in my bread,
While Mary watched me anxiously,
But ne'er a word she said;
Until one day I stopped to think,
That I had lost my love for drink!

When, quite unconscious I was cured,
My Mary told me all;
I ... the very act of God,
A modern miracle,
I call it this, because my wife
And Haines' Cure had saved my life.

And now my little story's done,
My ev'ry word is true,
And what this treatment did for me,
The same 'twill do for you;
And wives and mothers—one and all,
Take heart of Mary's Miracle.

You will ... books and testimonials to prove how ... have been saved.

Beneath thy chastening rod,
One must be first, but let us all
Prepare to meet our God.

Roxbury Storage Salesrooms

WHERE PIANOS ARE SACRIFICED

The Piano Trust Dealers have been telling to everybody calling at their warerooms the untruth that we do not sell Pianos on credit—We have demonstrated to the public that we have Trust Pianos to sell and sell them at Prices that make the Trust sit up and pay attention. Remember, you who are looking at high priced Pianos down town, we will sell you the same piano at a much less price and on the fairest credit basis. No matter what the Piano Trust Dealer says about us—Do not believe him—At once, without your judgment until you have seen his pianos in our storage salesrooms and read the cut prices on our Sacrifice Tag—And then on top of our low price we will sell you on better credit terms than any Trust Piano House in Boston or New England.

Why Pay Double Just Because You Buy a Trust Piano On Credit—You're Easy If You Do

3 Months Piano Lessons FREE

This is our move against the Piano Trust piano teachers. If you buy your piano of us next week we will give you 3 months Lessons Free. It will be the finest Piano instruction that money can procure.

If you are thinking of buying a CHICKERING PIANO (and it is a good one) see ours just once before buying. If you are thinking of buying a VOSE PIANO (another good one) see ours just once before buying. No matter which make of piano you are considering buying it would be wise for you to try us on price. Remember, ON PRICE. We sell you the same piano with the same guarantee—but at a DIFFERENT price. It's up to you. We have many good pianos at low prices not advertised.

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain, always a money-saver. The very nature of business, as the public knows, is one of sacrifice. The business here is not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store down town where they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where they sell their pianos HEAVILY on the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano loaf around on the floor of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes in in DUE TIME, a Sacrifice tag is clipped on to it, be it high grade, low grade or middle grades, and it is sold to the first man or woman who wants it for the price marked on the tag—but a cent more or less. The selling price is made on the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' "Exceptional percentage" basis and is figured to let the accounts out clean and clear without regard to profit—so you can see easily by this statement how the sales must necessarily be sacrifices. Someone's loss is your gain.

Begin Now and learn the best paying business in the United States, salaries ranging from $25 TO $75 A WEEK, according to your ability. Our Road Driving and Repairing Course fits our students to drive, repair, demonstrate or sell any automobile. Hundreds of lucrative positions in all parts of the United States open for our graduates. Don't delay until the best positions are taken up. Join the oldest, largest and best automobile school in the United States. WE are the pioneers in the automobile school business, and have graduated and placed in positions more men than all other automobile schools. Don't be misled by alluring advertisements of schools that have no standing, but INVESTIGATE FOR YOURSELF and LOOK OUR PLANTS OVER. Remember that when you deal with our concern you are dealing with a reliable Corporation, chartered to do business under Commonwealth of Massachusetts. A GRADUATE of our Schools at Boston or Providence can RECEIVE a LICENSE to OPERATE a car in any State in the United States or Canada. We are the only automobile school that can secure such a license for our graduates. Being in close touch with all automobile manufacturers and owners, we are enabled to place a large number of our graduates in fine positions, paying $25 to $75 a week. Our price is the lowest that a first-class course can be obtained for at any reliable school.

OUR STUDENTS OUT FOR ROAD PRACTICE.

Remember, our school is open every DAY and EVENING throughout the entire year, and Road Driving lessons on the city streets are given every day, weather permitting. Spring classes now forming. Call and look over our Schools at 343 Tremont street, Boston, or at 26 Market street, Providence, and you will find at either place the most complete automobile schools in the country, with a full corps of capable and faithful instructors who devote their entire time to training our students so that they are competent to get a license and take one of these good paying positions. We teach on all three kinds of cars, steam, gasoline and electric. Remember, we are not here to-day and away to-morrow, but are an old, established concern; have the largest and best equipped automobile school in the United States. Do not invest your money in a school that has no established reputation, influence or financial backing behind it. Our references are as open as any bank. You can inquire about our financial standing of any newspaper or bank in the city of Boston or Providence. Every graduate of our school receives a Diploma, which shows to the automobile world that the graduate is a competent automobile operator, the same as a student graduating from Harvard or Yale College is proficient in medicine or law. Our graduates can be found in good positions in every State and territory throughout the United States and in many of the foreign countries. Chauffeurs earn $25 to $75 a week, repair men 60 cents an hour, salesmen $35 to $60 a week. Hundreds of positions waiting for competent men. We make a specialty of complete course by correspondence. YOUR FORTUNE Revealed Unerringly

By PROF. JOHN DIX,

Fellow of the Society of Science, Letters and Arts of London, England; have traveled extensively in South America, Europe, Africa and among the Arabs, Hindus, Parsees and Persians of the East; was a personal friend of Sir Richard Barton, the eminent English traveler, also the famous Sir Henry M. Stanley, the explorer of the Dark Continent; Sir Bartle Frere, English Governor of Bombay, India; Sir Tariah Topan, the renowned Hindoo merchant prince knighted by the late Queen Victoria; the Count d'Arpiou and other celebrities; have devoted years of study to occult lore, also planetary science and astrology. By long years of research the science of Astrology has become so well understood that it is possible by my system to make the proper and absolutely correct deductions necessary to obtain a correct horoscope or delineation of a person's life. To insure a successful and happy Future a full life horoscope is gradually becoming to be regarded as an absolute necessity. By having the horoscope a person knows what they will have to contend with through life, at what time sickness is liable to overtake them, the business best suited to them, the kind of person to marry, etc., etc. No Astrologer of the present day is more widely known than Prof. Dix of Boston, Massachusetts, and in investigation to learn the truth or falsity of the claims put forth for Astrology, one should naturally go to this head center. If it were necessary to prove the genuineness of his claims, Prof. Dix could show an interesting batch of correspondence. In his office would be found file after file of letters from those who had asked his advice and predictions for their future; in almost every instance these letters say that what he had foretold had come true; in one instance a letter would say that the legacy he had foretold had been received, in another that the business entered into on his advice had been successful, in a third that as a result of his careful reading of their stars and planets they had married happily. Prof. Dix says that the best way to prove the truth of Astrology as practiced by him is to give a trial reading to anyone who will write to him. He holds this offer open for 10 days. If interested, all you have to do is to write him, telling him your full name, state whether you are married or single, tell me the date of your birth and year and enclose a 2-cent stamp. The trial reading that I will send you will cover your whole affairs, and your future will be revealed to you like an open book. Don't delay. Write today. You little know what tomorrow may have in store for you. Your life reading will be sent you sealed and confidential. Let the World's Greatest Astrologer read your life as the stars reveal it and mystify you by its truths. Address Prof. JOHN DIX, Dept. 3, Lock Box 3216, Boston, Mass.

WHALING CITY MAY FAIL TO PAY NOTES OF $200,000.

Political Opponents of Mayor Hold Up Bond Issue, Also Debts Due Boston Brokers, Who May Bring Suits

New Bedford, Feb. 9.—Unless the City Council, at a special meeting next Monday night, votes to bond the floating indebtedness of $232,000, three of the city's notes, aggregating $200,000, due next week, will not be met, as Mayor Ashley positively refuses to cripple the city's various departments by depleting its treasury.

New Bedford is up against a financial crisis such as it never faced before. It has plenty of money in the treasury, but political discussion has tied the treasury in a knot, and the Boston brokers who handled the issue will bring suit against the city for payment on the notes.

Political Game Played.

The minority in the common council, representing former Mayor Thompson's wing of local politics, are obstructing the Mayor's scheme to bond the floating debt. They have repeatedly voted against the measure and say they will stick it out.

The Legislature last year gave the city authority to borrow $200,000 and Jose, Parker & Co. of Boston made the loan on three notes which are due next week. James L. Edwards, attorney for the brokers, has written to Mayor Ashley stating that if the notes were not met on the dates they were due that he would proceed immediately to collect.

To-night at a meeting of the Board of Aldermen the Mayor called it a "holdup," and said that the members of the council who were obstructing the passage of the bond issue were lacking in public spirit.

MAN WITHOUT CAPITAL MAY OWN HIS OWN HOME

Co-operative Bank Plan Makes the Toiler Independent

SCENES SHOWING REMARKABLE CHANGE IN THE WORLD OF REALTY.

These pictures illustrate the word "progress" in the matter of home building in the suburbs, although from the viewpoint of the farmer little "progress" is apparent in the razing of a typical New England old homestead and the rearing on its site of a $300,000 pile of stone like Cairmount Castle.

Unlike many of the gloomy, damp-smelling, unsanitary castles of the old world, this new-world castle is a beautiful and striking type of the up-to-date homes of the rich. Built by the late Francis B. Hayes, its most recent occupant was the late Henry Pfaff.

The original old homestead dozed in lonely grandeur. Its modern successor, which has been placed in the hands of the Edward T. Harrington Company for sale, is surrounded by streets in the finest residential part of Lexington.

Even a Dollar a Month Gives Shareholder as Much Voice in Shaping the Investments as Largest Owner of Stock

MUCH curious information regarding local real estate is to be gleaned by the patient investigator who cares to browse among the books of the Board of Assessors.

Here he will learn, for instance, that the highest priced strip of land in the United States is at the south corner of Washington and Winter streets, where a lot containing 1,503 square feet is assessed at $371,500. This assessed valuation works out at about $90 a square foot, or $8,276,444 per acre—nearly $40 a square foot more than the next highest price strip of land in the country, which is in the heart of the financial district of New York city.

He will also learn that the highest assessed block in Boston is the one bounded by Washington, Summer, Chauncy and Avon streets. Exclusive of land values, it is worth $8,000,000. New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Newark, N. J., have higher priced blocks than this. New York has several valued at $10,000,000 and a few at $25,000,000.

Where Boston Falls Behind.

Such facts, however, are but of fleeting consequence to the wage earner, and fade away as trivialities in the presence of the important, and, as far as the writer knows, hitherto unpublished, fact that compared with the official statistics of house-owning householders in other large cities of the United States, the house-owning householders of Boston march at the very head of the procession, while those of Philadelphia take the rear.

In Philadelphia, according to the official returns for the present year, 80 per cent. of the householders own their own homes. That is why the Quaker City feels that it has a right to call itself "the City of Homes."

When Boston's backwardness in the home-owning industry was brought to the attention of one of the oldest and largest real estate operators in the city he said:

"There's no reason in the world why Boston shouldn't keep pace with Philadelphia in the number of home-owners instead of lagging behind as it does. Wage earners here are just as industrious, just as frugal and just as ambitious as those of Philadelphia.

Urge Tenants to Action.

"Facts, figures, maps, illustrations and arguments such as those set down in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN from week to week cannot fail to convince the most obtuse that judicious investment in real estate is the safest of all investments and the producer of the largest returns. But the trouble seems to be that most of the people who want to own homes don't know the right way to go about it.

"From rent day to rent day they waste time in dreaming about the advantages of owning a home instead of getting about and buying one. To do that, they imagine they must be capitalists, and that's what keeps many of them dreaming instead of doing.

"Of course they learn from the advertisements in the newspapers that homes, like most other things, can be bought on the instalment plan. But the very word 'instalment' scares them off. On general principles they bar doing business along that line. The day may come, they say, when they won't be able to meet the monthly instalment, and then all the money they've paid in for a home will be lost.

Co-operative Bank Pan.

"As a matter of fact, isn't all the money they're paying now in rent similarly lost? What do they get in return for rent? Just shelter—nothing more. What do they get if they buy a home on the instalment plan and live in it? Something more than shelter, for every instalment paid brings them nearer to ownership. And if the hard times do come, and they are unable to meet their obligations, they find themselves no worse off financially than if they had been paying rent all along.

"However, there's a far better and easier and more economical plan than that for the poor man who wants to be his own landlord. It is the co-operative bank plan. Ex-Governor Brackett was the father of it. Thousands of families in Massachusetts owe the fact that they own the homes in which they live to the energetic efforts of the old ex-Governor.

"Co-operative banks are safe. The law permits them to lend money only on ample realty. Their financial officers are under ample bonds. As fast as the money is received each month it is immediately paid out on new loans or for matured or retired shares, so that no large fund ever accumulates.

State Examines Banks.

"The securities, books and general management of these compulsory savings banks are examined every year by commissioners appointed by the Commonwealth and at least twice each year by expert accountants selected by the board of directors.

"Any person who buys a share in a co-operative bank becomes a member of the corporation and a stockholder and has a voice at the meetings. In one such local bank I have in mind the regular payment of one dollar a month buys one share; $5, five shares; $10, ten shares, and so on up to $25, which is the limit, for no person can hold more than twenty five shares in a co-operative bank, according to the law.

"As each share if worth $200, it is plain that if no profits were added, it would take two hundred months to pay up a share. But at the end of each three months, and before the issue of a new series of shares, the accounts are made up and the profits credited to every member of the corporation. These credits help 'mature' the shares and reduce the number of monthly payments surprisingly.

"Shareholders who need money to buy real estate, irrespective of how much or how little they have paid into the treasury, have the right to borrow from the bank sums ranging from $50 to $5,000, the bank accepting as security a first mortgage on the proposed purchase, which its real estate experts have investigated and approved.

"The process of borrowing is this: When the president or other authorized officer announces that there is a certain amount of money on hand 'for sale' and invites bids for it, the borrower bids that much rate of interest per annum as he is willing to pay in monthly instalments for the use of the cash. Bids begin at five per cent, and rise by a quarter of one per cent. Usually, however, there is money enough on hand to supply the needs of all who wish to borrow, and nobody has to bid more than five per cent. for his loan. The object in 'selling' the money is to establish the priority of right for a loan among the shareholders.

"Of course, no institution doing business on a sound basis can loan the full value of a piece of property. The co-operative bank is no exception to this rule. It is the general policy of these banks to consider a judicious 'margin' a lot as a sufficient margin on which to advance the cash necessary to build a house. If the borrower desires to buy a house already built, the co-operative bank usually lends him seventy-five per cent. of a conservative valuation.

Advantage to Borrowers.

"One great advantage which borrowers of co-operative banks enjoy by law is that they may, if they pay off the whole mortgage at any time, but they may pay it off in partial payments of $50 or any multiple of $50 at any time, and no further interest is charged on any sum so paid. Unless the mortgage is thus paid off, the monthly payments upon it are continued without diminution until the borrower's shares in the co-operative bank 'mature' and so offset the mortgage. Then payments cease, the mortgage is discharged by the corporation and the shares are cancelled.

"And so, you see, a poor man without capital and with nothing coming in but his weekly wages may easily become his own landlord, if he only knows the way."

HEARING ON PROBE BILL OF MAYOR'S ON MONDAY.

Mayor Fitzgerald's investigation bill, which says nothing at all about the manner or means of conducting it, is marked for a hearing to-morrow at 10:30 o'clock before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs at the State House. The same committee has not yet reported on the Boston investigation bills of Representative Walter Wolcser and John R. Berry, each of whom suggests a commission to be appointed by the Governor.

The brief bill suggested by the Mayor provides merely that "any commission appointed to consider the financial condition of the city of Boston under authority of the city council of said city shall have the right to summon witnesses and examine their attendance and the production of books and papers, and to administer oaths."

At the same time the committee will take up the bill of March C. Bennett, to regulate expenditures in the city of Boston. The Bennett bill provides that all public works involving an estimated cost of $2,000 or more shall be performed by contract, in writing, and that the city shall advertise for bids.

SOCIETY PAIR HAVE A GRETNA GREEN EXCURSION.

Only a few days after the rejection of Anson M. Bangs of Syracuse, N. Y., as a bidder with W. J. Oliver for the contract to complete the Panama canal, comes the news from Providence, that Mr. Bangs' nephew, Eli Gaynor Bangs, and Miss Clara Babson Woolford, both of Rockport, had there secured a marriage license yesterday.

Anson M. Bangs is now engaged upon a $100,000 government contract to build the breakwater at Sandy Bay, in the town of Rockport, and young Bangs, who is only 22 years old, has for the past six months been in Rockport, in connection with the work. He boarded at the Woolford home, and quickly fell in love with the handsome Miss Woolford, who is 23 years old, and a prominently society girl, as well as a darling horse woman.

Austin R. Woolford, the young woman's father, is also a contractor. He was first informed of the securing of the license by a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter, and was not ready to say whether he sanctioned their marriage.

Mr. Bangs' father is Myron Bangs, a Syracuse broker. The Bangs family have long been in contracting business. Anson M. Bangs was formerly a partner of Colonel John F. Gaynor.

Shoshoni, Wyo., Feb. 9.—The general store of C. H. King, one of the largest in the State, had a narrow escape from destruction by fire here. The entire town turned out, formed a bucket brigade, and after an hour's work saved the structure.

FIRST TRAIN RUN, FLORIDA TO KEYS

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9.—The first train passed yesterday from the Florida mainland to the Keys. It consisted of a locomotive and the private car of Henry M. Flagler, who was aboard with J. R. Parrott, his chief executive, and other department heads of the Florida East Coast railway.
